RAILWAY MEN VOTE ON WAGE DEMAND OF $109,000,000

170,000 Trainmen and Conductors Involved—Firemen to Meet This Week.

ENGINEERS NOT INCLUDED

UNION HEADS OVERRIDDEN

Managers Say Question Will Be Put Up to Government, Which Now Controls Railroads.

One hundred and seventy thousand conductors and brakemen on all the railroads of the United States are voting secretly this week on a proposal to submit to the roads demands for increases in wages amounting to more than $100,000,000 a year, or almost twice as much as the railway brotherhoods got through the Adamson eight-hour law. Railroad men believe there is little doubt that the proposal will be approved. The official brotherhood circular says that a strike vote will be taken "in case the proposition is turned down by the managements."

Copies of the ballots which came into the hands of railroad officials in New York yesterday showed that the men involved in the movement include 32,000 passenger men, 85,000 freight men, and 53,000 yard men. They are members of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen and the Order of Railroad Conductors. W. G. Lee is head of the trainmen and A. B. Garretson of the conductors. The 61,000 firemen, of whom W. S. Carter is the President, have not decided to come into the movement. Officials of the firemen will meet in Cleveland this week to decide on the matter.

Railroad officials see a ray of hope in the fact that Warren S. Stone, head of the Engineers, and a member of one of the advisory bodies of the Council of National Defense, is said to have refused to allow his 59,000 men to join the movement on the ground that the present was no time to agitate a big railroad strike. In his work at Washington Mr. Stone, who is perhaps the most prominent and most influential man in the railway brotherhoods following the retirement of Mr. Garretson, has been closely associated with Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor. Mr. Stone is attending the federation convention in Buffalo, and is said to be unalterably opposed to the movement set on foot by the conductors and brakemen to force a wage issue at this time.

Demand from 20 to 51 Per Cent.

According to the official circular of the Grand Lodge officers of the two brotherhoods, in the passenger service the proposed demands involve mileage rate increases of from 20.6 per cent. for conductors to 51.5 per cent. for baggagemen. It is proposed to raise the minimum monthly basis for conductors from $135 to $162.90, and for baggagemen from $82.50 to $116.40.

In through freight service the conductors ask for an increase in the mileage rate of 32½ per cent. and the brakemen for 42.7 per cent. increase. Local freight conductors demand an increase of 28.9 per cent. and brakemen 43 per cent. in their mileage rate. The demands for yard conductors and brakemen involve an increase of 44 per cent. in daily rates of pay. The general increase given by the Adamson act was about 20 per cent.

The Eastern carriers, in their rate case now being heard before the Interstate Commerce Commission in Washington, presented figures showing that in this year they had increased wages $102,000,000. Of this amount, for the Eastern roads, $36,000,000 was received by the brotherhood members under the Adamson law and the remaining $66,000,000 are increases to other classes of railroad workers.

The percentage increase to the brotherhood members is about 20 per cent., while the other employes received only 12 per cent. In the whole country railroad workers have received in the last year increases in pay running close to $200,000,000. The average annual wage of all train employes is now about $1,500, while the average wages received by the other employes, who outnumber the trainmen 4 to 1, is about $800. Eastern railroad managers who appeared before the Interstate Commerce Commission last week said that many of their unorganized employes were now underpaid considering the great rise in the cost of living, and deserved more pay. They said that the continuous large increases to the train employes made it financially impossible for the railroads to treat their other employes fairly. It was upon the item of increased wages, that a large part of the argument for increased freight rates was based. Throughout the country, the number of employes of the railroads is close to 1,700,000, of whom about 350,000 are members of the brotherhoods.

$48,000,000 for Eastern Lines.

Eastern railroad officials who examined copies of the demands yesterday estimated that the increases asked of the Eastern lines would reach $48,000,000 a year. As the payroll of the Eastern lines is 44 per cent. of the total railroad payroll of the country, the nationwide demand would call for an increase of $109,000,000 a year.

Railroad officials in New York City expressed the belief last night that the Council of National Defense, which brought about a settlement of the eight-hour controversy last March under the committee headed by Secretary Lane, would not allow the new demands to go as far as a strike vote. The vote, which is being taken this week, is pre-

Germans Halt Relief Ship and Take Her Into Swinemuende

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 13.—The Belgian relief steamer Haelen, from Montreal for Rotterdam, has been taken into Swinemuende, according to the Telegraaf.

In view of the prevailing danger of famine in the occupied district of Belgium, the capture of the Haelen increases the acuteness of the situation.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—The Belgian Relief Commission states that the steamer Haelen was taken into Swinemuende for examination, the German Government reserving the same right as the British to examine vessels. The commission expects that the vessel will shortly be released.

HEED PRESIDENT, CALL OFF STRIKES

TO CONFER AT WASHINGTON

Ask Mr. Wilson to Join in Settlement of Disputes Threatening Shipbuilding.

Special to The New York Times.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 13.—The second day of the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor furnished further evidence of the strength of Samuel Gompers, President of that body, and the very small probability that any attempt to oust him for his vigorous support of President Wilson's war policy would be made. There was only one session today, and the protracted and more or less mysterious meetings of committees furnished the chief interest, but evidence was everywhere accumulating that pacifist and Socialist opposition was going to have very little influence in this convention. Some of the most notable objectors, seeing how the prospects lay, have hurried back on the reservation, and such Socialist opposition as may occur is apparently going to display itself in an attempt to work up feeling among the delegates in favor of peace resolutions and not in any atetmpt to get control of the organization of the Federation.

The alignment of the United Mine Workers behind Mr. Gompers at the opening session was followed today by a public statement on the floor of the convention by William H. Johnston, President of the International Association of Machinists. This body, which is large and influential and had been reported opposed to the war policies of the leaders of the Federation, was brought vigorously into line by President Johnston's statement, in which he publicly authenticated rumors current on the first day.

"We are as loyal as any other organization," he said, "and we have no quarrel with Mr. Gompers or the Executive Council on the war policy. We stand behind the President of the United States for the best interests of the country and of humanity in general."

Stop Building Strikes.

In accordance with the patriotic stand of labor, measures were promptly taken by the building trades Presidents this morning to stop the strikes on construction of shipbuilding plants, which threatened to cause serious handicaps to the shipbuilding program. Twelve thousand men who had been out in different parts of the country were ordered back to work, "pending investigation and adjustment," in the words of a resolution passed by a meeting of the Presidents, which should bring about a settlement of the questions, mostly concerned with the closed shop, which have resulted in the strikes.

Meanwhile, the Presidents of the building trades are going to Washington, probably in the next day or two, for a conference with officials of the Government departments concerned, in which they have asked President Wilson to take part. The conference, according to the resolution cited above, is to the end "that grievances and wrongs of workers on Government construction operations shall be righted and full justice afforded."

Leaders of the building trades would not admit that Secretary of War Baker had threatened action unless the difficulties retarding construction were settled at once, and were at pains to point out that men working on shipbuilding and the construction of cantonments had been kept at work. Reports came from Boston late in the afternoon that the 1,500 men on strike there, whose inactivity was threatening within the next few days to nullify the efforts of several thousand others still at work, had refused to heed the order to return pending adjustment, but there was general confidence that the action of the building trades Presidents would be supported everywhere with little, if any, hesitation. This was encouraging support of President Wilson's appeal for co-operation of all forces in the nation, to the end of winning the war, made at the opening session of the convention, and the stand taken by the machinists was expected to react favorably toward the settlement of the labor difficulties on the Pacific Coast.

President Wilson tonight expressed his appreciation of the action taken by the building trades in declaring off strikes, of which he had been notified by wire. His message, addressed to President Donlin, read:

"Your telegram has cheered me very much, and I hope you will convey my sincere thanks and appreciation to those associated with you in the patriotic action of which you give me information. You may be sure there will be all possible co-operation at this end."

AMERICA GETS NEUTRAL FLEETS FOR AID OF ALLIES

Final Stage Reached in Negotiations for Over 400,000 Tons of Shipping.

ONLY TWO POINTS REMAIN

Amount of Exports and Question of Stopping Supplies to Germany Are to be Arranged.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—The United States is about to add several hundred thousand tons of shipping to the stream of ships carrying American troops and supplies to the aid of the Allies. Negotiations with the northern European neutral nations and with Japan for tonnage have reached a final stage, and the vessels obtained either will go directly into transatlantic routes or will release American ships for this service.

The European neutrals, it was learned tonight, finally had agred to turn over to the United States and the Allies ships in exchange for foodstuffs that only America can supply. The quantities of food to be furnished will be determined later, but the neutrals have the assurance of the American Government that they will receive enough to meet their necessary requirements.

Japan will sell outright to the United States a large amount of tonnage now in the Pacific in exchange for steel ship plates the Japanese are anxious to obtain to complete their merchant shipbuilding program. Only the matter of price the Japanese are to receive for their tonnage remains to be agreed on, and that, it was said tonight, would be worked out immediately.

More Than 400,000 Tons.

Negotiations with the Swedish Mission were wound up several days ago and all the mission's members, except Dr. Fridtjoff Nansen, the Chairman, have left Washington to sail for home. The amount of tonnage the United States is obtaining has not been known, but there are in American ports now more than 400,000 tons of neutral ships, which will be put into some American service. Many of the ships will ply between American ports and South America, each releasing an American or British vessel for service through the war zone.

In its negotiations, the United States dealt in a different manner with each, Norway, Sweden, Holland, and Denmark. A large part of the Norwegian merchant marine, most of which is owned in Great Britain, already is in the allied service. The Dutch insisted that none of their vessels be put into service that would take them through the war zone. Most of the Dutch ships to be turned over probably will transport to the United States wheat from Argentina and Australia and sugar from Java.

The entire Dutch fleet, it is understood, eventually will be used in transporting supplies to America and in carrying cargoes from America to Holland. The Dutch estimate that at least one-third of the fleet will be required to move foodstuffs and other American materials to Holland when the United States begins to let foodstuffs go. Some food probably will be released within the next month.

With the question of tonnage out of the way, and the American promise of sufficient foodstuffs for the neutrals obtained, there remain two important points to be cleared up. One of these is just how much food the neutrals will require, and the other is how far the neutrals may go in shipping supplies into Germany. The first will be settled on the basis of statistics supplied to the United States by the neutral Governments through the commissions they have sent here. The second presents a more difficult problem.

Question of German Supplies.

Norway and Sweden, it is said, are ready to stop the shipment to Germany of all foodstuffs supplanted by supplies from the United States, but Holland so far has declined to give assurances as to dairy supplies.

Sweden, it is said, will be asked also to discontinue the export of iron ore and certain other materials to Germany, and this Government, it is stated, is determined that no American cattle feeds shall be used by Holland so long as

550 Automobile Plants to Work for Government

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Active co-operation of the automobile industry with the Government began today with the first meeting of the Automobile Industries Committee and officials of the different departments of the army and navy at the War Industries Board. A. W. Copland, Chairman of the committee, pledged the men, material, and equipment of 550 automobile plants and 1,050 parts and accessory makers to war requirements.

So much of the vast production facilities of the automobile industry as may be needed by the Government will be devoted to war work. What percentage will be required is yet to be worked out. A large number of automobile manufacturers here in response to the call for their services in co-operation with the committee want to produce munitions in addition to their regular lines of automobiles.

BAKER REVERSES HIS CAMP POLICY

Announces That No Graduates for the Reserve Will Be Sent Home.

ALL FOR ACTIVE DUTY

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—All of the students in the second training camps who qualify for commissions will be assigned to active duty upon the close of the camps. This was formally announced today by Secretary Baker, who, declared that after a re-study of the situation and the needs of the army it would not be necessary to place any of the men on the reserve list, as orignally planned.

When the Secretary of War notified the Adjutant General's Office several weeks ago that only officers would be assigned to active duty where vacancies existed, it was estimated that fully 8,000, or half of the number, expected to be commissioned in the camps, would be placed on the reserve list.

At the present time the commissioned vacancies in the national army and the regular army number 5,724, and in addition 2,000 of these officers from the second training camps will be used in the Signal Corps. As about 16,000 men are expected to qualify in the second training camps, there will be about 8,000 officers for whom there will be no active commands. This situation still exists, but Secretary Baker, after listening to the recommendations of the General Staff and sensing the situation abroad has decided that these 8,000 men can be used advantageously in advanced military work and as additional instructors at cantonments.

There was such vigorous protest from officers at the training camps and from the public that Secretary Baker probably was induced to make concessions to this sentiment, as well as to military advice. It is understood that the Secretary was opposed to assigning reserve officers to active duty where no vacancies existed, because of the expense involved. After the protests, Secretary Baker sent for his advisers and found that few military men upheld him in his position. They pointed out to him that there was plenty of work for these officers to do, and declared that it would be a grave mistake to send them back to civilian life.

Secretary Baker today made it plain that there was sufficient work for the officers to perform, but that he was not ready to make public the character of the work to which the officers would be assigned for whom there was no commands. He was emphatic in asserting that none of the men who qualified at the second training camps would be placed on the inactive list.

The changed policy of Secretary Baker will be welcome news to the men who left civilian places and spent three months preparing for commissions. Letters which came to the officers here in immediate charge of the training camps were in some cases of a pathetic character. As a rule student officers in the second camps are older than the students who entered the first camps. Army officers said they were more mature men and more earnest as a body than those in the first camps.

In many cases they gave up good paying jobs and when they learned of the original purpose of Secretary Baker to place half of their number on the reserve list there was great dismay in all the camps. The men seemed disheartened and the officers informed Secretary Baker that it would be unwise to send these men back to civil life where they would quickly forget all that they had learned in three months.

In the next few days, or at least before the camps close on Nov. 24, Secre-

American Army Aviators Join in Raids Over Germany With Comrades of France

By The Associated Press.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Nov. 13.—American army aviators have participated in bombing raids over Germany, and have been doing observation duty at various points on the battle line.

The aviators are officers of the regular army, some of whom had been flying before the United States entered the war.

Others of them are men who have been on duty at training centres.

On the bombing raids the Americans have been carried in French planes as bombers and observers and have been gaining a vast wealth of experience, which in the future will assist them as well as the new members of the air service who are arriving or are to arrive.

Some of the Americans were in several recent raids in which bombs were dropped on German positions of military importance. In observation work the Americans have been acting both as observers and pilots, flying in French machines. This work has been done at many points, but none of the machines carrying American aviators have flown over the sector where the American troops are entrenched.

Numbers of French machines have been turned over to the Americans for their own use, but thus far none of them has been engaged in aerial fighting of importance. No casualties among the American airmen have been reported, although enemy airplanes have fired heavily upon them.

The allied officers are enthusiastic over the work of the young fliers and are of the unanimous opinion that they are combining the daring of the British fliers and the technique of the French airmen. All the operations in which the Americans took part have in a measure been in the nature of instruction.

FRENCH CABINET FORCED TO RESIGN; WAR COUNCIL AND SCANDALS DEBATED; GERMANS CROSS THE LOWER PIAVE

SCANDALS THE FINAL ISSUE

WAR COUNCIL ATTACKED

SOCIALISTS QUIT PREMIER

PARIS, Nov. 13.—The Painlevé Ministry resigned tonight, following its defeat in the Chamber of Deputies by a vote of 277 to 186 after a prolonged debate on the new Allied War Council and other questions. The Socialists refused to support the Government.

After the Government had obtained a restricted but sufficient majority on the question of confidence in its military and diplomatic policy, a determined attempt was made to bring on a discussion of current scandals. Including the accusations of L'Action Française regarding a royalist plot and against former Minister of the Interior Malvy, but Premier Painlevé demanded a postponement of the interpellations until Nov. 30, when the inter-allied conference would be finished.

A postponement was then made a question of confidence, and the Chamber, by a majority of 91, in which the Right joined the Cabinet's opponents, refused to acquiesce in the Premier's demand. The Ministers then left the Chamber and went to the Elysée Palace and resigned.

Debate on Allies' Plans.

At the opening of the debate Premier Painlevé read a defense of the new War Council, after which he said that he accepted discussion of the Government's diplomatic and military, but not interior, policy. The question of the current scandals being thus barred, Abel Ferry condemned the War Council as merely an interallied secretarial bureau.

Deputy Millerand advocated the appointment of a Generalissimo for the Allies. The Premier replied:

"Even if we could have such a Generalissimo, disposing all the allied troops at his fancy, he would need a permanent interallied General Staff. Why demand the impossible and not accept the possible?"

"Has the present Government the confidence of the Chamber? Has it the necessary authority to represent France at the coming allied conference?"

The Government then received a vote of confidence, 250 to 192, a majority of 58, but about 100 members, nearly all of whom were Socialists, abstained from voting. On the subsequent vote, when the Government was defeated, M. Renaudel announced that the Socialists could not support the Cabinet.

Premier's Defense of War Council.

Premier Painlevé, in his speech defending the Inter Allied War Committee, characterized it as a "superior war council." His declaration was read in both the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies.

"We do not doubt that the United States, whose troops have been summoned to fight upon this front, will give their adhesion to this council," said he. "Negotiations concerning the other fronts will ultimately be carried on with Russia and Japan.

"The object of the council is not to direct the details of military operations, but to define the general war policy and the general plans of the Allies, adapting them to the resources and means of which they dispose so as to assure the strongest result possible.

"The council comprises two representatives of each Government. Normally it will meet in France, at least once a month. It rests upon an interallied permanent staff, which forms at the same time its central organ of information and its technical adviser. The decisions of such a council are not tainted by any particularism, as they embrace the battlefields as a whole. They will have to be ratified by the respective Governments.

"We have already heard the objection that it is a united command we need, not a consultative committee. All plans are open to criticism, and I am far from saying that the step we have taken is the last in the progress to be accomplished, but it is wise to bring into being what is possible instead of waiting for months to obtain something better."

Defends Staff as Necessity.

M. Painlevé said that if a single supreme command some day were possible it would have the need of precisely such an inter-allied staff as would be created now by the superior war council. Possibly the superior war council might fulfill its functions so that it would in fact arrive at unity of command. It would be better to have the thing than the name.

The Premier said the British and French Commanders in Chief had come

UnityWon Teutons' Victories, Says Emperor Charles; Charges Allies Offered Austria Peace; London Denies

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 13.—According to the Cologne Volkszeitung, Emperor Charles of Austria-Hungary, referring to the Austro-German Alliance, declared that the Central Powers were enabled to defeat the efforts of the world in arms during thirty-nine months of war because they were united.

"Several times during the war," said he, "French and British statesmen offered Austria handsome compensations if she would make separate peace."

The Emperor asserted that these efforts undoubtedly had had considerable effect upon certain nationalities and parties in Austria-Hungary. But, he added, the Hapsburg and Hohenzollern houses were more closely united than ever, and the Venetian offensive offered a good lesson as to what their peace policy should be.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—Reuter's is officially authorized to issue a categorical denial that British statesmen have approached Austria with a promise of compensations if she would make separate peace.

PETROGRAD BATTLE IS STILL IN DOUBT

Stockholm and Copenhagen Hear Government Forces Have Occupied Capital.

BOLSHEVIKI CLAIM VICTORY

Send Out Wireless Announcement That Kerensky Is in Flight.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—Flatly contradictory assertions concerning the situation in and around Petrograd received by wireless from Bolsheviki leaders in the Russian capital and by cabled press dispatches from Stockholm and Copenhagen leave in doubt whether Kerensky's army has been victorious or whether it has suffered a severe repulse at the hands of the rebels.

According to messages sent out by the latter, the Government troops under the Premier and General Korniloff are in flight, and efforts are being made to capture Kerensky. The Scandinavian capitals hear that the Bolsheviki have been defeated, and that Korniloff and his troops have entered Petrograd.

Presumably the wirelessed news is the latest sent out, and the Bolsheviki forces still control the city. This reached here about noon, and since that hour nothing further has been received. The announcement of the rebel victory is in the form of proclamations. The first is worded as follows:

> Yesterday after bitter fighting near Tsarskoe-Selo the revolutionary army completely defeated the counter-revolutionary forces of Kerensky and Korniloff. In the name of the Revolutionary Government I order opposition to all enemies of the revolutionary democracy and the taking of all measures necessary to effect the capture of Kerensky. I also forbid similar adventures which are endangering the success of the revolution and the triumph of the revolutionary army.
> (Signed) MOURAVIEFF,

The other proclamation says that history will record the night of Nov. 12. It reads:

> The attempt of Kerensky to move counter-revolutionary forces against the capital of the revolution has received a decisive reply. Kerensky is retiring, and we are taking the offensive. The soldiers, sailors, and workmen in Petrograd know how to impose and will impose with arms in their hands their will and the power of the democracy.
>
> The bourgeoisie has endeavored to separate the army from the revolution. Kerensky has attempted to break it by the violence of Cossackdom. Both efforts have failed. The workmen's and peasants' great conception of the supremacy of the democracy has united the ranks of he army and has steeled its will. The whole country will see that the authority of the Soldiers' and Workmen's Delegates is not a passing phrase, but is an unchangeable fact, denoting the supremacy of the workmen, soldiers, and peasants.
>
> The opposition to Kerensky is the opposition to the landlords, the bourgeois, and Korniloff. The opposition to Kerensky is also the affirmation of the people's right to peace, free life, the land, bread and power.
>
> The Pulkoff detachment by its gallant blow is affirming the cause of the revolution, of the workmen and peasants. There is no return to the past. We have still to fight, to conquer obstacles and to sacrifice ourselves, but the way is now opened and victory is certain.
>
> Revolutionary Russia and the authority of the Soldiers' and Workmen's Delegates have the right to be proud of the Pulkoff detachment, acting under the command of Colonel Walden. Let us ever remember the fallen and glorify the fighters, the revolutionary soldiers and officers, who have remained loyal to the people. Long live the revolutionary, democratic and Socialistic Russia.
>
> (Signed) TROTZKY.

Reports of Kerensky Victory.

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 13.—General Korniloff has entered Petrograd, where the entire garrison except the sailors went over to his side, according to a Petrograd dispatch to the Social Demokraten under Monday's date.

"There was sanguinary fighting on the Nevsky Prospekt, says the dispatch, and the Bolsheviki failed to hold even the workingmen's quarter of the city.

Telegrams received from Moscow and Southern Russia announce that the country is in complete control of the Cossacks who acknowledge the leadership of Kerensky

Another message says that Premier Kerensky announces that the seat of government will be removed to Moscow. Generals Korniloff and Kaledines have issued from Novo Tcherkask, headquarters of the Don Cossacks, a proc-

ROME LACKING DEFIANT SPIRIT

CRITICAL ATTITUDE SHOWN

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Nov. 13.—To understand the present situation in Italy it is necessary to consider three essential facts:

The first is geographical. The remark is attributed to Napoleon: "Italy is a wonderful country, but too long." From Turin to Naples and back is as long a trip for a Caproni as from Turin to London.

The second fact is racial and dynastic. The Kingdom of Italy is only fifty years old, composed of units widely separated and differing in race and historic antecedents.

Third, there is a kingdom within a kingdom. The Vatican is in Italy, but not of it. It is necessary to be careful on this delicate ground, where so much controversy is raging; but no one can grasp the present condition without realizing that in Italy there occupy the same ground two separate and inherently antagonistic powers—one spiritual with the temporal in retrospect and prospect, and the other purely temporal. Their subjects are the same, for practically all Italy is Catholic. History has bequeathed this condition.

If all Italy had the spirit of Milan no question would arise as to its power of resistance to the German invasion or a separate peace. The capital of Lombardy is the chief jewel in the crown of the Italian Kingdom. Not even in America does city pride exist more strongly than in Milan.

When I arrived three days ago I found everywhere deep disappointment that the Isonzo line should have given way and dread of the possible consequences; but there was neither panic nor indifference. I attended service at the great Cathedral. On every face was written anxiety, but also earnestness and determination. An enterprising and energetic people have built a fine city and are filled with zeal for future efforts. They watch with anxious eyes the approaching Germanic tide from the Venetian plain, realizing also the possibilities of new eruptions from the Cadore and the Trentino. Tears gather in their eyes as they contemplate the city which they have been building with such labor and love so well; but there is no white feather in Milan. The Milanese will die, if necessary, in the proud belief that their city is the centre of Italy's will to war.

Many "Knockers" in Rome.

Rome is a different story. There is no danger here of actual German murder and pillage. The censorship is strict, and the masses are ignorant of the seriousness of the northern situation. Furthermore, Rome lives much in the past, and her climate is relaxing. Rome has a great many "knockers." There are circles which take pride in holding "well balanced" views. From such sources flows a constant stream of cynical sanity which is destructive of the war spirit. Only in the hour of spiritual frenzy will men make the sacrifices imposed by the defense of the country.

In Rome one encounters few fine enthusiasms. The German invasion is discussed in an entirely different temper from that which one meets in Milan. Warm-blooded optimism is non-existent. There is polite appreciation of America's response to Italy's needs.

Baron Sonnino by common consent is Italy's leading figure. He is of Jewish origin, and English on his mother's side. I had introductions to a family in Rome which is on intimate terms with him and hoped to get an interview, but found that it was quite as impossible as interviewing the Lama of Tibet. He has never once talked to a newspaper man, even privately, and is the most aloof of all the world's statesmen. Sonnino's brilliant mind illuminates everything within a certain radius, but the circle on which he throws its light is small.

It is reported that the Swiss are heavily mobilized on the Italian frontier. The reason given by a well-informed authority is this: In previous wars Italian and Austrian troops have not been over-scrupulous about territorial boundaries. Switzerland is determined in the present circumstances that there shall not be the smallest violation of her neutrality.

Italians and Austro-Germans in Fighting Contact Along the Lower Reaches.

ROME, Nov. 13.—The Austro-Germans, with the aid of large boats, have effected a lodgment on the west bank of the Piave near Zenson, on the southern reaches of the river, having established a bridgehead near that town, says the Italian official report. It is stated that the Teutons have been driven back toward the stream.

Attacks along the Asiago plateau, on the Trentino front, have been repulsed by the Italians, according to the statement, which follows:

The communication reads:

> During the night of Sunday the enemy, with renewed and greater efforts, attempted to attack the Monte Gallio-Longara-Meletta di Gallio front on the Asiago Plateau. In a counterattack, following a desperate struggle, the enemy was repused and suffered very serious losses. Well supported by artillery of all calibers, the Ninth Infantry Regiment of the Regina Brigade and the Verona Alpine Battalion distinguished themselves by their bravery. Yesterday afternoon intense enemy movements, which were the prelude to a new attack, were thwarted effectually and stopped by our artillery.
>
> Near Canove, west of Asiago, our sixteenth storming detachment attacked an enemy detachment and through its capture released some of our men who had been made prisoners in previous actions.
>
> From the Brenta to the lower Piave the enemy armies, which in the last days had only been hindered in their advance by rearguard actions and stopped by interruptions on the highways, have occupied territory evacuated by us and are now in contact with our line.
>
> With the aid of large boats enemy groups succeeded at dawn at Monte San Dona di Piave, (about twenty-three miles northeast of Venice, in crossing to the right (west) bank of the river at Zenson and in establishing a bridgehead. Promptly faced by our troops they were counterattacked and driven back toward the river bank.
>
> Yesterday, in spite of unfavorable atmospheric conditions, a large number of our aviators bombarded enemy bivouacs on the left bank of the Piave and turned machine gun fire at a low altitude on troops marching along the road on the bank of the river.

BERLIN, Nov. 13, (via London.)—Fonzaso and Monte Longara have been captured by the Austro-German troops invading northern Italy, says the German War Office.

The text of the afternoon statement reads:

> Troops advancing in the mountains between the Sugana and the Cismone valleys took by storm the Leone work on the Casoni di Campo and the armored fort on the Casoni di Lena. Fonzaso is in our possession.
>
> On the lower Piave there has been an increase in the artillery fire.

The supplementary report from General Headquarters this evening says:

Diaz Asks the Press to Co-operate.

By The Associated Press.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ITALIAN ARMY, Monday, Nov. 12.—(Delayed)—General Diaz, the new chief of the General Staff, a man of sturdy build and with a manner vibrating with energy and reserve force, tonight received the correspondents attached to headquarters. Referring to the presence of those representing the press of Italy and the allied countries, the General said he felt sure of their co-operation at the present solemn moment, adding:—

"I do not doubt that all will aid in the common end of enlightening and elevating the public mind so that all will be animated toward that victorious result to which our country looks forward, even in the difficult and terrible experiences of the present day."

A heavy and continuous bombardment is proceeding along the lower Piave River, marking the opening stages of extensive operations on this new line. Whether a general engagement is imminent depends largely upon the enemy, as the Italians are now intrenched behind the river and adopting defensive tactics, with the stream and their re-established forces checking the extension of the Austro-German offensive.

The engagements thus far have consisted of skirmishes at detached points, although the shelling extends almost uninterruptedly for forty miles along the lower Piave. The crash of some enemy heavy guns is now heard, showing that the Austrians and Germans have been able to bring up a few of these monster pieces.

No longer is a secret made of the fact that the Piave is the line of defense upon which the supreme command has been concentrating its energies for the last ten days. The upper end of this line joins the Trentino front, making virtually one unified front sweeping in a huge arc from Lago di Garda to the mouth of the Piave, near Venice.

Precautionary measures to protect Venice continue, lest the enemy, whose long-range guns are not far off, should attempt to bombard the city. The Palace of the Doges has been covered with sandbags, and the delicate arched façade has been shored with heavy timbers. The Campanile has sandbags for forty feet around the base. The Grand Canal is filled with gondolas, which are being used for transportation purposes.

Italians Retake Gallio.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Monday, Nov. 12, (Delayed.)—The enemy is very active on the Trentino front. Evidently the Austrians hope to obtain definite gains before severe Winter weather sets in. The Italian troops, however, are in perfect condition and ready to meet the enemy.

Powerful Austrian groups, aided by atmospheric conditions, were able to penetrate the region near Gallio, which is the centre of communications with the Sette Comuni Plateau, thus threatening the Italian left wing and the roads leading to Asiago. Italian contingents frustrated this movement, repulsing the enemy forces. In encounters at Gallio the Italians showed wonderful daring and spirit. After withstanding the enemy's fire they counterattacked the Austrians with such fury that they reconquered their lost positions, driving the foe from the village.

CADORNA NOT ON COUNCIL.

Declines Offer to Represent Italy as War Board Member.

PARIS, Nov. 13.—The Temps correspondent on the Italian frontier says that General Cadorna, the former Commander in Chief, has declined the offer to represent Italy on the Inter-Allied Military Committee.

REPORT GERMAN ATROCITIES.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Monday, Nov. 12, (Delayed.)—When the Germans first invaded the Venetian plains it seemed as if they had changed their tactics and were doing everything to conciliate the population left in the villages evacuated by the Italian troops. Now, however, convinced that all their blandishments are unavailing and that the inhabitants remain firmly loyal, they are reported to be committing the same atrocities as in Belgium.

They have entered peaceful villages, it is said, breaking into the peasants' homes, where only women, children, and old men are left, and after sacking the houses and attacking the women, then kill the children before their mothers' eyes and set fire to the villages. It is said that many inhabitants have perished in such conflagrations, having been wounded by the invaders and being unable to escape from their blazing dwellings.

Another of their reported practices is to tie Italian prisoners in lines before them, thinking thus to prevent the Italian troops from firing upon them.

It has now been proved that enemy officers dressed in Italian uniforms circulated among the Italian troops at the beginning of the Austro-German drive. These men spoke the Venetian and Piedmontese dialects perfectly, having taken courses at the Military Academy in Turin. In the first phase of the attack they ordered the abandonment of important posts, cut telephone wires, and cried in Italian,' "Everybody for himself!"

Another German trick was the falsification of Italian newspapers. On Oct. 20, in a given sector of the front, there were distributed by the thousand what purported to be copies of the Giornale d'Italia and the Corrieres della Sera, perfectly imitated in size and printing. The letterpress contained terrifying descriptions of revolutionary disorders in Naples, strikes in Florence, revolts in Sicily and Apulia, of hundreds of dead in Liguria, and thousands in Tuscany, while English infantry were represented as having fired on women and children, also French cavalry as having trodden the bodies of revolutionists under their horses' hoofs. All this was described with such details and plausibility that it was enough to upset the minds of ignorant peasants. Investigations are being made to discover by what means these false copies reached the trenches.

BAKER SEES DANGER IN 'FRATERNIZING' FOES

Recognizes New Allied Difficulties in 'Political Offensives' in Russia and Italy.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—The effect of Germany's "political offensives" against Russia and Italy upon the task ahead of the Allies is recognized in Secretary Baker's weekly review of military operations issued today by the War Department.

"The close interrelation of events on all fronts cannot too frequently be emphasized," says the review. "The political situation in Russia made it possible for the enemy to detach important contingents in the east which were speedily transported to the Italian front.

"It is not unlikely that, before initiating their powerful drive against the Italian forces, the enemy made painstaking and systematic attempts to undermine the morale of the Italian troops, with a view to breaking down their resisting power. This carefully planned political offensive, conducted preparatory to their military offensive, reveals clearly the present methods of the Germans.

"Surveying the broader aspects of the European situation today, we find that the enemy in the east is confining his efforts to political propaganda. Along the Italian sector he has recently made desperate attempts to secure a decision by means of a politico-military drive. In the west, while attempting to sap the fighting strength of the belligerent peoples, the enemy has now been compelled to act on the defensive and is being slowly but surely driven back.

"It should be borne in mind, however, that the further disintegration of the Russian forces will mean that the Germans will be able to thin out their line along this front, which will thus automatically contribute to the stiffening of their resistance in the west, as well as render available added contingents to take part in the engagements now proceeding in Italy.

Allied Gains in the West.

"During the week just closed, both the British and French were able to record significant tactical gains, the culmination of a long series of powerfully driven offensives.

"With Passchendaele securely in British hands, the first stage of the operations begun during the last week of September has been brought to a successful conclusion.

"The French counterpart of the British success took place north of the Aisne. Here the retreat of the enemy anticipated last week was carried out. The pressure of the French offensive, which has grown slowly and methodically in volume and intensity, reached a climax when by the recent French advance in this sector they were enabled to enfilade the German lines along the crest of the Chemin des Dames.

"For the last three years the presence of the enemy on this ridge had been a source of anxiety to the French. To dislodge them was a principal objective of the repeated offensives developed by General Pétain since last April. The sudden forced evacuation of some forty square miles of the most important terrain in this sector of the western front has been the tangible result achieved.

"The importance of this successful French advance must not be overlooked. It means more than a mere gain of so many square miles of territory; it means the penetration of the powerfully fortified Siegfried line, hitherto considered by the enemy impregnable, and pushes back his main defensive position to within five miles of the fortress of Laon, the major objective.

"In the sector where a small detachment of our troops had taken up their places in the trenches as a part of their training, the enemy (as is customary in trench warfare when fresh troops are believed to have taken places in front-line trenches) for reconnaissance purposes executed a well-planned raid and succeeded in temporarily penetrating the short segment of the line held by our forces, inflicting a few casualties and taking prisoners.

"A unit of our artillery, also in the course of its training, came in contact with the enemy and acquitted itself very creditably in this first encounter.

"In Italy the situation is developing as normally as can be expected under the circumstances. For the time being it would be of little avail to endeavor to seek for the contributing causes of the successes gained by the Austro-German forces, which have resulted in their incursion into Italy.

Italian Retreat More Orderly.

"The Italian retreat, somewhat confused in its earlier stages, has now become more orderly, and the retirement of the main forces of the Italian armies during the week continued uninterrupted.

"The line of the Tagliamento River was held by the Italians long enough to insure the safe retirement of large bodies of troops. This line has now been abandoned, and the enemy, penetrating the Venetian plain, has reached the Livenza.

"The Italians are continuing their efforts to contain the advancing Austro-German forces.

"The morale of the armies, shaken by the recent events, is being rapidly restored. Allied reinforcements have now formed a junction with the Italians. The pressure of the enemy is no greater.

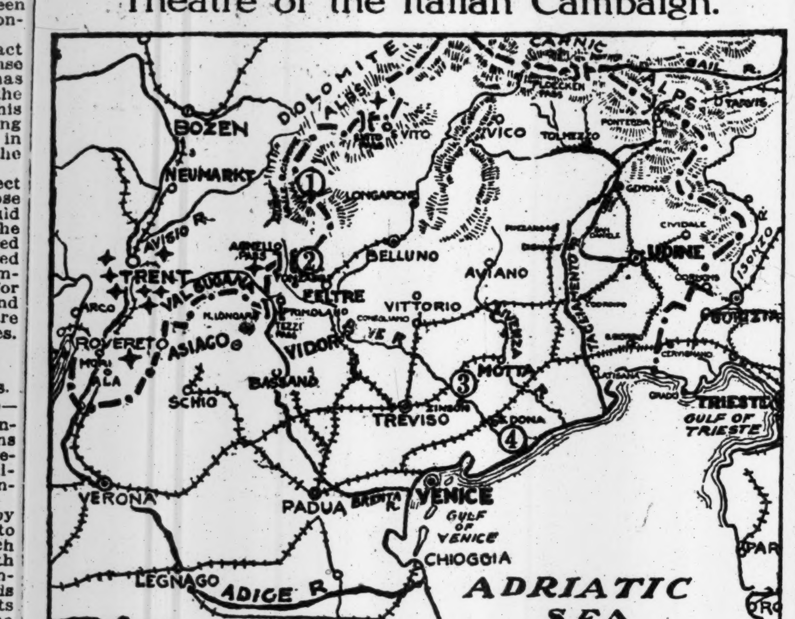
"The enemy, instead of attacking, has renewed his efforts to fraternize with the Russians. Owing to the involved political situation and the fresh outbreaks of the extremist elements, it is probable that these may have a marked influence on the general strategy of the war, which we must be prepared to meet."

Theatre of the Italian Campaign.



Crossing the Piave River near San Dona (4) yesterday the Austro-Germans established a bridgehead on the west bank near Zinson (3), although Rome reports that they were driven back to the edge of the stream. The invaders pushed westward from Feltre, capturing Fonzaso (2,) and also took mountain strongholds east of the Valle di Cismone, (1.)

OPTIMISM IN WASHINGTON.

French War Office Statement Says Piave Line Is Solidly Held.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—The battle of the Piave has begun along a ninety-mile front in northern Italy, with every prospect of going down into history as one of the greatest the world has ever seen.

The battle front extends from the Adriatic across the Venetian plains, along the banks of the Piave River to Feltre, which is sixty-five miles from the seacoast and westward across the mountains to the Sette Comuni, a distance of twenty-five miles. Along the plains section of the battle front, from Vidor to the sea, forty-one miles, the two armies are engaged in a heavy and continuous bombardment, while the mountain links of the line are feeling the pressure of stubborn engagements at many points.

The actual distance from Zenson, on the lower Piave, where the Austro-German forces crossed that river with the aid of large boats, only to be driven back to the western edge of the stream by a prompt Italian counterattack, to Monte Longara, in the Sette Comuni, of which Berlin reports the capture, is 119 kilometers (73.94 miles.) Between these points the Italian Army is in position and holding its line, while the different columns of the main Austro-German forces are now taking the place of the advanced guard on the east bank of the Piave, and brisk artillery firing is proceeding.

Close comparison of the latest advices from Rome and Berlin indicate that the general delineation of the main battle line is now as follows: San Dona di Piave to Zenson to Ponte di Piave to Susegana to Vidor to Feltre to Fonzoso to Casoni di Campo to Monte Meletta to Monte Longara to the vicinity of Asiago in the Sette Comuni. At six of these points the Austro-German forces are west of the Piave—Zenson, Feltre, Fonzaso, Casoni di Campo, Monte Meletta, and Monte Longara. But this does not mean that the German forces have forced a crossing of the Piave.

Only at one point does it appear that the Germans have actually crossed the river, and that point is Zenson, in the bend of the river between San Dona di Piave and Ponte Piave. Both these are railroad crossings. Zenson is twenty-three kilometers (14.29 miles) from the shores of the Adriatic, or little more than one-third of the distance between the sea and the foothills of the mountains.

Piave Forced at Only One Point.

While the German forces are across the Piave at the five other points named, no crossing of that stream was required to gain those positions, because they were approached from routes west of the great bend of the Piave near Feltre.

There is no reference in Berlin reports to the crossing of the lower Piave at Zenson, but the Italian admission that such a crossing was made, and that the Germans were driven back, is sufficient evidence on which to base the statement that at a point within 30 kilometers, (18.64 miles,) as the crow flies, from Venice, the invaders did actually succeed in crossing the lower Piave.

Ability of the Germans to drive their entering wedge across the river at this point would place them in positions to threaten the Italian forces defending the railroad crossing to the north at Ponte di Piave and the lower rail crossing at San Dona di Piave, and endeavor to throw out columns toward San Biagio di Callalta on the rail route from the Piave to the important town of Treviso, which commands the approach to Venice from the north as well as toward Méolo on the rail route from San Dona di Piave to Venice.

In the mountain region, where the Germans are concentrating their efforts upon the Feltre-Asiago-Bassano-Vidor quadrilateral, the reports from Berlin lay claim to the advance of the Germans to four points, about equally distant from one another along the northwestern face of this quadrilateral. They claim to have taken Fonzaso. This is a point about five and a half miles due west of Feltre. Fonzaso is on the River Cismone, about eight miles north of Cismone, where the river of that name flows into the Brenta. The Berlin reports say that the Austro-German forces have taken two fortified positions—Casoni di Campo and Casoni di Lena—in the heights between the Cismone and Sugana Valleys. Casoni di Campo is one of the fortified points of defense overlooking the valley of the upper Brenta from the east. Monte Meletta, which the invaders claim to have captured, is in the Sette Comuni, southwest of Casoni di Campo, and not far from Monte Longara. Both of these mountains overlook Asiago from the northeast.

Italians Appear to Hold Lines.

Taking the report as a whole, the Italian Army appears to be making a gallant stand along its new line, and to be holding the line pretty firmly. A statement prepared by the French War Office, made public here tonight, asserts that "the Germans have greatly exaggerated" the appearance of the Italian defeat, and that the "line of the Piave is actually solidly held." This statement was given out tonight by the Committee on Public Information. It deals with operations on the Italian front, and was prepared by the French War Office and furnished for publication through the courtesy of the French Embassy. The statement says in part:

"The Germans have greatly exaggerated the importance of the Italian defeat. In reality the Italian armies are far from being defeated. The Second army only has seriously suffered.

"The line of the Piave is actually solidly held. The Italian General Staff is awaiting the enemy forces. These operations, having shortened the front, allow of better means of resistance.

"The English and French armies are in reserve behind. The morale of the army has been strengthened and is becoming excellent. The country, at first strongly shaken, is becoming more settled as the political parties are getting more united."

ALCEDO MEN TALKED TO U-BOAT'S CAPTAIN

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 13.—The Chicago Daily News this afternoon prints the following special cable dispatch from its representative in France, A. R. Decker, dated from "A French Seaport, Nov. 10," regarding the torpedoing of the American patrol boat, Alcedo, when twenty-one men were lost, including twelve from New York and vicinity:

"Details are now available of the torpedoing of the Alcedo, an American armed yacht on patrol duty off the French coast. It occurred at 1:54 A. M., Tuesday, Nov. 6, and before 2 o'clock the vessel sank. One American officer and twenty American sailors perished. Both regular and reserve officers and men conducted themselves so coolly and bravely that one is filled with pride at realizing that the splendid traditions of the American Navy were fully upheld.

"The morning was misty with white squalls and the sudden changes to clear, windy weather which mark this region. The Alcedo was navigating off the coast, when abruptly through a rift in the clouds the officers and men on the bridge saw the silhouette of a submarine plainly visible in a ray of moonlight. At the same time they saw the wake of a torpedo rushing along apparently not far below the surface and coming at high speed directly toward the port bow of the Alcedo.

"Ensign ——— of Philadelphia, who was on duty, immediately perceived the U-boat and sounded to general quarters, the alarm getting the men out of their bunks and well started to the deck, which doubtless saved many lives. The Lieutenant Commander on the bridge, who coolly watched the attack, said in speaking of the sinking:

"'I saw the U-boat and the torpedo. We were hit on the port side, near the bow, and the whole forward part of the Alcedo crumpled up like a matchbox in one's hand. We started to sink and were going down so fast that I ordered the ship to be abandoned as rapidly as possible. All got off except those hurt in the explosion. The Alcedo sank in about four minutes. There was little suction. One section of the survivors I ordered to row to the shore, land, and, if possible, send help out to us. We remained to look after the remainder of the crew and then proceeded toward the shore.

"'Late in the afternoon, when we were near land, an airplane signaled our presence to some French torpedo boats, which picked us up and brought us to port. Some of the men were in bad shape when the torepdo boats rescued us.

"One of the 'crew'—that is, engine room men—a stoker, told me his experience. He was visibly nervous from the shock and exhausted from the long grueling row to shore.

"'I was down in the bunkers on top of a coal pile,' said the stoker, 'when I heard a muffled explosion, which made the Alcedo tremble. It started the coal sliding, and almost immediately a rush of cold salt water came through a gap in the side and washed me right through the bunker room. I stumbled to my feet and climbed up an iron ladder to the top side as quickly as possible. On the deck I found a lifebelt, and as I took hold of one end of it another fellow grabbed the other end. It was no time to argue for its possession, and so I let the sailor have the belt. I ran to the stern and, diving overboard, swam to a dory. This was well filled, but I was able to get aboard.

"'Collier, one of our firemen, was the real hero of the day. He secured the engine and opened the safety valve, thus preventing the boilers from exploding as well as preventing the boys from being caught in the propeller blades. Collier dived over the side and swam to our dory, which by this time was jammed, having twenty-one men on board. Fortunately it was calm. Three dories full of water were floating not far away and one of our men volunteered to bail them out. He took a bailer from our boat and swam to the three dories, which seemed stuck together. He got them apart and holding on with one hand bailed out one boat until he could stand in it. He then climbed in and called for us to come over and help. Collier and a few others did so, finished bailing out the boat and took in some of our party, besides picking up some fellows swimming around. We then had twenty-eight men in our two boats.'

"The wireless man on watch had a bad time of it before he could get communication established. The torpedo blew his cabin to pieces and he was thrown high in the air. The 'sparker' landed against a stanchion, many yards away. A rib was broken, his back was wrenched, and he almost bit his tongue in two. Nevertheless, after regaining consciousness, he tried to start the motor, until he saw that the apparatus had been smashed, and then he jumped into the water and swam to a raft, which was already crowded. So he swam further, until he came to a boat, the crew of which picked him up.

"One sailor spoke of having seen the body of the torpedo intact floating alongside. He was thinking of jumping overboard and using it as a life raft, but changed his mind in favor of a boat some distance away.

"A regular bluejacket told me his story in the Y. M. C. A. restaurant, while his mates from other ships listened, spellbound. We all forgot to eat during the tale, though the good American food of the Astor-Taylor Y. M. C. A. restaurant is not to be disdained.

"'I was on deck,' said the bluejacket, 'when general quarters sounded. The torpedo hit us very soon afterward, in less than a minute, and exploded, but not loudly. There was a little excitement because some of the boats had been damaged by explosion. Most of the boys got away on rafts. The torpedo hit squarely in the quarters of the port watch. Only two of our shipmates were left out of the gun crew. The others must have been killed immediately.

"'The Captain's secretary ran down into the cabin and came back with the ship's papers, which he stowed in his blouse, jumped overboard, and supported himself on a tank nearby. There was a sailor in the water who was weakening fast and calling for help. Bellaty got him and supported both himself and the sailor. They were in the water an hour and a half, until they were picked up by the Captain's boat.

"'Mate Doyle lowered the whaleboat single handed and launched it safely. He picked up many men besides unnesting some dories. In some way the boats got separated. I saw the ship was going and so I jumped for it, and swam hard away from the side. In a few seconds the Alcedo sank, its sirens shrieking until the last, like a lost soul. One of the dories picked me up. Our dory also picked up several of my shipmates.

"'One big fellow came splashing toward us. We called out "Who is that coming?" "Kaiser Bill," the swimmer replied. Sure enaough, it was a shipmate named Kaiser, whom we nicknamed Kaiser Bill.

"'We hauled Bill into our boat and started to row. Right in the middle of the débris the U-boat approached. It was a small type submarine with a clipper bow and a strong wireless outfit rigged on a solid mast. The Captain of the U-boat called out through his megaphone:

"'"What ship iss dat?"

"'We replied: "Alcedo."

"'"What's your cargo?"

"'"We are light," some one replied.

"'"Where were you bound for?"

"'"New York," some sailor said.

"'The U-boat commander seemed to doubt and asked many question in good English, but with a decided Teuton accent. He kept returning every few minutes and we rowed away. He finally gave us our course to the nearest land and departed.

"'Needless to say we were relieved when daylight came. We were pretty tired, cold and hungry. The other boats were not in sight We had left them exploring the wreckage for our shipmates, while we tried to make shore to get help. Toward 2 o'clock in the afternoon we picked up a lighthouse, but were too exhausted to continue rowing. Luckily, one of those brown-sailed sardine fishing boats sighted us and came alongside. The fishermen took us into a typical Brittany village. We will never forget the welcome those fishermen and fisherwomen gave us. They even gave us their stockings.'

"Probably the U-boat which sank the Alcedo was resting on the surface after having finished charging its batteries when the Alcedo popped out of the night. It was a case of sinking the Alcedo or being itself sunk. It used the torpedo which was probably intended to sink a fat merchant ship."

SENDING LUXBURG HOME.

Argentine Authorities to Watch Him Closely Until He Starts.

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, Nov. 13.—The Argentine Government sent a destroyer to the island of Martin Garcia and brought here today Count von Luxburg, the expelled German Minister, so that he might embark on a Dutch steamship for Amsterdam. The ex-Minister will be kept under strict surveillance by the authorities until he leaves the country.

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Nov. 13.—The Dutch steamship on which Count von Luxburg, the former German Minister to Argentina, has engaged passage back to Europe was stopped on her voyage between Rio Janeiro and Montevideo by a British warship. British sailors went on board the vessel, and, after examining the documents, seized some of them.

The Uruguayan Government has forbidden the passengers on the Dutch vessel to debark at Montevideo. Among those on board are the Cuban Minister to Argentina and the Cuban Minister to Uruguay. These diplomats have protested against the Government's action.

Count Karl von Luxburg, after being handed his passports by the Argentine Government, was taken to the detention camp on the island of Martin Garcia where he arrived Oct. 12.

TORPEDO KILLS FIVE; SINKS AMERICAN SHIP

Unseen Submarine Destroys the D. N. Luckenbach, from New York, Off France.

TWO DAYS IN OPEN BOATS

The first news of the sinking of the American steamship D. N. Luckenbach on Oct. 27 off the French coast, with the loss of five of her crew, was brought to an Atlantic port yesterday by Captain Gus Smith and twenty-three survivors of the crew, who arrived on a Danish steamship which rescued them from their lifeboats after they had been battling with the wind and sea for forty-eight hours.

Details of the torpedoing of the steamship were given by the Captain to the agents of the Luckenbach Steamship Company. At noon on Oct. 27 the D. N. Luckenbach was steaming about 11 knots, he said, when she was struck by a torpedo on the starboard side abaft the funnel. The torpedo was launched from an unseen submarine. The explosion presumably killed five members of the engine room crew outright, as they were not seen again. The steamship foundered stern first in about twenty minutes.

The five men killed were Fred Olsen, second assistant engineer, a naturalized Norwegian, whose next of kin is George Olsen, father, of Frederickstad, Norway; A. Pena, third assistant engineer, whose wife lives at 863 East Thirty-third Street, Brooklyn; Domois Chromis, fireman; Bemis Evangelous, oiler, and Peter Vallianos, oiler.

There was a rough sea running, with a strong breeze, which made it difficult to launch the lifeboats and get them clear away from the ship's side. The Captain said that there were plenty of provisions and water in the boats, but the men suffered much from exposure during the two days before they were picked up by the Danish steamship.

The reason no report of the torpedoing was received previously was that the survivors were picked up by a west-bound steamship and there was no opportunity to communicate the news to an American or British warship. Captains of merchant vessels have strict orders not to use their wireless apparatus at sea as the messages could be picked up by enemy submarines.

The D. N. Luckenbach left New York on Oct. 13 with 3,000 tons of cargo for the Allies, which went down with the ship. She was an iron single screw steamship of 2,929 gross tonnage, 330 feet 2 inches long and of 38 feet 2 inches beam and 20 feet 2 inches depth of hold. She was built at Newcastle on Tyne in 1883 as the Lillburn Tower for the China trade and later became the Spanish steamship Pedro. She was captured in the Spanish-American war and her name was changed to Hector. After her purchase by the Luckenbach Company the vessel was renamed D. N. Luckenbach.

Two other vessels owned by the same company have had encounters recently with German submarines. The Lewis Luckenbach was torpedoed and sunk early in October with the loss of a naval gunner and nine of her crew, and on Oct. 19 the J. L. Luckenbach was saved from a similar fate by an American destroyer after a gun duel which lasted four hours. In the fight between the steamship and the submarine two of the American naval gunners and seven of the crew of the J. L. Luckenbach were wounded.

U-BOAT CAPTAINS FEAR THEIR CREWS

Officers Heavily Armed, While Sailors Are Searched for Weapons to Avert Mutiny.

LONDON, Oct. 20, (Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—Captains of the German submarines are compelled constantly to carry their revolvers and to disarm the members of their crews to prevent mutiny and voluntary surrender to their enemies, according to an Amsterdam correspondent of The Daily Express. He quotes a man who claims to know the conditions of the German submarine service as saying:

"For the last two months the U-boats have been putting to sea under very peculiar conditions. The commander and his second start heavily armed. The men, on the other hand, are searched for weapons before every embarkation. From some of the vessels all the rifles and other small arm ammunition have been removed. In some cases rifles are on board, but they are kept securely locked in their racks, and the key reposes in the commander's pocket.

"The reason for all these drastic precautions is to be found in the spirit of the men at present serving Germany beneath the waves.

"I will give you the psychological experience of the German submarine sailor. After his course of special training for the work he makes his first trip. His vessel has one or two narrow escapes from disaster, but returns safely to her base. The sailor goes ashore for his short leave, spends his pay, and enjoys himself. Then he makes a second trip and again returns after escaping death by inches.

"Gradually it dawns on him that luck of this kind cannot hold out forever and that eventually his fate is certain. From the moment that this realization forces itself upon him his duty becomes a veritable nightmare. He sets sail on each new cruise with the conviction that it will be his last. In the language of the English soldier, he is perpetually 'going over the top' and his period of strain is much more lengthy and nerve racking than that of the land fighter.

"The effect on his mind is easily to be understood. He begins to cast about him for some means of escape from this branch of the service, but he quickly realizes that his only chance of escape is that of capture and internment, either by an enemy or neutral power. It is this longing for capture which sends him to sea helpless and unarmed, while his officers bristle with the means of enforcing obedience and discipline.

"Every U-boat commander now has to face an added danger—that of his own men, who may seize the first opportunity of taking control of his vessel and delivering it to the enemy in exchange for their own lives."

GERMANS HOTLY SHELL PASSCHENDAELE POSTS

British Report Increased Artillery Activity at Several Places on Ypres Front.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—The official communication from the War Office tonight reports heavy shelling by the Germans of the new British positions around Passchendaele. It reads:

During the day the enemy's artillery has shown increased activity at a number of points on the Ypres battlefront. Hostile shelling has been particularly heavy throughout the day against our positions in the neighborhood of Passchendaele.

The afternoon statement read:

Belgian troops carried out a successful raid yesterday morning against a hostile post southeast of Nieuport. A number were killed and several were taken prisoner. The entire raiding party returned last night. The enemy attacked one of our posts northeast of Armentieres, but was repulsed by rifle and machine gunfire. The hostile artillery developed great activity early this morning northeast of Ypres.

PARIS, Nov. 13.—Today's official communication says:

In the region north, west, and east of Rheims last night the Germans, after lively bombardments, carried out several raids. Their efforts brought them no success. Elsewhere the night was calm.

The communication issued tonight reads:

The enemy artillery, vigorously countershelled by us, bombarded our first lines in the Champagne in the region of the Monts and at several points of our front in the Argonne.

BERLIN, Nov. 12.—The official bulletin issued by the War Office today reads:

Western theatre, front of Crown Prince Rupprecht: In Flanders we repulsed by our fire and counterthrusts strong reconnoitring detachments launched against our positions early this morning by the Belgians in the Yser region and by the English on the battle front.

The artillery duels continued less than on previous days. In the evening the firing increased near Dixmude and on some sectors of the main battlefield.

Front of the German Crown Prince: North of Brukers we resolutely conducted a surprise attack with our infantry, which resulted in the capture of prisoners and machine guns.

WALES WINS FAVOR IN ITALY.

Prince's Presence Taken as Proof of English Faith in the Nation.

By The Associated Press.

ITALIAN HEADQUARTERS, Nov. 13.—The presence of the Prince of Wales at the Italian front has already had a most pleasant effect on Italians. The Prince's simple, unaffected and genial ways seem to them the embodiment of England's sympathy. The fact that the King of England did not hesitate to send his eldest son to the Italian battle line is taken as convincing proof that England and her rulers are confident that Italy will be able successfully to withstand the forces of the Central Empires.

The Prince shows the keenest interest not only in the military problems of the moment, but the life about him. He mixes freely with the soldiers and peasants and is delighted when he can make them understand his limited Italian vocabulary. He amuses himself by buying eggs and fruit from the peasants, at the same time bargaining with them. At times he has shown apparent anxiety to understand the coinage, and observers, seeing him studying the coins in his hand, have said sympathetically: "Poor fellow; I dare say, so far from home, he has run short of cash."

COMPANY DROPS PACIFIST.

Mayor of Coatsville Also Advises Anti-War Man to Leave Town.

COATESVILLE, Penn., Nov. 12.—Because of his alleged pacifist utterances and refusal to assist in the sale of Liberty Bonds, Arthur Hoopes, a member of a prominent Chester County family, has been compelled by the Directors of the Coatesville Trust Company to resign his position as Secretary-Treasurer, and was advised today by Mayor Swing to leave town to avoid possible personal violence. He is at the home of a brother in West Chester tonight.

Hoopes, who is married, a graduate of Haverford College, and a son of Thomas Hoopes, senior member of the wheel works of Hoopes Brothers & Darlington, denied tonight that he was pro-German in any sense.

"I am conscientiously opposed to war," he said. "I do not think that in this war or in any war the right is all on one side, and I feel it is not right to assist in financing this war."

Mayor Swing said he advised Hoopes to leave town after he had learned that certain young men living at the Y. M. C. A. dormitories here had sent out a notice for a meeting tonight to take steps to make Hoopes salute the flag and hang it over the door of his home. The Mayor also learned that a local fire company was to meet tonight and expel Hoopes from membership.

FRENCH CABINET OUT AFTER DEFEAT

to an arrangement for an extension of the British front at an early date, which it would be injudicious to mention exactly. He referred to the necessity of systematic and complete economic coordination of resources by the Allies. Great Britain and France, he concluded, had reached a complete agreement respecting the provisioning of the two countries, which would be put into immediate execution.

The Foreign Affairs Committee of the Senate has asked Foreign Minister Barthou to communicate to it a letter from former Premier Briand to M. Barthou concerning a peace offer, and which later brought about the fall of M. Ribot.

M. Barthou declined to submit the letter on the ground that he could not communicate it without accompanying it with other papers, which he had no right to divulge.

The committee then decided to hear M. Briand and M. Barthou on the subject before Thursday, when an interpellation by Senator Pere on the reasons why Ribot resigned will come up for debate.

CABINET WEAK FROM START.

Obstruction by Socialists Beset Painleve with Difficulties.

The Cabinet of Professor Paul Painlevé started out on Sept. 14 without definite assurance of support from the Unified Socialists, to whom the preceding Government of M. Ribot, in which Professor Painlevé had held the Portfolio of War, had owed its defeat—partly this cause and partly the political capital which had been made out of connecting Louis J. Malvy, the Minister of Interior, with pro-German propaganda which culminated in the revelations of the Bolo scandal.

On the very day, Aug. 31, that M. Malvy resigned, M. Ribot had been on the point of giving way to the Radical Socialists and of reviving the Higher Council of National Defense, with M. Malvy as a member of it.

The Socialists declined to serve in a Cabinet, or to give it their support, which retained M. Ribot. But Professor Painlevé after half a week of negotiations with party leaders finally formed one with M. Ribot and without the Socialists. Whether Professor Painlevé was to be able to govern without them would be settled when the Chamber met on Sept. 18.

Meanwhile several attempts were made to break his slate. The Radical caucus tried, like the Socialist Party, but failed. A section of the Radical Party—the pacifist wing—led by M. Caillaux, endeavored to wrest the Interior portfolio from Professor Painlevé under threat of withdrawing altogether if the Socialists were not called in, but the only result was that M. Renoult, President of the Radical Party, had to retire from the Cabinet, in which he had a post, but all other Radicals selected by Professor Painlevé remained in.

Sept. 18 came. Although questions of persons and group politics of a petty nature still dominated the crisis, Professor Painlevé managed to hold a majority together. But obstruction by Socialists and Radicals so delayed the important business of Parliament that on two occasions in October he presented his resignation to President Poincaré, only to have it refused on the ground that he had not been defeated.

In Paris, as in Petrograd and Rome, it was evident that the extremists were playing the same game—keeping the Government in power, but without support; obstructing it in every way so that it must resign through impotency to direct legislation, when the extremists hoped to gain entire control.

On Oct. 23 Professor Painlevé threw a sop to the opposition by replacing M. Ribot by J. Louis Barthon. This for a time appeased the Socialists and Radicals, but the Unified Socialists revived their old tactics, and their press began to attack the new Foreign Minister. It was his energy which had forced through Parliament the three-year service bill in 1913, without which the French Army would have been worse off than it was in August, 1914.

FEAR CIVILIAN STRATEGY.

London Critics Continue to Assail War Council Project.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—The speech made yesterday by Premier Lloyd George in Paris has created a stir in the London press, where his references to the Allies' "incredible blunders" and other extracts are printed under sensational headlines. Comment on the speech is mixed with criticism of the new Allied War Council as announced here yesterday by Chancellor Bonar Law.

Some of the newspapers indorse the speech in the main or are non-committal. Others criticise adversely the new military plan and accuse the Premier of wishing to take over the strategic direction of the Allied campaign. Rumors in the Sunday newspapers of the impending retirement of Field Marshal Haig and General Robertson, chief of the General Staff, caused some commentators to insinuate that the reports were set afloat intentionally by semi-official hints.

The Morning Post connects the new plan with the rumors and says that both the nation and the army are alarmed over it. It adds:

"A political council advised by a military committee is to direct the strategy of the Allies' army. The blood of the nation will run cold at the idea. No more fatal and no more disastrous arrangement can be conceived. Premier Lloyd George, from his speech in Paris, appears to think that this complicated project will achieve strategic unity. It seems to us that it will achieve strategic paralysis."

The Times says that the Premier "let himself go" and thereby opened the floodgates to a torrent of expert criticism. It continues:

"His views of strategy often are superficial, unsound and incompatible with practical conditions. But they are courageous and obviously sincere, and it is far better that they be stated frankly than to leak out through subterranean channels.

"The upshot of the speech is that the Premier is anxious for closer unity in the control of the Allied armies. It is an unimpeachable idea, but the point is whether the machinery set up at Rapallo will achieve this purpose. Lloyd George's instinct is sound in so far as he proposes to substitute a systematic council of Ministers for the past spasmodic and ineffectual conferences, but he will come hopelessly to grief unless he defines with far greater precision than Bonar Law did in the House of Commons the duties of the Council's military committee.

"Lloyd George's strength lies in his imagination and energy. His weakness is his failure to think out his plans to a logical conclusion. His first business when he returns must be to clear up the very real misunderstanding about the relation of his military advisers."

The Daily News, while believing that the new council ought to be an important gain, says that "the disquiet which has been expressed is due to the well-grounded suspicion, which has prevailed long, that there has been trouble between Premier Lloyd George and the heads of the army." The News, like The Post, suggests that rumors like these relating to Field Marshal Haig and General Robertson, were propagated purposely. It says that the nation demands that these leaders, in whom it has entire confidence, shall not be intrigued against, limited in authority or compelled to retire by the establishment of a War Council.

The Daily Mail says that Premier Lloyd George will make a statement explaining the new council in the House of Commons this week.

The Premier returned today from the Continent, where he has been in attendance upon the Inter-Allied Conference. He was accompanied by Elipherios Venizelos, the Greek Prime Minister. They were met at the station by Arthur J. Balfour, Secretary for Foreign Affairs.

Permits Bolo to Sue Humbert.

PARIS, Nov. 13.—The Senate today voted to suspend the immunity of Senator Charles Humbert, owner of the Paris Journal. This is to allow Bolo Pacha, under arrest for espionage, to institute proceedings against Humbert.

Bolo Pacha has chaged that he loaned money to Senator Humbert to complete the purchase of the Journal. He also has accused the Senator of keeping some money. Senator Humbert last week asked the Senate to approve the suspension of immunity.

Russian Soldiers in France Loyal.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Russian soldiers in France have united in a telegram to Kerensky, a copy of which has been forwarded to Washington, expressing their confidence in the Russian leader and urging him to fight the extremists. The troops pledged themselves to respond to any call Kerensky may make upon them and urged him to deal pitilessly with the Bolsheviki and secret counter-revolutionists.

Their telegram concludes: "You are the only guarantee for our safety; be firm and pitiless toward the enemies of Russia."

A cablegram received here today from Petrograd via Paris says the Narjdnce Slovo of the popular Socialists in Russia publishes a ukase by Kerensky, dated from Gatchina, announcing his arrival there at the head of loyal troops and ordering all units of the garrison who had joined the Bolsheviki to return immediately to their duties. The paper also prints an order from General Korniloff, who had been named by Kerensky as commandant of the forces and of the operations against Petrograd, demanding from the garrison that delegates should be sent to him in order to know who were traitors to the country.

RED GUARDS SLAY CADETS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—Telegraphing yesterday the Petrograd correspondent of The Daily Chronicle says the Bolsheviki have armed thousands of factory hands, mostly young fellows who never handled rifles in their lives, who don't know what discipline is, and are capable of every sort of atrocity when excited by being under fire.

"These so-called Red Guards," he continues, "massacred batches of captured cadets with the utmost brutality. After the capture of the telephone exchange three cadets were trampled to death and their bodies left lying in the street. Immediately after the capture of one cadet school after obstinate resistance—the capture was due to insufficient ammunition of the defenders—the Red Guards surrounded the prisoners, shouting:

"Had it not been for the protection of slightly more disciplined soldiers surrounding the cadets they would have received short shift. As it was a few on their arrival at the Petrograd fortress were seized by sailors and torn to pieces.

"Every now and again rifle fire is heard and the occasional noise of field guns or an armored car. One of the latter, containing an inexperienced Bolshevik crew, jumped into the river.

"The Military Revolutionary Committee has now ordered the commissaries to take men away from the factories to increase the Red Guards. While obviously the garrison contains many waverers it is equally clear that some of the Red Guards and sailors will fight to the end.

"Petrograd has extracted a solitary smile from the unpleasant events of the last few days. Yesterday morning a Bolshevik Commissary arrived with four young girls at the telephone exchange and said he had come to take possession. The official in charge replied: 'Very well, but you'll have to provide your own staff.'

"'That's all right,' said the Bolshevik, turning to his satellites. 'Here they are.'

"The official politely requested his successor to follow him round the place. He pointed out 2,000 women employed on each of three shifts The Bolshevik emissary, greatly surprised, withdrew, apparently regarding the matter in a different light.

"A few hours later, however, when the exchange was garrisoned by a handful of cadets and defended by an armored car the Bolsheviki attacked in force and were victorious."

American Girl and Man with Cadets.

PETROGRAD, Monday, Nov. 12.—The seizure of the Central Telephone Exchange by the military cadets was made possible by deceiving the Bolsheviki guard, to whom the cadets presented forged credentials from the Lenine Government. Two Americans spent Sunday with the cadets who defended the building. They were Bessie Beatty of The San Francisco Bulletin and Albert Rheys Williams of Boston.

The military cadets were prompted to undertake the adventure in the belief that Premier Kerensky was on hand with his army and was on the point of retaking the city. They numbered not more of ammunition. Early in the afternoon the cadets realized that the cause was than sixty, and had but a small supply hopeless, as no news had come of the expected relief, and their ammunition was nearly exhausted. Many of the cadets were paroled after the surrender of the Winter Palace last week, and feared to trust themselves again in the hands of the Bolsheviki. In taking the exchange the cadets had captured M. Antonoff, the Assistant Minister of War, whom they held prisoner.

Panic soon seized the defenders. The officers in desperation cut the buttons and insignia from their uniforms, while others discarded their uniforms and attired themselves in the garments of line men. Frantic telephone calls were sent in every direction asking for help. Finally M. Antonoff and Mr. Williams were sent to parley with the Bolsheviki, who gave their word that the men would be spared if they surrendered. The military cadets were led out one by one and formally delivered to the victors.

The telephone operators became excited during the fighting, but many remained at their posts throughout the firing. Miss Beatty cheered and encouraged the more timorous girls and assisted in treating the wounds of the military cadets who had been shot by the Bolsheviki.

REPORTS MOSCOW FIGHTING.

Our Consul There Communicates with Ambassador Francis.

PETROGRAD, Monday, Nov. 12.—The American Consul General at Moscow, telegraphing to Ambassador Francis under Sunday's date, confirms reports of fighting there between the Bolsheviki and the Provisional Government forces. The Consul General says:

"It seems the Government troops are winning. John F. Stevens is here, but cannot get in touch with him, as Consulate is centre of fighting. All Americans safe. Rumors Cossacks already arrived."

Ambassador Francis, who says he will remain here to look after the interests of his Government and the safety of American citizens, has received no offers from the Bolsheviki Government or any word from Washington since Nov. 3.

Mr. Stevens as Chairman of the American Railway Commission went to Moscow to act as special adviser to the Government in connection with the operation of Russian railways.

"The Russian Embassy and all the Russian officials in London wish it known that they do not recognize the authority of a band of traitors who have temporarily gained the upper hand in the capital and call themselves the Russian Government."

AMERICANS SHIFTED IN TRENCHES AGAIN

HEROISM SHOWN IN RAIDS

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Nov. 13, (by The Associated Press.)—The second American detachments to enter the trenches have returned to their billets. The relief was accomplished successfully and without the knowledge of the Germans. The third series of battalions is now occupying the first line, having marched in on a brilliant starlight night.

Among the returned troops is the company which bore the brunt of the raid on the trenches by German shock troops. The battalions in the trenches had a good taste of shell fire during the first hours, the Germans using their artillery more heavily than usual and continuing steadily and the American batteries replying energetically.

There has been active patrolling in No Man's Land by the Americans and the enemy, but no clash between patrols has so far been reported.

The soldiers are rapidly becoming expert at patrol work, and their officers say they carry on in No Man's Land as if they had been at it for years. This is explained partly by the fact that activity in No Man's Land along the sector held by the Americans virtually is open warfare, which is distinctly an American game.

Already stories of the heroism of individual soldiers in trench raids are coming to light. Some men hesitate to tell what they have done, but are anxious and willing to tell what they have seen others do. The latest incident discovered involved five privates, who rushed from their dugout as the Germans were about to enter the trenches. Standing, kneeling, and lying in front of the entrance they fired on the enemy so successfully that they prevented the Germans, who made several attempts, from entering.

The Lieutenant who was knocked down three times by shell fire in the recent German raid in the American sector has described his experiences to The Associated Press. His face is covered with scratches from flying gravel.

"When the firing began I started back to the trench," he said. "The first thing I knew there was a crash. I seemed to see sparks shooting from all over my body. I started to crawl, and it seemed ages before my face hit the mud at the bottom of the trench. The same thing happened again a minute later. Then I picked myself up and started in another direction, a Corporal and two men joining me.

Officer Knocked Senseless.

"A shell burst a few feet from us on the parapet. I lost consciousness. When I came to all was black, and grenades were flying in all directions. I had lost my shrapnel helmet, but feeling around with my hands, I found one by the head of a man who was lying near me. I put it on and started away, stumbling over the body of the man, who was a Corporal.

"I went on and gathered some men. We spread ourselves out, expecting a heavy attack. As a matter of fact, I found out later that the raid was over and that the grenades we saw were being thrown by retreating Germans."

It is the opinion of all the officers that the troops are bearing up excellently under their first experience in the trenches. All are learning how to conduct themselves under fire, and learning also that shell fire, even when intense, is not so dangerous as it sounds.

So much shrapnel has fallen since the battalions of the second contingent in the trenches have taken their posts that the men have ceased to worry about it, hardly paying any more attention to it than to rain. The commander of one battalion said that since the men had entered the trenches mumps had caused more of them to go to the hospital than the enemy's fire.

The firing in this battalion's sector has been rather more intense than is usual for several nights. A heavy shell fell in a machine gun ammunition dump and exploded thirty boxes, bullets flying in all directions. The men near by threw themselves on the ground and no one was hurt.

A large shipment of turkeys, mince meat, cranberries, nuts, raisins, oranges, and sweet potatoes for the Thanksgiving dinner of the American soldiers has arrived in France. It will be distributed among the various instruction centres and villages where the troops are billeted. Other shipments will follow.

GERARD FLAYS TRAITORS.

Would Hang Them, Whether Americans or German-Americans.

PITTSBURGH, Penn., Nov. 13.—The time for repentance of disloyal Americans and pro-German sympathizers has passed and the day is at hand when every person must decide whether he is for or against America, declared James W. Gerard, former American Ambassador to Germany, in an address at a food conservation mass meeting here today.

"Americans are to be congratulated on their efforts to induce Germans in this country to be loyal, but there are still many under the protection of the American flag who are snakes in the grass," said the former Ambassador. "The time has come, however, when they must say straightforwardly whether they are for or against America.

"We should 'hog-tie' every disloyal German-American, feed every pacifist raw meat, and hang every traitor to a lamp post to insure success in this war. And our traitors are not all German-Americans. Some men high in public life are aiding the Prussian cause. There is no dirtier chapter in American politics than the crusade of these men, whose names you know."

HOUSE RECEIVES REPORTS.

Fellow-Members of Mission Tell of Progress in London.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—Colonel E. M. House, head of the American mission, called the members to a conference today and received reports on the progress of their deliberations with their British colleagues. He expressed himself as pleased with the splendid spirit of co-operation manifested.

The reports showed that the discussions had accomplished much in overcoming the difficulties heretofore caused by long-range conversations. The members also outlined to Colonel House what work remained to be done before they proceeded to the Paris conference.

The Colonel's callers today included Lord Northcliffe and Viscount Reading, Lord Chief Justice. In the afternoon he lunched with former Premier Asquith.

In the evening Ambassador Page gave an informal war ration dinner in honor of Rear Admiral William S. Benson. Those present included the First Lord of the Admiralty, Sir Eric Geddes; Admiral Jellicoe, Sir Edward Carson, Vice Admiral Sims, and the Earl of Wemyss.

Loan of $310,000,000 to France.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—A loan of $310,000,000 to France to cover expenditures in this country during November and December was made today by the Treasury. This makes the total credits extended to France $1,130,000,000 and the total of loans to all the Allies $3,876,400,000.

URGES WORKERS HERE TO FACE WAR DUTY

Sir Stephenson Kent Says Reverses Should Not Turn Us From Road on Which We Set Out.

Sir Stephenson Kent, Director General of Britain's Ministry of Munitions, speaking last night at a dinner given to the commission by the United Engineering Societies, declared that the nations at war must realize that a serious set back has been met because of reverses on the Italian front. He also said conditions in Russia were not as encouraging as they might be. Sir Stephenson in his address told how the troops on the firing line were dependent on the workers at home for the sinews of war.

"We are now called upon to face a very serious crisis," said Sir Stephenson. As allies we must look the facts in the face and realize that we have met with serious setbacks of late. The reverses on the Italian front and conditions in Russia are not as encouraging as they might be, but we cannot be turned from the road upon which we set out. Your race and my race are stickers and we propose to stick for a long time to come, let us hope forever. This war will not be won in a few days or weeks—it's going to be a long war and we must face the issue shoulder to shoulder."

"We realize that the success of the allied forces would not rest alone on the bravery of our soldiers in the trenches, but to a considerable degree upon the workers who remained behind to supply the sinews of war.

"We never had to abandon an offensive on our front for want of continuity of our supplies. We have impressed upon the employer the need, nay the wisdom of encouraging skilled laborers and mechanics, every gun, airplane, tent, and motor truck that is sent to the front is accompanied by skilled workman. It is for this reason we have encouraged the skilled mechanic and we point with pride to the fact that there has not been a strike since the formation of the Ministry of Munitions.

The commission yesterday conferred with the men who are in charge of American airplane, motor truck, guns, shells, ships, and railway equipment manufacture. About seventy-five firms were represented at the conference held in the rooms of the Merchants' Association. Addresses were made and questions answered by Sir Stephenson Kent and by Commissioner G. W. Baillie.

Commissioner Baillie in his address told of the methods employed by the British in relieving the labor shortage, which, he said, was done chiefly by the widespread employment of women to do men's work. He declared that today there were about a million women working on munitions in England, the number of women employes being as high as 80 per cent. of the total in some shell plants. In one plant, he said, 94 per cent. of the workers were women.

Commissioner Baillie asserted that in every machinery operation, with the exception of some of the heavier shipbuilding work, women were employed on an equal scale with the men.

At a luncheon yesterday where the commission met the editors of the New York newspapers, and also the trade journals, Commissioner H. W. Garrod told of the need of this country settling its labor disputes.

BLEW UP A FORT ON OESEL ISLAND

Russian Officer Relates Thrilling Incidents of Naval Battle in Gulf of Riga.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 13.—Further details of the recent battle between the Russian and German fleets in the Gulf of Riga were disclosed here today by Lieutenant P. Tirbak, who is on his way to Washington, where he will be attached to the staff of the Russian Ambassador, George Bakhemetieff.

Lieutenant Tirbak, who was on the flagship of the Russian Admiral, said the fleet was handicapped in its engagement with the Germans by the shallow water in Moon Sound which prevented their modern ships from joining the battle. Russian forces on Oesel Island consisted of 5,000 infantrymen, said Lieutenant Tirbak. They were not supported by artillery and were opposed by five times their number. The Germans advanced under cover of their heavy warship guns after the destruction of the forts at Hundra and Soelo Sound.

Three of the four Russian regiments attempted to desert when they discovered the numbers of the enemy and were shot down in droves by the fourth regiment, which stood fast to its position and was slaughtered. Of the original 1,400 men in this regiment only fifteen survived, said the Lieutenant.

The Russian fortress at Zerel was deserted soon after the Germans gained a foothold on the island, and because he did not wish to see it captured, Lieutenant Tirbak set a time fuse to the munitions magazine and destroyed the fort. It was considered impregnable, as it had withstood the bombarding of the heavy shells of the enemy's navy and airplane squad.

Lieutenant Tirbak witnessed the sinking of the Russian battleship Slava, a relic of the Japanese-Russo war, which went down in the channel of Moon Sound. The sinking of this vessel blocked the channel and prevented the Germans from gaining access to the Gulf of Finland. The Lieutenant said this move was thought to be one of the most brilliant strategic actions of the Russian Navy in this war.

Lieutenant Tirbak is accompanied by Lieutenant G. Lordkipandize, another naval officer, who will be attached to Ambassador Bakhmatieff's staff.

CABLE RATE TO BE REDUCED.

The Mexican Telegraph Company and the Central and South American Telegraph Company, operating jointly the All-America Cables, announced a reduction in cable rates yesterday between North America and Central and South America, to take effect on Dec. 1.

The rate on regular traffic between the United States and Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, Bolivia, Chile, Argentina, Uruguay, and Paraguay, will be reduced fifteen cents, making the rate between New York and these countries 50 cents a word. Deferred rates will be reduced proportionally. The rate between the United States and Panama will be reduced 10 cents a word, making the rate 30 cents, and the rate between the United States and the Central American Republics will be reduced 6 cents, making the rate between Galveston and those republics 35 cents.

John L. Merrill, Second Vice President, called attention yesterday to the increase in trade between the United States and South America and the commercial importance of cables in the promotion of such trade. The quality of this service, Mr. Merrill added, is shown in the transmission between New York and Buenos Aires, an average of less than twenty minutes being maintained. When the companies were organized, Mr. Merrill said, back in 1882 the rate between the United States and Buenos Aires was $7.50 per word, and double words such as New York and San Francisco were counted as two words.

Mr. Merrill said that the Central and South American Telegraph Company had signed a contract with the Republic of Brazil for the extension of its All-American lines from Buenos Aires to Santos and Rio de Janeiro, and that the extensions of 1,200 and 1,300 miles, respectively, would be made as soon as possible after the war.

F. C. Payne Wins War Cross.

Frederick C. Payne of Bronxville, N. Y., volunteer ambulance driver with Harjis Unit No. 5, attached to the Sixty-sixth Division Chasseurs, received the Croix de Guerre on Oct. 17 for "courage and coolness in evacuating very badly wounded during the hottest time of an intense bombardment on Oct. 2, 1917."

TIGHTEN THE REINS ON ENEMY ALIENS

Government Revokes Permits of 50 and May Extend Order to 500 More.

ASKS POLICE TO CO-OPERATE

New Zone Regulations May Bar All Germans from the Waterfront.

In a general tightening of the reins on enemy aliens, following the suspicious fire which destroyed the plant of the Washburn Wire Company Sunday, United States Marshal Thomas D. McCarthy yesterday began the revocation of the permits issued to unnaturalized Germans to live in barred waterfront zones. About 50 permits were revoked, and the Marshal's orders contemplate the revocation of between 400 and 500 more. Fifteen men from his office were set to work yesterday notifying these Germans that they must move within twenty-four hours.

In June Marshal McCarthy issued his order barring enemy aliens from the waterfront. A large number of permits were granted to Germans on the lower end of Manhattan to go within striking distance of piers and docks. Many Germans live along South and West Streets, for instance. The Marshal holds the power to revoke any permits granted by him, and has exercised his power. He does not wish it held that suspicion has been cast in particular upon the enemy aliens ordered to move, but that they are moved in accord with a general policy.

What is regarded by the Marshal as one of the biggest steps toward dealing with the enemy alien question was taken yesterday, when Police Commissioner Woods agreed to his suggestion that 25,000 Germans who applied for zone permits be brought to the notice of the police and their neighbors, so that they may know a watch is being kept upon them. Under the Marshal's plan the police on each post will visit the home, and other policemen the working place of each enemy alien and get acquainted with the Germans. At the same time the police will notify the neighbors of the German that they are living next to an enemy alien. The Marshal believes that in this manner the unnaturalized Germans of the city will have thousands of citizens constantly observing their actions, and will keep a far closer check upon them than could be kept by the limited force of the Marshal's office alone.

It is expected that within the next week there will be issued additional zone regulations which will have the effect of further barring Germans from the waterfront. It is the attitude of the authorities that the enemy alien problem has been well handled in this district. It was pointed out yesterday that the Washburn fire is the first in Manhattan since this country entered the war to which any suspicion of the work of enemy aliens was attached. It is the general attitude of the Marshal's office that the enemy alien who behaves should be treated leniently, and that strict coercion of a German-American who is loyal to this country would produce a strained situation which might result in encouragement, through resentment, to acts which would not occur otherwise. It was also pointed out that since the United States entered the war 23,000 ships have sailed from New York Harbor without any damage occurring to them from plots here. It was said that this experience was better than that of the Port of London.

The local United States authorities are turning their attention to the problem which will be created here if the United States declares war on Austria. There are tens of thousands of unnaturalized Austrians working in New York in zones that are barred to Germans. The authorities have no power over them, so long as the United States is not at war with Austria. These men, hundreds of them, are in positions to damage shipping if they so desired. They work on piers, on lighters, and in loading ships, as well as in munition factories as machinists. It is the belief of many that these Austrians constitute a dangerous menace.

It is likely that there may come from the Attorney-General's office a definition of a "munitions" plant. There are perhaps no large plants in this district that are not doing some work, directly or indirectly for Government use. The definition of "munitions" plant now in force in this district is such that it is held that there is not a munition plant in New York City. It may be that the Attorney-General will rule that a plant doing a certain proportion of work for the Government of a certain kind is a munitions plant.

There has never been any step taken in this district to bar Germans from those plants, from which the President's proclamation said they should be barred, which are engaged in the manufacture of any product for the use of the army or navy. It was pointed out by a Federal official that this would be a tremendous undertaking, inasmuch as a strict observance of that section of the President's proclamation would include factories making uniforms, mills making flour for the Quartermaster's Department, factories making shoes for soldiers, and perhaps, even coal mines. These questions may form the subject of an early conference in Washington.

Fire Marshal Thomas Brophy yesterday continued his investigation of the Washburn fire. He examined seven or eight men who worked in the plant, but said upon adjourning the investigation until today, that so far as the Fire Department was concerned the origin of the blaze was still a mystery. The New York Board of Fire Underwriters is also conducting an investigation.

The fire insurance companies are aroused to the danger to the food and munition supply of the country and to their own business from fires in factories and storage houses, and are using every effort, in co-operation with local and national defense councils, to reduce hazards to a minimum. In New York City, it was learned yesterday, a comprehensive plan of fire prevention was put into effect some three months ago, and is now in maximum operation, under the direction of the Mayor's Committee on National Defense.

The work in New York City is under the general direction of F. J. T. Stewart of the Bureau of Survey of the New York Board of Fire Underwriters, who three months ago became Superintendent of the Bureau of Fire Inspection of the Committee on Industry and Employment of the Mayor's Committee on National Defense. Working under Mr. Stewart, between twenty and thirty expert Fire Inspectors, loaned by the insurance companies and underwriters of the city, keep a constant watch upon manufacturing plants and storage places.

A high official of one of the largest fire insurance companies in the city said that, in his opinion, Congress should amend the Espionage act to make any one who destroyed foodstuffs or munitions of war guilty of treason or espionage, whether the destroyed property was owned by the Government or private individuals.

AMERICA GETS NEUTRALS' FLEETS

Wheat brought to the United States from Argentina and Australia will be milled in this country for re-export. The Food Administration has decided to export no more wheat from the country, but will send out only flour. This will save cargo space, furnish feedstuffs for American cattle, and guarantee a supply of flour to keep American mills running on full time.

No time has been set for turning over the neutral tonnage, but the ships held here now probably will be allowed to receive bunker coal as fast as they can obtain it. Many will make transatlantic voyages, carrying in part Belgian relief cargoes.

Arrangements for turning over the 40,000 tons of Swedish ships in American ports were completed some days ago.

ROUNDUP TO CHECK SPY MENACE SOON

Assistant Attorney General Fitts Forecasts Step to End Propaganda.

PRESIDENT TO ISSUE EDICT

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Assistant Attorney General Fitts, in charge of criminal prosecutions for the Government, declared in an address tonight before the Washington Chamber of Commerce that enemy propagandists now working in this country soon would be rounded up and the spy menace largely eliminated. Special significance was attached to his statement, in view of the Government's pending plan to register all Germans within the country and place further restrictions on their movements.

"The few thousand criminal agitators who are trying to make it harder for this country to win the war and easier for a relentless enemy to reach us," said Judge Fitts, "will be brought under the mighty arm of the law. Day by day as the patience of the many become exhausted, the detested few who seek to betray or starve their country will be driven to cover.

"Disloyal Americans who encourage violence are actually few. Under the rule that it is always that which is unusual and out of the ordinary which attracts attention, the instances of violence and arson which are accomplished by these treacherous agents of the enemy seem to be great in number because it is so shocking that they should be at all."

Germany must be beaten, he said, to stop the organized dissemination by that Government of sedition and social unrest among populations of other countries while carefully suppressing it at home.

Proclamation Expected Soon.

President Wilson is expected to issue a proclamation soon requiring every enemy alien within the United States to register as a step toward ridding the country of spies and sabotage.

The Government has virtually decided that this procedure is the only way open for sifting from the million Germans in the United States the few who are believed to be causing fires in munition plants, grain elevators and warehouses, and promoting propaganda injurious to America's prosecution of the war.

Attorney General Gregory took to the Cabinet meeting today for President Wilson's consideration a draft of regulations under which the registration might be carried out, following the program adopted by England and France for keeping a close watch over the activities of enemy subjects. The recent increase in the number of disastrous fires and indications of renewed operations of enemy propagandists has prompted officials to consider more radical steps against German residents than the restrictions heretofore imposed barring them from a half-mile zone about munition plants and Government property, without special Government permits.

Under the proposed registration plan Germans would have a specified time, probably several weeks, in which to report their names, occupations, and family or business connections to Postmasters or some other Government agency. Those not registered then would be rounded up and prosecuted, and officials believe that the failure of some to enroll would give valuable clues to the identity of suspicious persons whose conduct and interests might be carefully scrutinized.

For Periodical Reporting.

Some officials recommend that every enemy alien so registered be required to report periodically to the Government, in order that watch may be maintained over their movements. Under present conditions, Germans may move from one locality to another without hindrance providing they do not enter the barred zones about munition plants and Government establishments.

To assist Government agents in this work of watching dangerous aliens, a volunteer league of citizens has been organized and is reported to be enlarging its membership, particularly by the addition of employers and industrial leaders, who are in position to watch aliens employed in manufacturing plants. Thus the limited forces of Government agents hope to overcome the handicap peculiar to conditions in the United States, where the foreign populations are so large that adequate supervision could not possibly be maintained by professional Government investigators.

Only Germans could be compelled to register by a Presidential proclamation, since Austrians, Turks, and Bulgarians are not classed as enemies under the espionage law. Congress might extend the restriction to those nationalities, however.

DESTROYERS THE TRUE MATCH FOR U-BOATS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Important progress has been made in the problem of locating submarines, after which their destruction is a comparatively simple matter, Secretary Daniels said today in a statement discussing the 40,000 separate suggestions, plans, or models of devices submitted to the Naval Consulting Board since the United States entered the war against Germany.

"The idea that the submarine will be overcome by a miraculous invention is not now seriously considered," the Secretary said. "The more intimate knowledge the civilian obtains on this subject the more convinced he is that the submarine can be conquered by persistently hunting him down with the weapon of which he is most afraid. This is the armed service boat, equipped with all the latest scientific devices and typified in the modern torpedo-boat destroyer. Foreign naval authorities have frankly stated their admiration of the degree of perfection of American designs.

"In regard to the protection of ships against torpedo attacks, the undeniable evidence of recent months of submarine activity has demonstrated that the immunity of a vessel depends very largely on its speed and manoeuvring ability. There is a possibility that some artificial means of protecting cargo-carrying vessels may be found practicable. In no other field have so many suggestions or so many duplicate inventions been presented to the board."

The Secretary said that the thought of submarine defense could be sub-divided into three groups.

(1) Methods to accomplish the destruction of submarines involving detection and destruction after detection.

(2) Means of avoiding submarine attack, involving instructions for merchant vessels, proper handling of vessels, camouflage, smoke screens, and other confidential information known to American naval authorities.

(3) Protection of ships against torpedo hits.

All of the 40,000 suggestions submitted have received careful consideration, Mr. Daniels said, and much valuable aid has been given to various branches of the war service. Many proposals, however, have been found to be impractical, largely due to the failure of inventors properly to inform themselves of certain fundamental principles.

The Naval Consulting Board and the Navy Department have prepared and are giving free distribution to pamphlets which give general information to inventors that they may avoid acting upon misconceptions as to fundamental principles, with consequent waste of effort.

CAPRONI MAKES FAST FLIGHT TO VIRGINIA

Covers 322 Miles From Mineola to Langley Field in Four Hours and Two Minutes.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., Nov. 13.—Lieutenant Resnati, in the big Caproni biplane, carrying nine passengers, arrived at Langley Field, near Hampton, Va., at 2:43 o'clock this afternoon, having covered the distance of 322 miles from Mineola, L. I., in four hours and two minutes.

The Caproni biplane, that flew from Langley Field at Hampton Va., about three weeks ago, started on the homeward trip from Hempstead at 10:41 o'clock yesterday morning. Coming north from the home field the distance was made in four hours and eight minutes, and it was said that an effort would be made to beat this record time going south. Different crews, but consisting of the same number of persons of about the same total weight, were carried each time.

Yesterday the passengers consisted of Lieutenant Resnati of the Italian Aviation Corps, Captain H. K. Salmon, U. S. A., the alternate pilot; Lieut. Commander C. A. Davis, U. S. N., Lieutenant Edward B. Haggerty, Lieutenant A. S. Simoni, Captain William T. Willetts, Lieutenant H. E. Watson, U. S. A., and Privates John E. Neidhart and William J. Blackman, who served as mechanicians.

When the trip began a strong northeast wind was blowing, and the biplane flew low, less than an altitude of 500 feet until it had got well under way. The roar of its engines could be heard for miles and attracted a big crowd. The men were dressed in fur-lined coats and leggins, knit woolen helmets under leather caps, and were provided with writing tablets, on which to keep memoranda of the trip.

It was the intention of Lieutenant Resnati to follow the coast line and to make the trip in less than four hours. He thought there would be no difficulty about this because the wind favored him. The start yesterday was the third time that it had been attempted. On the two other occasions the motors failed to work satisfactorily, and it was determined to wait until everything was in perfect trim.

ZIONISTS GET TEXT OF BRITAIN'S PLEDGE

Balfour's Declaration Promises Defense of Jews' Rights in Palestine and Elsewhere.

The declaration by Great Britain of its purpose to facilitate the effort of the Zionists to establish a national home for the Jewish people in Palestine, which was formally announced by Arthur J. Balfour, Secretary of State of Foreign Affairs, in a letter to Baron Rothschild, Vice President of the British Zionist Federation, on Nov. 3, carries with it a proviso that the establishment of a Jewish State in the Holy Land shall not in any way conflict with the rights of non-Jewish communities now existing in Palestine. It also carries pledges of Great Britain to oppose any project offered at the peace conference which might in any way impair the rights and political status enjoyed by Jews in any other country.

The Provisional Zionist Committee in this city has received from Dr. Chaim Weitzman, President of the British Zionist Committee, and Dr. Nachum Sokolow of the Inner Actions Committee a cable giving the complete text of the British proposal, which differs somewhat from the first reports published in this country. The full text of the British declaration is:

"His Majesty's Government views with favor the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people, and will use its best endeavors to facilitate the achievement of this object, it being clearly understood that nothing shall be done which may prejudice the civil and religious rites of existing non-Jewish communities in Palestine or the rights and political status enjoyed by Jews in any other country."

FRATERNIZING WITH FRENCH

Military Value Seen in American Soldiers' Comradeship.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—American and French troops are fraternizing about the camps in France in a way that promises well for future joint operations. Private letters from American officers lay stress on the amicable relations that have been established between the men, despite the difference in language.

The soldiers go about in groups during their leisure hours, often with a French private strolling on each side of a big American, and all three laughing uproariously over their attempts to understand each other. The villages where the Americans are quartered are full of such scenes daily. When there is a boxing match or other trial of strength, the mixed audiences cheer the victor impartially, although each side shouts encouragement to its own men during the fight.

Thus a spirit of friendship and of mutual respect is being developed among the men who are to fight side by side, which no provision by the leaders of the two armies could have secured. In this officers here see a gain of priceless military value.

AIRMEN BOMB VLISSEGHEM.

British, in Haze, Attack German Airdrome in Belgium.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—An Admiralty communication dealing with aerial activity of the British naval forces on Monday says:

In the afternoon of Nov. 12 naval aircraft carried out a bombing raid on the Vlisseghem (Belgium) airdrome. Several bombs were dropped on the objectives. The visibility was only fair, owing to the haze.

During patrols which have been carried out several engagements with enemy aircraft have taken place, in one of which a hostile scout was shot down in flames. All our machines returned safely.

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 13.—It is announced that the Argentine Congress will grant authorization at an early date to the Government to arrange for a military mission to France and a naval mission to England and the United States.

The newspapers comment favorably on the proposal.

CHINA STANDS UPON RIGHTS AS NATION

REFRAINS FROM PROTEST

Merely Makes Declaration of Principle So Worded as to Require No Answer from Lansing.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Developments today clarified the atmosphere with respect to the attitude of the Chinese Government toward the exchange of notes recently effected between Secretary of State Lansing and Viscount Ishii, head of the Japanese Mission to the United States, concerning the Far East and China.

China has made no protest against the exchange of these notes, which bind the United States and Japan to maintain the open door in China, and stipulate that this Government recognizes that Japan has special interests with respect to China. The text of the communication which the Chinese Minister yesterday delivered at the State Department under instructions from his Foreign Office, shows that, instead of protesting against the recent exchange of notes the Chinese Government contents itself with making a declaration of principle—the principle that the Chinese Government will not allow herself to be bound by any agreement entered into by other nations.

The communication places China on record as not being bound by the Lansing-Ishii treaty. The form of the communication was such that it calls for no reply. It will probably be filed without being answered, beyond the usual courteous acknowledgment, unless China presents a communication calling for an answer.

"The Government of the United States and the Government of Japan have recently, in order to silence mischievous reports, effected an exchange of notes at Washington concerning their desires and intentions with regard to China. Copies of the said notes have been communicated to the Chinese Government by the Japanese Minister at Peking, and the Chinese Government, in order to avoid misunderstanding, hastens to make the following declaration so as to make known the views of the Government.

"The principle adopted by the Chinese Government toward the friendly nations has always been one of justice and equality, and consequently the rights enjoyed by the friendly nations derived from the treaties have been constantly respected, and so even with the special relations between countries created by the fact of territorial contiguity it is only in so far as they have already been provided for in her existing treaties.

"Hereafter the Chinese Government will still adhere to the principles hitherto adopted, and hereby it is again declared that the Chinese Government will not allow itself to be bound by any agreement entered into by other nations."

JAIL MILWAUKEE ALDERMAN.

HORICON, Wis., Nov. 13.—Emil Seidel, Milwaukee Alderman and Socialist, was arrested and held in the city jail last night on a charge of "using language tending to provoke an assault and breach of peace."

Denied the use of the City Hall and a local lodge auditorium, Mr. Seidel held forth in the home of Leo Burow. According to auditors he severely attacked officials of the State and nation. The meeting ended abrutly when some one in the audience threw an improvised chemical bomb of exceedingly unpleasant olfactory quality. The arrest followed.

Seidel was released on bail this forenoon. A hearing in his case has been set for Nov. 26.

SHARP FIGHT IN MACEDONIA.

PARIS, Nov. 13.—The War Office communication issued tonight records an infantry attack in Macedonia yesterday which was repulsed by Italian troops. The communication says:

The artillery activity was particularly spirited at the Cerna bend and west of Lake Ochrida; rather feeble on the rest of the front. At the Cerna bend and Hill 1,050 the artillery action was followed by an enemy attack which was repulsed by Italian troops.

EXPERTS SAY TEUTONS CANNOT BE STARVED

But Condition of Population in Central Empires Is Said to be Very Serious.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 12.—The theory long held by the exponents of the blue water and other schools here that Germany could be defeated by a strict blockade has come to be abandoned with the successive increases of her territorial holdings. It is now recognized here that, useful as will be the blockade, which with the measures taken by America seems likely to reach a high pitch of perfection, it will not be sufficient to obtain a war decision.

A review of the internal situation in Germany, compiled from a close study of newspapers, official documents, and statements from reliable sources, shows the greatest distress, but no chance of the reducing of the Central Powers by economic means. There is much war weariness and discontent, but no chance of starving the country as a beleaguered fortress.

Letters found on prisoners describe epidemics of dysentery, tuberculosis, cholera, and hunger typhus. These are probably exaggerated, and more importance is attached to the reports of neutral doctors, leaving Germany, on special food diseases, such as perforated intestines and night blindness, in which the sufferer is blind in twilight.

In Munich the births last year were only 8,400, and the deaths 12,400. In comparison the births of the year before the war were 12,900, and the deaths 9,700. An insurance journal states that the mortality among the civilian population is now as great as at the front.

Another sign of want is the steady flow home of Dutch and Scandinavian workmen, despite the high German wages and the sending of German conscripts to Switzerland to be fed up for fighting.

One aspect of the straitened circumstances of Germany from a military point of view was mentioned to THE NEW YORK TIMES by a high British officer as his actual experience. He observed a number of prisoners taken on the Western front, apparently boys of 15 and 16. Investigation showed them to be two or three years older, and he suggested that their stunted growth was due to lack of food, and malnutrition, during the period of adolescence.

TEUTONS AS LOOTERS IN BOXER CAMPAIGN

GERMAN MARSHAL ANGRY

Returned American Communication and Wrote That He Was "Unfavorably Impressed."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Nearly seventeen years after it was filed there has been found in the records of the War Department a protest which the late Lieut. Gen. Adna R. Chaffee sent to the German Field Marshal Count von Waldersee, then commanding the allied forces sent to the relief of the Peking legations, in which General Chaffee called the Marshal's attention to the fact that the German troops under his command were looting the ancient Chinese observatory at Peking.

In that letter Chaffee, who was as blunt in speech as he was efficient in action, told Waldersee that the United States Government "would vehemently denounce any officer of its service who might enter upon spoliation of this sort." Instead of putting an end to the looting Waldersee sent a curt reply to Chaffee, in which he stated that the protest of the American commander impressed him "most unfavorably."

Many Other Outrages.

But the looting of the Peking Observatory said to be the oldest in the world, was only an incident of the Boxer campaign so far as the Germans who took part in that expedition were concerned. There are today in the army of the United States officers who can tell the story of outrages committed upon unoffending and helpless Chinese, of petty and grand larceny, and of an overbearingness on the part of the Germans that caused every officer of the other nations who took part in the march on Pekin, and the subsequent occupation of the Chinese capital, to look upon the Germans more as enemies than anything else. The records fail to show where the soldiers of other nations ever referred to them as "comrades."

Von Waldersee never forgave Chaffee for calling him to account and officers who were members of Chaffee's staff during that stormy year tell the story to this day of the contempt in which the famous American General held Waldersee, who by reason of rank was his commanding officer at the time. Berlin protested to Washington, but Chaffee got the facts home ahead of the protest and Elihu Root, then Secretary of War, upheld the action of Chaffee and the reprimand that the Kaiser sought so hard to have made was never forthcoming.

The looting by Germans began several weeks before General Chaffee decided to ignore the military proprieties and to call his superior officer to account. Report after report was made to the General concerning the conduct of the Germans, and finally when word came to him that they had begun the systematic and thorough looting of the observatory, which is sacred in Chinese eyes, he decided to act.

He wrote a latter to Waldersee, and handed it to Lieutenant Edgar T. Collins, then an aide on his staff, with instructions to personally deliver it to the German Field Marshal. Collins, who is now a Colonel and Chief of Staff of the national army division at Wrightstown, delivered the letter within half an hour after Chaffee handed it to him. This is the letter found today in the files of the War Department:

Headquarters China Relief Expedition,
Peking, China, Dec. 3, 1900.

Your Excellency: Having heard that the astronomical instruments are being removed from the Observatory, an officer of my staff went there yesterday and on his return confirms the report.

I have the honor to inform your Excellency that my Government would vehemently denounce an officer of its service who might enter upon spoliation of this sort, and it will sincerely regret to learn that any nation with which it co-operated to relieve the besieged legations in Peking authorizes or permits its troops to injure or remove any instruments or other part of the Observatory.

As commander of one of the four co-operating columns which relieved the legations on Aug. 14, I make to you respectful protest in this matter, and shall inform my Government of the fact.

With assurances of high esteem, I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ADNA R. CHAFFEE, Major General,
U. S. V., Commanding U. S. Troops, China Relief Expedition.

Collins, then, as now, the typical West Point regular, was admitted immediately into the presence of Waldersee. He saluted and uttered the customary military greeting, "With the compliments of General Chaffee," and handed to the German the envelope containing the letter.

Waldersee thought it was an ordinary military request. By the time he finished reading the letter he was angry through and through. He hurriedly dictated a short reply using the German language. The late General Theodore Schwan, who was a member of Chaffee's staff, translated it into English.

So angry was Waldersee that he sent two letters. The translation follows:

Marshal "Unfavorably Impressed."

Peking, China, Dec. 31, 1900.

Your Excellency: I beg most respectfully to inform you that the communication of this date respecting the instruments of the Observatory has impressed me most unfavorably, not only in respect to its form but regarding its substance as well.

I am not in a situation to receive utterances of this kind, and permit myself very respectfully to place the accompanying communication at your Excellency's disposal.

With high esteem, I remain, your Excellency's obedient servant,

WALDERSEE,

[Inclosure Translation.]

His Excellency General Chaffee, Commander in Chief U. S. forces in East Asia, Peking, China.

Sir:

I have the honor to respectfully inform you that I am very much astonished at the form and contents of your letter of December 3rd.

I am not in a position to stand those expressions, and I take the liberty to herewith return your letter.

Your obedient servant,
WALDERSEE.

Baker Gives Out Letters.

Colonel Collins has often told the story of Chaffee's actions to his friends. No young officer of his time was closer to Chaffee than Collins, and officers who know Collins, but who do not know the facts of the German part of the Chinese expedition, have often expressed a desire to know exactly why Collins always appeared to be just a little more pro-Ally than any other pro-Ally officer in the regular army. Colonel Collins told the story to a member of THE TIMES staff shortly after the outbreak of the present war, but it was not until the letters were found in the files of the War Department today that their publication was authorized by Secretary Baker.

Another officer of the army who was with Chaffee and who knows all the facts as to the brutal behavior of the German personnel in the international force under Waldersee is Captain James P. Drouillard, who was a Lieutenant in the famous Ninth United States Infantry at the time of the Boxer troubles. The Ninth, together with the Marines under the late Rear Admiral Bowman H. McCalla, bore the brunt of the fight as far as the Americans were concerned.

Captain Drouillard told a TIMES reporter more than a year ago that what the Germans were doing in Belgium, in northern France, and in Serbia was simply a continuation of the policy that they had followed during the Boxer troubles.

Soldiers who participated in the expedition have even charged the poisoning of wells and the outraging of women by the German troops which went to Peking under Waldersee.

Another Chaffee Letter.

It is believed that the War Department files contain the text of at least one other protest made by General Chaffee regarding the actions of the Germans, and if that protest is found it is believed that it will disclose the fact that Chaffee told Waldersee that "if you don't put a stop to it, I will."

In the records of the foreign relations of the United States for 1900 there appears a letter written by the Kaiser to President McKinley. The letter was written a few days after Field Marshal von Waldersee, because of his rank, was appointed to command the allied troops ordered to the relief of the legations in Peking.

"I received with pleasure," the Kaiser wrote, "the decision of the United States that American and German soldiers shall fight together for the common cause of civilization under one Commander in Chief. The brave army of your country which has shown of late so many warlike qualities, united with Europe, will be irresistible. Field Marshal Count Waldersee, who will have the honor of leading your forces, is not a stranger to America. His wife is an American by birth. I beg your Excellency to accept my heartfelt thanks for the confidence the United States places in the leadership of Count Waldersee."

This was the only letter written by the Kaiser on the subject. There is no record of any official appreciation having been expressed by the United States, or any of the other foreign Governments, regarding Waldersee as a Commander in Chief, after the Boxer troubles were settled.

TO CLOSE EXEMPTION CASES

Provost Marshal General's Regulations to Fill Camps at Once.

The great number of drafted men seeking to have their cases reopened and their claims for exemption reconsidered has so interfered with the raising and training of the national army that Provost Marshal General E. H. Crowder yesterday set aside regulations governing the reopening of cases promulgated by him on Sept. 27 and substituted for them regulations designed for the quick disposition of all applications for the reopening of cases.

Roger B. Wood, who directs the operation of the draft law in New York, gave out last night a telegram received by him from the Provost Marshal General, in which the new regulations were embodied, and added that the situation in New York required such treatment as that now provided. He said that, since Sept. 27, he had considered from 3,000 to 5,000 applications of men who wanted their cases reopened, and that in 95 per cent. of the cases he had found that the applicants had received full justice from local and district boards and had no merit in their claims. At least 4½ of the 5 per cent. of cases that had merit, he said, concerned aliens who, through ignorance or stupidity, had failed to fill their original papers properly. The procedure from today on, says the Provost Marshal General, shall be as follows:

"Any person already inducted into military service who claims that he has not had a full and fair hearing may apply to the commanding officer of his mobilization camp within seven days after his arrival at the mobilization camp to be discharged. If the commanding officer desires information he may request the Adjutant General of the State to investigate the facts, and the Adjutant General of the State forthwith shall call upon the proper board for a full report."

The resolution submitted by Ernest Bohm, Secretary of the Central Federated Union of New York, for the breaking up of the United Hebrew Trades, which include a very large number of those who were in discord with the Gompers administration and the support of the war, is going to be supported vigorously by the organization and is expected to find much favor among many of the delegates who are inclined to look with disfavor on the segregation of labor organizations by race and religion. At present the outlook is that this motion will be carried.

There appear to be likely two or three opportunities for the Socialist and pacifist minority to start a fight and try its strength on the floor. There is a possibility that they will attempt a disturbance if there is much discussion of the report on Russian conditions which is to be delivered, probably in the latter part of this week, by James Duncan, First Vice President of the federation, who was a member of the Root Mission to Russia.

The Resolutions Committee has received several hundred proposed resolutions, all of which have to be reported out, whether adversely considered or not. One of these, submitted by a delegate from Milwaukee who is said to be closely affiliated with Victor Berger and other Socialist leaders there, calls in general and rather ambiguous terms for the rights of free speech and a free press, "now unconstitutionally withheld by a technicality." This may afford a chance to the radicals to expound their views on the floor with some hope of gaining support from delegates of moderate opinions who would not stand with the pacifists on a straight-out issue of support of the Government during the war.

During this morning's session there was some argument over a proposal to have the entire proceedings of the convention reported stenographically. Delegates charged that several detective organizations had advertised that they had full information of everything going on, and even had delegates in their pay, and it was suggested that these men might deliberately make statements that might tend to throw labor into disrepute. Other objectors to the proposal thought that some bona fide labor leader in all loyalty to his cause, but speaking hastily might make some ill-judged remarks, which would have the same effect.

Joseph D. Cannon, a miner delegate, well known for his pacifist activities, said that Secret Service men and spotters were keeping their eyes on the convention and that verbatim reports would prevent the possibility of misrepresentation.

"If anybody is reckless enough to say anything he should not," he said, "let him stand for it."

Mr. Gompers declared his disbelief that any delegate was in the pay of a detective agency, and it was finally decided not to publish verbatim reports.

Mr. Gompers's speech to the federation, which is expected to touch on important points of policy, probably will be delivered tomorrow morning.

Donlin's Request Voted Down.

BOSTON, Nov. 13.—No action on the question of calling off strikes at Watertown, Quincy, and on other Government work will be taken here until the delegates from this city to the annual meeting of the American Federation of Labor at Buffalo return and report, it was announced today at the headquarters of the Building Trades Council of Boston and Quincy.

At a meeting of delegates from local bodies a suggestion from John Donlin, International President of the Building Trades Department, that the men return pending adjustment of their grievances, was voted down, according to a statement issued by James Walsh, Chairman of the Publicity Committee.

LONDON PRAISE FOR WILSON.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 14.—The Morning Post today pays a tribute to President Wilson, saying: "We wish some of our own Ministers would acquire President Wilson's knack of saying the right thing at the right time."

The newspaper goes on to say that President Wilson's Buffalo address, although simple in form, was irresistible in its effect. It adds that Premier Lloyd George, who in his Paris speech "made a well-justified if rather a daring contrast between rhetoric and realty, might have illustrated his point from the utterances of President Wilson, who has the rare gift for touching realities in a phrase—a gift that is peculiar to true leadership."

Referring to pacifists, The Morning Post says President Wilson has done more to discredit their always mischievous and sometimes malicious activities than any other influence.

"He has given not only to his own countrymen, but to all the Allies," says the newspaper, "just the forthright and unflinching lead they needed—a lead he always renews unfailingly when it is most needed. As we said, President Wilson is a good man to go tiger hunting with."

The Daily Mail, commenting on the Buffalo speech, says it deserves a high place in the literature of liberty.

"There has been nothing more impressive since the United States entered the war," says The Daily Mail, "than the attitude and demeanor of American labor. The working men and and women of the United States, under the leadership of Samuel Gompers, have displayed the practical patriotism which is the supreme test and proof of American earnestness and American unity."

WILSON ADVICE ENDS STRIKE AT NEWARK

Return of 6,000 Men to Shipbuilding Plants Directly Due to Buffalo Speech.

LEADERS DEMAND ACTION

Business Agents of 20 Unions Direct Employes to Resume Work at Once.

The most momentous immediate result of the President's speech before the convention of the American Federation of Labor at Buffalo yesterday was the return to work of 6,000 men who on Monday had left work on Government shipyards, army supply depots, and storage warehouses near Newark, N. J.

The business agents of twenty unions affected by the strike decided yesterday to direct their men to return to work after telegrams had been received from labor leaders in Buffalo telling of the plan for settling labor troubles with the Government, which had been adopted after the President's speech. The telegram which put an end to the strike was from John Donlin, President of the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor, who reported that a committee had been appointed to confer with President Wilson over the labor situation in Newark. A score of other telegrams were received by local labor leaders in Newark, all in favor of an immediate end of the strike.

The men who returned to work yesterday were 1,500 employes of the Foundation Company, which is building a shipyard in the Kearny Meadows for the construction of wooden ships for the Shipping Board; 3,000 workmen of the Federal Shipbuilding Company, erecting a shipyard in the Kearny Meadows for the same work, and 1,500 employes of Snare & Triest, Inc., which is building storage warehouses for the Quartermaster's Department in the Kearny Meadows. Plans had been made yesterday to call out 2,500 employes of the MacArthur Brothers Corporation, which is building supply depots for the army at the Port Newark Terminal. This strike order was canceled after the news from Buffalo.

The 6,000 who struck were called out, not because they had grievances against the concerns employing them, but by way of a protest to the United States Government against the methods of the Lackawanna Bridge Company, which has been, it was alleged, employing only non-union men. The Lackawanna Company is building a shipyard near Newark for the Submarine Boat Corporation, which has a contract to manufacture a large number of fabricated steel ships of the standard pattern adopted by the Shipping Board.

The Lackawanna Company has 1,200 men employed at present and intends to increase its force to 9,000 men during the month. The union leaders insist that this concern has refused to give employment to union men. Because of the lack of organization of workmen at this plant no strike could be declared, so that the Newark labor leader sought to deliver a blow at it through the sides of the companies employing union men on the Government work.

The Lackawanna Company officials have stated that they would employ union men but would not refuse employment to non-union men. The labor leaders insist that, in nearly every case, the company has rejected union men who applied there for work.

RAID I. W. W. CONVENTION.

Fifty Delegates, Including One Woman, Taken in Custody in Omaha.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 13.—Federal officers and the police today raided a meeting here of the Industrial Workers of the World, arresting about fifty persons.

The meeting was made up of delegates claiming to represent North and South Dakota, Minnesota, and Nebraska. The "convention" met here on Monday, but the proceedings have not been made public.

United States Marshal Flynn, Police Captain Heitfeld, and a posse entered the hall late today, arrested all the delegates, and seized all the records that could be found. The officers declined to state the grounds upon which the raid was made, except that the order came from Washington. The prisoners, including one woman, were held for investigation.

The L. B. Card ledger ideal for mechanical posting

Time is an important factor in accounting work—next to accuracy. More time is wasted in ordinary ledger work in finding an account than in the actual posting.

The L. B. Card ledger cuts down the finding time—the cards have the essential properties for quick handling, the guides make accounts easy to find, and the trays hold the cards in correct working position.

It means accuracy too—every account is automatically kept up-to-date, and daily proved, thus cutting out the chances to make mistakes.

The L. B. Card ledger mechanically posted means speed-with-accuracy. That's why banks and commercial houses everywhere have adopted it.

And that's why you should inquire into it. Our new booklet makes clear its advantages—for all accounting work. A letter or phone call will bring you a copy.

LABOR WANTS DILLON KEPT AS FOOD HEAD

Requests Governor Whitman That He Be Retained in State Service.

ALLEGE UNFAIR TREATMENT

Secretary Betts of State Commission Says He Knows of No Plan to Drop Commissioner.

Through a letter sent yesterday to Charles H. Betts, Secretary of the New York State Food Commission, the Labor Food Conference informed Governor Whitman yesterday that under the reorganization of State departments to comply with the new food law, labor wants John J. Dillon, Commissioner of Food and Markets, retained in the service of the State. The Labor Food Conference is made up of representatives of the Central Federated Union, the Central Labor Union, the United Hebrew Trades, the Labor Forum, and the Women's Trade Union League. It claims a representation of 500,000 labor men and women.

The letter is signed by Carl Beck, Secretary of the conference. He agrees with Mr. Dillon that the administration has slighted the Food and Market Department, and says that the consumers have long wondered why the Department of Agriculture, "with nothing to do," could get $1,500,000 while Dillon was "hamstrung" so he could do little. With a fraction of this money, Mr. Beck says, Mr. Dillon could have built and operated a city pasteurization plant which would have demonstrated what the cost of milk distribution should really be.

"Dealers who list $9,000,000 of their capital as 'good will' and admit they are paying interest on $80,000,000 had their agents at the Milk Committee hearing where Dillon testified to heckle him," said Mr. Beck. "Their interest was to show what it cost to produce milk—well, that it 'cost' all they had been able to get out of the game of distributing it."

Mr. Beck, after charging that Dillon has had to use his entire salary to sustain the work of his department, continues:

> We noted that over $1,000,000 was appropriated for the New York State Food Commission, $500,000 for the State Food Supply Commission, $1,000,000 for the State Defense Council, and $1,000,000 for the Council of Farms and Markets.
>
> In looking up representatives of these various departments, we found that Jacob Gould Schurman was one of the Commissioners of the new State Food Commission. His public reputation as a close associate of organized politicians was such that labor people could not have confidence in his disinterestedness.
>
> The third member of this commission, a former head of the Department of Agriculture, had had over a million a year to spend in that department, and it was precisely because he spent it to produce mountains of pamphlets but no constructive results, that the farmers demanded the creation of Dillon's department.
>
> It was precisely because the people are tired of these everlasting pamphlets that our labor forces turned to Dillon for a program of action which they, with the farmers, now propose to see through to a finish.
>
> Today our labor people when they want to see their Federal food administrator, Arthur Williams, have to enter the offices of a much-distrusted public service corporation, only to find their food administrator ensconsed in one of its inner offices. They find him saying that certain things cannot be done to eliminate middlemen's profits and middemen's power to fix the weal or woe of farm producer and city consumer. Mr. Dillon says they can be done.

It is stated by the Labor Conference that Commissioner Dillon has won the trust of the farmers and of labor in this city because he has tried to do things under a handicap, and because he has not had a square deal from the State Administration. Labor, Mr. Beck says, wants Mr. Betts to understand that there were gross sins of omission in Albany, and that labor had not been blind to them. It is not the intention of the laboring men, for whose interest the conference believes Commissioner Dillon has been working, to see the Commissioner thrown into the discard either for personal reasons or because he is too radical to suit some who do not want existing conditions interferred with.

"We propose to act in this case," continued Mr. Beck, "not as one of politics or personalities, but as one in which this question is involved: Shall the organized farmers up-State and the organized workers in the cities stand by in silence and see the department which has won their confidence by delivering the goods sidetracked and ignored at a time when we need the greatest possible amount of fearless expert service in the food field?"

Labor was also interested and much pleased by a report in an afternoon paper that Mr. Dillon was slated by the new City Administration to succeed Henry Moskowitz as Commissioner of Markets. Judge Hylan said later in the day that he was not going to consider appointments until after the first of the month. Mr. Dillon had not been recommended to him for appointment. Commissioner Dillon laughed when he heard the news.

After Commissioner Dillon testified before the Mayor's Milk Committee several days ago he gave an interview in which he charged Governor Whitman and the State Administration with being unfriendly to his department, and with having handicapped it by indirect legislation and lack of proper appropriation. This statement brought a reply from Secretary Betts of the Food Commission, who said that Mr. Dillon had not been handicapped because of lack of funds. He said that Mr. Dillon had been well treated by the Governor. It was this statement by Mr. Betts that aroused the Labor Conference.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 13.—Secretary Charles H. Betts of the State Food Commission, who was today elected Secretary of the State Council of Foods and Markets, said that at the meeting of the council a resolution was adopted which directed the heads of the various bureaus taken over by the State Council to report to Chairman John Mitchell during the time that the various activities are being classified. So far as Mr. Betts knows there is no disposition to drop John J. Dillon as Commissioner of Foods and Markets. He will be under Mitchell's direction for a time. The letter answering Betts has not been received here.

There is talk here that Calvin J. Huson, former State Commissioner of Agriculture, is to have some position under the new Food Administration. It may be that he is slated for Dillon's job. No one can say positively it this is so.

tary Baker will announce the duty to which the 8,000 men for whom there is no command will be assigned. According to members of the General Staff, these men could be used as additional instructors at the national army camps, and in the opinion of some military experts, should be concentrated in one camp and advanced instruction given to them.

The Adjutant General of the Army has notified commanders of National Guard divisions that reserve officers attached to guard units will be permitted to transfer into guard organizations on their own application, and that those so doing will lose their status as reserve officers. The order provides also that reserve officers attached to guard organizations who do not transfer to the guard will not be eligible for promotion until all surplus guard officers receive active assignments. As it was put in an official statement: "Reserve corps officers are eligible for appointment or promotion in National Guard divisions only after all available and suitable National Guard material in the unit has been utilized."

A great many officers of the National Guard have been left without active duty or command on account of the amalgamation of guard units. Two and sometimes three guard regiments have been merged into one, which left a large number of guard officers without troops. This brought a protest from many quarters, as it was supposed that the surplus guard officers would be dropped from the army rolls or placed on the inactive list, but the War Department now announces that all of the surplus guard officers will be retained. As fast as vacancies occur in guard commands these surplus officers will be provided for, and after all have been assigned the reserve officers attached to National Guard divisions will have their chance.

The announcement of the War Department in this connection reads:

"No National Guard officers rendered surplus in the reorganization will be demoted or discharged as a result of the changes, but all will be utilized in the formation of corps troops, army troops, &c."

The order issued by the War Department and explained in the statement issued this evening disposes of the uncertainty as to the status of reserve officers who remain with National Guard divisions. Those who have elected to retain their status in the Officers' Reserve Corps must wait a long time before they are eligible for advancement, as the policy adopted by the War Department places a check on their promotion until all National Guard officers who were not taken care of in the reorganization of guard units have been assigned to vacancies as they occur. The explanation offered at the War Department for giving this preference to surplus guard officers is that they were entitled to places in the guard and have a prior right to active duty with guard commands.

The status of reserve officers who were assigned to National Guard divisions is thus defined in the statement issued this evening:

"With each National Guard division are about 200 reserve officers commissioned from the first series of officers' training camps. They are placed with the National Guard divisions to give and receive instruction and for practice in exercising command. These officers are not permanently attached, but are being temporarily utilized to fill vacancies in those units or in addition to the regular complement of National Guard officers."

EXHORTS ALBANIANS HERE.

Ismail Kemal Bey, Accepting Leadership, Urges Party Unity.

PARIS, Nov. 13.—Ismail Kemal Bey, former President of the Provisional Government of Albania, has issued a proclamation to the Albanian National Party recently formed in America.

"The ardor of my own patriotism," he says, "is in no need of a stimulant. Nevertheless, the faith reposed in me by the Albanian National Party in America is gratifying. The expression of the desires of our beloved country gives me fresh strength and encouragement to devote the remainder of my days to the defense of our sacred cause under the glorious banner of our immortal hero, Scanderberg, which after five centuries Providence has assigned me the signal honor of once more unfurling. I shall not hesitate a moment to enter into a fresh struggle for the salvation of our beloved country while fortified by the confidence and support of my dear compatriots, nor can I doubt success if only I may count on finding you all united in calling a truce to petty rivalries and quarrels."

After calling on the Albanians in America to unite, the proclamation concludes:

"Thus may we at the termination of the great world war place before the supreme council of the powers, relying on their enlightenment and justice, unanswerable arguments in support of our rights. Thus may we give this council an opportunity of repairing the injustice committed in the amputation of Albania, which is borne by us with such resignation. Thus will the restitution of our territorial integrity and our national independence offer a solid guarantee of equilibrium and peace for the people in the Balkans."

The proclamation of Ismail Kemal Bey was in response to a formal request from the Albanian National Party, which numbers 70,000 and is regarded as representative of Albanians throughout the world, that he lead the nation in defense of its political and territorial independence.

WOMEN TO DEMAND PLACE ON JURIES

MEAN TO RUN FOR OFFICE

Already Their Eyes Are Fixed On the Governor's Mansion and the City Hall.

WANT TO GET ON "FORCE"

Brooklyn Suffragists Will Ask Appointment as Policewomen to Do Patrol Duty.

Enfranchised women will make a concerted move soon after the Legislature meets to secure to themselves the right to sit on juries. Already steps are being taken toward the drafting of a bill to remove what some women term the "last remaining civil disability" of their sex.

In the absence of any provision either in the organic or the statutory law to prevent women from becoming candidates for or holding any office filled by election or appointment, it is now assumed by leaders among the women who have fought so hard and successfully for the ballot that it will be within their power to nominate and if they can gain the necessary support, elect a woman Governor of the State of New York or a Mayor of the City of New York.

Members of the legal profession who have given study to the subject agree with the woman leaders. In fact, women running for office in this State, even before women were accorded the right to vote has not been an unusual feature, though no woman has ever received a sufficient number of votes to be elected. The Socialists, with women always a factor in their party management, in 1914 nominated a woman for Secretary of State. In this year's election the Socialists had several women candidates for the Assembly, nominated from districts in this city.

The present disability of women to do jury duty is due to a provision of the Civil Code embodied in Section 1,027, which holds that "in order to be qualified to serve as a trial juror in a court of record a person must be a male citizen of the United States" as well as a resident of the county in which the court where the juror serves exercises jurisdiction. Lawyers who were questioned regarding the expediency of admitting women to jury duty said yesterday that undoubtedly it would be done whether the men wanted it or not. No strenuous objections are expected either from the lawmakers or the courts.

Ex-Senator William B. Carswell of Kings, a lawyer who has given some study to the subject, said last night that the inadmissibility of women to jury duty under the present law should not be regarded as a civil disability peculiar to women, because the qualifications established by law excluded some men as well as all women.

"To characterize it as a civil disability would be far too broad," said Mr. Carswell. "There is no doubt that with the women enfranchised the right and—it should be added—the duty of serving on juries should be conferred and imposed on women by legislation. I do not believe, however, that in the case of women it should be made compulsory. The legislation should provide for an added right, instead of an added burden. Women who desire to be freed from jury duty should be freed on application."

Mayor-elect John F. Hylan, who is already committed to a plan of giving women representation on the Board of Education and possibly on the Civil Service Commission, more than intimated yesterday that there might be other women appointees, though he was not prepared to make any detailed statement regarding places in the City Government that women might fill after Jan. 1.

"Do you think women would be of aid to you as heads of departments?" the Mayor-elect was asked.

"They are a help, no matter in what capacity they serve," said Judge Hylan with a smile. The Mayor-elect, both as City Magistrate and as County Judge, has advocated the wider employment of women in probationary work with the courts. He said yesterday that he had never had reason to regret what he had done in this direction. Supposedly inspired by the suffrage victory, women of Brooklyn have started a movement to have the incoming City Administration appoint members of their sex to the police force for patrol duty. The People's Equality League, which is composed of women voters, has decided to petition Mayor-elect Hylan to appoint policewomen when he takes office. The members of the league think that women can do certain patrol work and other duties in the Police Department as well as men.

Governor Whitman has been added to the list of speakers at the "victory meeting" to be held at the Metropolitan Opera House next Tuesday evening under the auspices of the Woman Suffrage Party. At the meeting which will be the opening event of the New York State Woman Suffrage Convention, Dr. Anna Howard Shaw and Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt will also deliver addresses. At the convention proper, which will be held at the Ritz-Carlton, beginning a week from today, steps will be taken to amend the Constitution of the Woman Suffrage Party so as to conform to new conditions and there will be a general discussion by the women of "how to make themselves most useful to the State, to the women who are still unenfranchised, and to the country at large."

Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes was the guest of the Women's Republican Club at its meeting held yesterday at Delmonico's. Mrs. James Griswold Wentz, President of the club, deplored, amid applause, the recent Tammany landslide and urged the Republican women within her hearing to remain true to their party colors.

Women in this city are already beginning to look about for a political education, according to statements made in the suffrage camp. Since election hundreds of letters have reached the headquarters of the New York City Woman Suffrage Party, at 3 East Thirty-eighth Street, asking for instructions in citizenship and suggesting that regular classes be started for the purpose.

"These requests come from women in all walks of life—from society women, professional women, and from women on the east side, who ask that classes be held in the nearest settlement," said Mrs. Thomas B. Wells, Secretary of the City Party. These requests are offset by the offers of other women to act as instructors. Teachers and college graduates are coming forward eagerly to do their bit in helping the new voter to understand civil government and party policies.

"The need of a Bureau of Information is borne in on us through the requests of numbers of women to us to define their status. Some are American-born women married to foreigners, others are the widows of foreigners. One has lost her husband by death and wants to know if she reverts to her American citizenship. Another is divorced or separated. One young Austrian had a father who was naturalized and voted, but she has no record of this. Will she have to be naturalized? These are the kind of questions with which we are deluged. We are convinced that if we go quietly on with our plans to give an educational course we are supplying a great demand."

Since the woman suffrage amendment was ratified at the polls the number of women who have applied for their first papers at the county naturalization bureau has increased from the normal 2 per cent. of the total number of applicants to about 11 per cent. During the last five days fifty-nine women have taken out their first papers and the daily number has been steadily growing. Clerks in the bureau said yesterday that they had talked with a number of the women seeking to become citizens and that they explained that they want to exercise the new privileges which the voters have conferred upon them.

Among the applicants yesterday were two maids employed by the wife of a Supreme Court Justice, who is an ardent suffragist. She had advised the maids to become naturalized so that they could exercise the right to vote. Many of the other applicants occupy similar places in the homes of well-to-do women interested in suffrage, and it was said that their presence in the bureau was due to suggestions made by their employers.

MAY AMEND CONSTITUTION.

Bay State Convention Has Proposition Before It.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Nov. 13.—While New York's suffrage victory has encouraged the suffrage force in Massachusetts, it is felt by those in closest touch with the movement here that the Bay State will be one of the last to adopt woman suffrage, if left to its own initiative.

The State Constitutional Convention now in session has before it an amendment which would grant full suffrage to women. This, if adopted as expected, as expected, will be submitted to the voters of the State for ratification at next November's election.

WHITE HOUSE PICKETS HELD WITHOUT BAIL

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Thirty-one militant suffragists, members of the Woman's Party, most of whom were arrested for picketing last Saturday and yesterday, almost caused a riot in front of the White House this afternoon. These women had been convicted of obstructing traffic, but their sentences were suspended. Expecting that there would be no further picketing the police failed to appear at the White House this afternoon when the suffragists made their demonstration.

The banner bearers rushed from their headquarters half a block away and paraded unmolested before the gates of the White House for some time. As the crowds poured from the Government departments and packed the street, boys set upon the women and tore down their banners. Some of the women in defending themselves were roughly handled. When the police arrived the disorder had subsided. They arrested the women and took them in patrol wagons to the House of Detention, where they were locked up. Bail was refused. Suffrage leaders demanded of the police that they arrest the boys who had attacked the pickets, but the police said they were unable to find anybody who had torn down the banners.

With few exceptions the women arrested tonight figured in the picketing Saturday and yesterday. The New York women arrested this afternoon were Mrs. John Winters Brannan, Miss Belle Sheinberg, Miss L. H. Hornesby, Miss Dorothy Day, Mrs. Henry Butterworth, Miss Cora Week, Mrs. P. B. Jones, Miss Hilda Blumberg, and Miss Matilda Young of New York City, and Miss Amy Jungling and Miss Hattie Kruger of Buffalo.

Dudley Field Malone of New York, personal counsel for Miss Alice Paul, who is serving a seven-month sentence and being forcibly fed in the District of Columbia Jail, had a conference with his client today. Miss Rose Winslow, another suffragist, is also on a hunger strike and is being fed by force. Speaking of his visit, Mr. Malone said:

"Miss Paul and Miss Winslow both are very weak and are being forcibly fed. They are resisting food as a protest against the failure of the Government to treat as political offenders women who are arrested for demanding the passage of the Federal suffrage amendment.

"I was shocked to find that Miss Paul, because she is the leader of the National Woman's Party, had been singled out from among the other suffragists and transferred to the psychopathic ward, in spite of her demand first to see her personal physician and her attorney.

"Miss Paul is imprisoned in a room in the midst of insane patients, whose shrieks she can hear day and night. For fear she may not hear them the door of her room has been taken off. One of the windows has been boarded up with heavy wooden shutters, and the other one cannot be opened to let in air, so that most of the air must come from the inside halls of the building. Against her protests, alienists have repeatedly been sent to interview Miss Paul and have even brought with them a stenographer to take down what she says.

"I talked with Miss Paul for an hour and a half, and she is more sane than any of the administration officials who have been responsible for this outrage. I demanded of the Warden that this malicious attempt to discredit Miss Paul's leadership and to reflect on her sanity in placing her in the psychopathic ward, surrounded by maniacs, cease at once, and that she be removed forthwith. If this is not done, I shall appeal to the court for relief from this unspeakable situation.

"It is time that the sportsmanship and gallantry of American men and that the humanity and political power of the women voters of the State of New York and of the Western States spoke out against this conduct of the Government."

Mrs. William L. Colt, one of the pickets recently arrested at the White House and now out on suspended sentence, was at the New York headquarters of the National Woman's Party yesterday, saying that the authorities at Washington had no fixed policy in their treatment of the suffrage pickets and were guided by no law.

"The whole thing is a farce," said Mrs. Colt. "I have picketed repeatedly since Jan. 10 and had no trouble. I led the first group of pickets which went out the first day after the first sixteen women were released from Occoquan by the President's pardon. On that day we walked from Cameron House to the White House gates and stood unmolested by public or police from midday until 5 P. M. On the following day another group, carrying the same banners which we carried, went out and were arrested and sentenced to thirty days which they served in the work house at Occoquan."

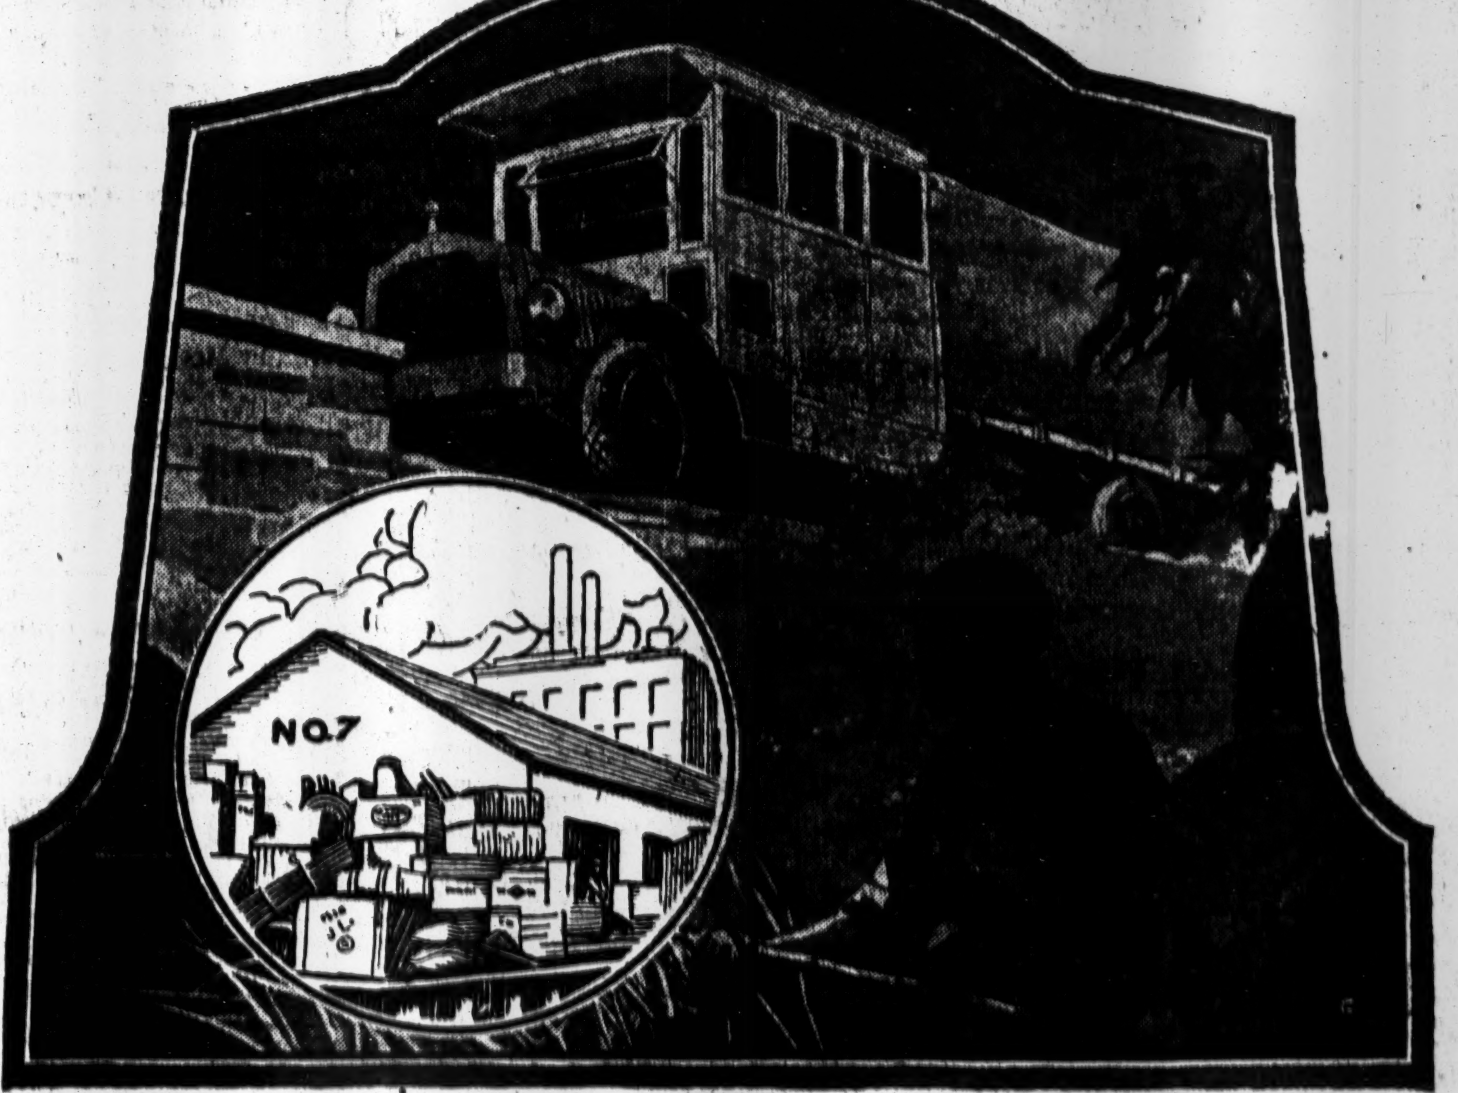
PACKARD TRUCKS



Your own freight line! Packard direct shipments cut costs and delays.

"Help!" the railroads cry to shippers. "You must lift the load which war traffic has dumped on us."

The American Railway Association is now urging business men to "eliminate the use of railway equipment when the tonnage can be handled by motor trucks."

Hauls up to forty miles, it is suggested, should be made with trucks, in order to lessen congestion and release cars and locomotives needed for imperative shipments.

Foreseeing this congestion, hundreds of executives have already made their businesses independent of traffic delays by installing Packards.

On long hauls—and short—experience and cost sheets have satisfied them that Packard silent, chainless trucks provide faster, cheaper and more certain transportation.

WOMEN GOING SLOW IN PLEDGING VOTES

AWAIT CONVENTION'S ACTION

Many Leaders Realize Power They Would Hold by Maintaining Present Organizations.

Dispatches received from correspondents of THE NEW YORK TIMES in political centres of the State indicate that the newly enfranchised women are in no haste to divide on party lines and align themselves with the political organizations managed by men. The general outlook up-State is that the women who formerly worked as a unit to obtain the ballot for their sex are determined to go slow, and in any event to take no decisive step toward a new alignment until they have had ample opportunity to deliberate upon their future plans. This opportunity will be afforded by the Woman Suffrage Convention to be held in this city next week.

Among the woman leaders, who until the ratification of the woman suffrage amendment a week ago were workers for the suffrage cause, there seems to be a general realization of the fact that with the ballot the women have nothing to gain by disbanding and joining existing political organizations, while by maintaining their present organizations intact they may be in a position to hold the balance of power for many elections to come. They will have every right in the exercise of their suffrage by staying out of the men's organizations that they could obtain by joining them.

Conference Called at Poughkeepsie.

Special to The New York Times.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Nov. 13.—A Suffrage Party conference will be held at the Court House in this city Thursday afternoon to discuss the many problems to be worked out as a result of the victory at the polls last week. Delegates will be present from all the counties of this district, Dutchess, Putnam, Columbia, Ulster, and Greene.

Mrs. A. Gordon Norrie of Staatsburg, Chairman, will preside. Mrs. William C. Mattern, Secretary of the Suffrage Party for this county, stated tonight that the Suffrage Party would continue its organization here on a nonpartisan basis, working for the Federal amendment and for the good of the suffrage cause. It was her view that the part that the women would play in the political party organizations would depend upon the attitude of these organizations and the desires of the women as individuals.

Thaddeus J. Herrick, Chairman of the Dutchess County Democratic Committee, favors separate county and city organizations for the women in each of the parties. However, no definite action has been taken by either the Republican or Democratic Party. Willet B. Hoysradt, Chairman of the Republican County Committee, said the Republican organization would be glad to invite the women to enter into the councils of the party, but he doubted whether they would care to take as active a part here in party politics as in New York. It would depend to a large extent upon the wishes of the women voters themselves, he said. There is a Republican Club here with over 1,000 members, and Mr. Hoysradt said he was sure Republican women would be welcomed into its membership.

Yonkers Women Undecided.

Special to The New York Times.

YONKERS, N. Y., Nov. 13.—Mrs. William H. Ives, leader of the Yonkers branch of the Woman Suffrage Party, said tonight that the members had not yet decided whether to maintain their present organization independent of all political parties or to disband and form auxiliaries of the various political clubs here. A tentative decision will very likely be made at an executive meeting tomorrow morning. The sentiment among the members seems to favor the continuation of the suffrage party as a separate organization. Other prominent leaders have stated their opinion in opposition to any move toward disorganization as playing directly into the politicians' hands.

No Change in Orange County.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWBURG, N. Y., Nov 13.—So far as Newburg and Orange County are concerned no action has been taken by old party leaders to win the votes of the women, nor will they reveal what their next step will be. This will be decided at the convention of the County Committees of the two organizations later on. The leaders say there is no necessity for haste, and nothing will be done without counsel with the State Committee.

This is practically the case with the suffragists, who say they will hold aloof from making any changes until the convention in New York City next week. The local suffrage body will retain its organization for educational purposes. Mrs. Morrison, a leading suffragist, says there has been no overtures made by the old parties, and the question of a new woman's party or of dividing with the male parties will be settled by the State delegates.

Marking Time at Albany.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Nov. 13.—Albany County political leaders have done nothing toward gaining the support of the women voters, and although the Republican organization has informally discussed several plans nothing definite will be done until State leaders have a conference. It is understood that this will shortly be called and that legislation necessary before women can participate in primaries, enrollment, and registration will be arranged for. There has been nothing done by the Democratic organization to gain the votes of the women.

Until the New York State suffrage party maps out its line of work at the State convention to be held at the Hotel Astor in New York next week Albany members of the party will wait. Officials of the Albany County organization said tonight that no plans have been made as yet for joining any of the existing political parties, but that when the convention is over the local organizations will go to work along the lines that are there suggested. Meanwhile the local organization is seeking larger quarters.

On the Fence in Rochester.

Special to The New York Times.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 13.—The various political parties in Monroe County are doing what they can to attract the suffragists. At the jubilee meeting held in Convention Hall last Friday night the women voters heard representatives of all political parties. No plans have yet been made by the suffrage leaders or the antis regarding a separate party organization, or as to how the women are to align in the election next Fall. The leaders have advised some of the women to go slow and not make any promises of support to any party. The local Socialists claim the credit of getting the vote for the women and claim their support in return, but the Socialists oppose prohibition and rigid supervision of the liquor traffic, and because of this it is believed the women will not join with them.

The local leaders of the Woman Suffrage Party here decline to outline any plans as to the future, as they declare none has been agreed upon. It is believed that the women of Rochester will divide up among the parties just as the men do, and except at the special election scheduled for next April, there will be about the same vote multiplied by two. It is expected that the bulk of the woman's vote here will be cast for a dry city.

Syracuse Women in Doubt.

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 13.—No formal steps have been taken by political leaders here to get the woman votes, but questions as to the best methods for gaining suffragist support at the polls and aligning the new electors with existing organizations have been discussed. The plan which seems to find most favor with conservative politicians of the old parties is not to have women representatives in county and city committees, but to form auxiliary organizations. In this way men and women Republicans or Democrats, while working in harmony, would have separate fields of activity. Prominent suffragists in Central New York are up in the air as to the question of maintaining a separate party or affiliating with other political organizations. It is probable they will wait consideration of the matter by State leaders, abiding by their decision.

Women Want Their Own Party.

Special to The New York Times.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Nov. 13.—The leading political parties in Chemung County have been inert on the woman suffrage issue since election. The women have no settled policy but are arranging a banquet when the matter will be discussed. The present plan is to have a so-called woman suffrage party open to both men and women. The women will take up issues appertaining to subjects they espouse and seek not only to hold the women as a unit but to win men to their cause.

Local leaders assert the scheme will be State wide and declare they will not affiliate with the old parties. Leaders of Democratic and Republican organizations stated that nothing had been done to encourage the women to take their place as Democratic or Republican party adherents. Chemung County was opposed to woman suffrage by a majority of approximately seven hundred and the men do not believe the women will exert much influence in local politics. Saloon men, however, anticipate that women will place Elmira in the dry column next Spring.

Keeping from Old Parties.

Special to The New York Times.

HORNELL, N. Y., Nov. 13.—"The women of the State certainly will affiliate with no party for the present," declared Mrs. Sarah Smith, the Steuben County Chairman, this evening, following a meeting of local suffragists to discuss that question. "We have received instructions from the suffrage headquarters to hold ourselves aloof from political alliances for the present. We will form a civic union in every city in the State, and we expect to have enough voters enrolled in it to make it of great importance everywhere. Later we may join with some other parties, but the intention for the present is to keep free from all political entanglements."

Chairman B. C. Dewitt of the Republican committee and Chairman Floyd Whitman of the Democratic committee, expressed the opinion that there would be no affiliation of the women with either party until the women had struck the best bargain possible.

Will Enroll with the Men.

Special to The New York Times.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Nov. 13.—The women voters of Broome County will not form a separate political organization, nor will they favor such a step when they meet in conference with other women leaders of the State in New York next week, according to the suffrage leaders here. Mrs. George W. Topliff, who is one of the State Chairmen of the suffragists, Mrs. H. M. Gitchell, and other suffrage leaders were emphatic in their declaration that the women of this section would affiliate with the other parties.

Neither the Republicans or Democratic leaders in Broome County have made any overtures for the women's votes so far, but the women are prepared to enroll with these parties, nevertheless, and as one of the leaders expressed herself, "there are some things in the management of these parties we propose to straighten out." For five years there has been a lively factional fight between the Republican organization in Broome County, led by ex-Senator Hinman and a wing of the Republican Party led by Senator William H. Hill. At the last primaries the organization won by a small margin. Senator Hill has always been aligned with woman suffrage, while ex-Senator Hinman has not been. Senator Hill has announced he will introduce a bill in the Legislature not only enabling the women to vote at the local option election this Spring, but to enroll for the Fall primary. This the Hill supporters believe will align the women of Broome County strongly on their side and give them control of the organization.

U. S. Commissioner Issues Warrant for Missing Agent of Bankers Life Co.

LONG UNDER SUSPICION

Insurance Superintendent Began Investigation Soon After First Liberty Loan.

On the charge that he used the mails to defraud investors in Liberty bonds, a warrant was issued yesterday for the arrest of Elmer Dwiggins, general agent here for the Bankers Life Insurance Company. The warrant was signed by United States Commissioner Samuel M. Hitchcock following an investigation into the activities of Dwiggins and his so-called "Liberty Loan Extension Club." Since his disappearance last Saturday, nothing has been heard of the missing agent.

The investigation into Dwiggins's affairs, it was admitted by Federal authorities yesterday, has been continued along lines which will show whether there was any connection in the Liberty bond selling campaign conducted by its agents and the home offices of the Bankers Life Insurance Company. Officials of the company from Des Moines are expected in this city tomorrow, among them I. N. Earle, one of the Vice Presidents. It is expected that, even though no legal grounds for holding the company responsible for the actions of its agent in getting people to subscribe to Liberty Bonds on a partial payment plan devised by himself, yet it will be pointed out that the name of the Bankers Life was used throughout by Dwiggins to attract investors and to give an apparent guarantee of the safety of the investment.

"In the matter of the dealings of Elmer Dwiggins of the Bankers Life Insurance Company, 165 Broadway, the officers of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York make the following statement to correct certain misapprehensions which may have been caused by the various publications that have been made in the newspapers:

"'After several inquiries had been received by the staff of the Liberty Loan Committee concerning the activities conducted by Mr. Dwiggins under the name of the so-called "Liberty Loan Extension Club" at the offices of the Bankers Life Insurance Company, the Federal Reserve Bank caused some investigations to be made, which resulted in the bank's laying the matter before Mr. Knox, Assistant United States Attorney. Further investigation was made by a Post Office Inspector, accompanied by several employes of the Federal Reserve Bank, under the general direction of the United States Attorney's office. During the course of these investigations Mr. Dwiggins disappeared. The Federal Reserve Bank, the United States Attorney's office, and the Post Office Inspectors are all co-operating to conserve the assets for the benefit of the members of the so-called "Liberty Loan Extension Club" and are also conducting further inquiries to ascertain the responsibility in the matter of the Bankers Life Insurance Company. The representatives of the insurance company are expected to arrive in this city tomorrow.'

"It should also be noted that Mr. Dwiggins was not either requested or authorized to solicit subscriptions for Liberty Loan bonds by either the Federal Reserve Bank of New York or by the Liberty Loan Committee of this district."

All day yesterday investors in his scheme filled the offices of the Bankers Life at 165 Broadway. Each was told by Lee J. Wolfe, Consulting Actuary of the company, who has taken charge of the office since Dwiggins's disappearance, to come again on Friday. There was practically no disorder, and, except for one or two women, there was little excitement.

Correspondence between Jesse M. Phillips, State Superintendent of Insurance, and the Bankers Life Company and between Superintendent Phillips and Dwiggins, written last Summer, showed that fear of Dwiggins by the State authorities was only soothed by the statement from Mr. Earle for the company that "the Bankers Life would not permit an investor to lose by participating in Dwiggins's plan."

On June 25 Superintendent Phillips wrote to Mr. Earle of the Bankers Life, urging that the insurance company take steps to protect investors in Dwiggins's Liberty Loan plans. The letter contained this paragraph:

"In which event, (in case of loss of investment,) the people who will suffer loss will be in most cases poor people who are paying a few dollars a week from their savings."

In reply Mr. Earle wrote that the Dwiggins club was not a Bankers Life affair. He said that the company had asked its agencies to do everything possible to help the Government in the flotation of Liberty bonds, but that the method of getting subscriptions was the business of each agent. He pointed out that the Irving National Bank here, the depositary of the company, was the real instrumentality through which the bonds were taken, carried, and paid for. In another letter Mr. Earle wrote the Superintendent as follows:

"As I stated in my former letter it is not a Bankers Life proposition at all. But this company could not permit any one to lose through Mr. Dwiggins's plan."

Superintendent Phillips also wrote to the State Insurance Department of Iowa. He was told by Superintendent Emory R. English that the Bankers Life Company had told him that while they did not regard Dwiggins's plan as their proposition, yet they would not let any one lose through participating in it.

The New York State Insurance Department also wrote Dwiggins in regard to his plan, and were told by the agent that what he was doing was a patriotic act. In his letter to Superintendent Phillips, Dwiggins explained that he had received a letter from his home office outlining to him the plan of getting Liberty bond subscriptions carried out by the Des Moines office. He explained that he had got bonds from the Irving National Bank, paying 10 per cent. down and giving his note for the other 90 per cent. He asserted that the money the Liberty Loan investors paid him was kept in the Irving Bank in a separate account.

It was stated at the Irving National Bank yesterday that Dwiggins had bought $118,000 worth of bonds of the first issue through the Irving National, and $200,000 worth of the second. He had also, it was said, bought another $50,000 worth of the later issue through the National City Bank. About two weeks ago the Federal Reserve Bank reported to the Irving National that Dwiggins was using paid solicitors, and the bank thereupon forced him to cancel his order. It was decided at the bank that Dwiggins had any separate deposit for Liberty bonds subscribers' money. He had two accounts, one belonging to the Bankers Life and one of his own.

Laurence Priddy, President of the National Association of Life Underwriters, notified THE TIMES last night that Dwiggins was not a member of the association, and had not been authorized by the association to sell Liberty bonds.

Robert B. Brodie, Acting Principal of Public School 62, where, it was said yesterday that Dwiggins had sold some of his membership cards, denied the report. He said the school had dealt exclusively with regularly authorized banks.

The Federal officials investigating Dwiggins have found $15,000 which he kept on deposit with a Wall Street brokerage house. If this money is held by the authorities it will lessen the discrepancy to $58,000.

INDICTED FOR SEIZING COAL.

Officials of Willoughby, O., Charged with Impeding Trains.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Nov. 13.—Coal seizures in times of urgent need went under the ban today when the Federal Grand Jury reported indictments against Mayor Carmichael of Willoughby, Ohio, Prosecuting Attorney George C. Von Beseler, and Deputy Marshals James Barnes and Grant Lamos for impeding interstate commerce shipments and for conspiracy to commit such acts. All are charged with seizing New York Central Railroad coal Nov. 1, and 2.

Action by the Grand Jury follows the announcement a few weeks ago by District Attorney Wertz that city and county officials have no right to confiscate coal and that the law which forbids such confiscation must be obeyed.

Several freight trains were held up at Willoughby, the indictments charge, and engineers and conductors were arrested. Mayor Carmichael, it is stated, was told by Prosecutor Von Beseler that he had a right to confiscate coal and that the law of humanity was greater than that of the Government.

The Mayor, Prosecuting Attorney, and Deputy Marshals would face, if convicted of conspiracy, penalties of $10,000 fine, two years' imprisonment, or both. If convicted of holding up the trains, with which another set of indictments charges them, they would be liable to fines of $100 and six months' imprisonment, or both.

WORK ON CATHEDRAL IS HALTED BY WAR

Dean Robbins Makes Announcement at Opening of Diocesan Convention.

WILL WAIT FOR VICTORY

Then, He Adds, St. John Nave Will Be New York's Thank Offering for Peace.

The Cathedral of St. John the Divine is to go unfinished until the war is ended. All work on the great structure, upon which many millions already have been spent, is to halt until the coming of an American victory, and then is to be rushed to completion at high pressure, that the cathedral may be the centre of a great devotional celebration of permanent peace. It was at the opening of the 134th annual convention of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of New York in Synod Hall at the cathedral yesterday that Dean Howard Chandler Robbins made know that program, to the evident approval of the delegates.

"The Cathedral of St. John the Divine," said Dr. Robbins, "is to be a new world cathedral, adaptable to new conditions and congenial to American democracy in every fibre of its being. That is what decides our policy in regard to building. While our country is in arms, fighting in defense of every liberty that makes human life worth living, we cannot, for patriotic reasons, go on building. We cannot divert any of the energies or any of the resources that can be put into the winning of the war.

"But the war is not going to last forever. It will end in just one way, because the American people have decided to stay with it until it has been ended in that one thinkable way. When that time comes, the cathedral will have a great right of way over every other building operation in New York, because we shall want the cathedral nave to be the thank offering of the City of New York for peace with victory. We shall want it to be an act of corporate thanksgiving to One who, in giving victory to the cause of freedom, will be giving us peace that shall endure."

Bishop David H. Greer presided at the opening business session, which followed the holy communion service in the cathedral, at which he officiated, assisted by Bishop Charles S. Burch, Dean Robbins, Archdeacon William H. Pott, and the Rev. Dr. George Nelson. The convention adopted a constitutional amendment changing the fiscal year to conform with the calendar and dating the annual convention in May instead of November.

A loyalty resolution, introduced by the Rev. Dr. Stires of St. Thomas's, reviewed in its preamble the circumstances attendant upon America's reluctant entrance into the war, and concluded with a pledge of whole-hearted loyalty to the Administration on the part of the diocese. It was carried unanimously.

There was adopted a resolution in favor of a Congressional enactment to provide an army Chaplain for every 1,400 men in the army. Bishop William Lawrence of Massachusetts, telling of the work of the war commission of the Church, said in many camps, with 12,000 to 40,000 men in training, there were but one to four army Chaplains. He announced that, beginning next January, the Church would appeal for $500,000 for its welfare work among the soldiers. A reception was given to the members of the convention at the cathedral last night. The sessions continue today.

Walter Pulitzer Found Guilty.

Walter Pulitzer of 2,025 Broadway was found guilty yesterday in Special Sessions of having indecent pictures in his possession. Charles J. Bamberger, an agent for the Society for the Suppression of Vice, testified that he had gained entrance to Pulitzer's apartment by pretending that he wanted to buy furniture, and that he had bought the picture for $2. Walter Pulitzer is not connected with The New York World, which is owned by the family of the late Joseph Pulitzer.

TUMULTY DENOUNCES CANARD OF ARREST

GAINED WIDE CIRCULATION

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Angered and chagrined over a false charge that has obtained wide currency in the country, Joseph P. Tumulty, Secretary to the President, issued a formal statement tonight denouncing what is believed to be a systematic effort to injure the Administration by the persistent circulation of a report that Mr. Tumulty had been arrested for treason. The statement issued by Mr. Tumulty, which he sent to THE NEW YORK TIMES Washington Bureau from the White House this evening, reads:

"For several days friends have written, telegraphed, and telephoned me from all parts of the country stating that rumors are being assiduously spread alleging that I have been imprisoned at Fort Leavenworth. All sorts of fanciful tales are being passed from mouth to mouth by innocent persons, who are the victims of a systematic and insidious propaganda to weaken confidence in officials of the Federal Government. Officials of the Department of Justice are investigating the origin of this conspiracy, to determine who has been guilty of actually starting this falsehood."

THE TIMES correspondent saw Mr. Tumulty this afternoon. He had been receiving telegrams and long-distance telephone calls all day from persons who wanted him to know that the report that he had been arrested as a spy was being circulated in their respective localities.

How the story originated has not been ascertained. Agents of the Department of Justice are now engaged in a determined effort to get at the bottom of the canard.

Mr. Tumulty was on the point of issuing a statement last Saturday concerning the report. He received on that day a letter stating that at a meeting of bankers in Minneapolis ex-Governor Hanna of North Dakota had declared that Mr. Tumulty had been shot as a spy. It was decided, however, that any general notice of the matter in the press would only give the falsehood wider publicity. So far as the White House and the Department of Justice know, only one newspaper has given any currency to the rumor. In this newspaper it was credited to a militant suffragist who was quoted as saying that she had heard that Mr. Tumulty had been arrested as a spy. When the evidence has been collected Mr. Tumulty will take counsel as to the course to be followed to bring action against those who have been engaged in circulating the libel.

While the origin of the story is unknown, it is said to have obtained its original circulation through a message sent over a stock broker's wire from New York to Chicago.

RAILWAY MEN VOTE ON WAGE DEMAND

liminary to a strike vote. The brotherhoods are following their usual procedure of voting the men on the demands first, and then taking a strike vote if the railroads refuse the demands. When the brotherhood heads met the railroad managers in June of 1916 and first made their demands for the eight-hour day, no strike vote had been taken, and when the railroads refused the demands an adjournment was taken until August, when the labor leaders came to New York with the power to call a strike if the demands were not granted. It was when negotiations failed and a strike was impending that President Wilson stepped in, and as a result the Adamson law was enacted. The movement at that time was on behalf of the whole membership of the four brotherhoods—conductors, firemen, trainmen, and engineers—totaling between 300,000 and 400,000 men.

"It would be a waste of effort at a time like this, when the railroads are struggling to carry the great volume of war traffic, to attempt to settle this new controversy by the long-drawn-out method of former years. The eight-hour controversy dragged along for two years, and the patience of the public was severely tried. I do not believe the country would stand for such a thing when all our energies must be devoted to the big job we have in winning the war.

"Immediately after our entrance into the war the railroads put themselves unreservedly at the service of the Government, and under the direction of the Railroads' War Board at Washington the entire transportation system of the country is being operated as an arm of national defense.

"If the train employes deserve to have $100,000,000 added to their wages in addition to the $60,000,000 gained under the Adamson act, with the almost certain after-development that the engineers and firemen would follow with a demand for a parallel increase that would amount to $70,000,000 more, then it is up to the Government to instruct the railroads as to what course to pursue.

"When Congress passed the Adamson act, and when the Supreme Court sustained the power of Congress to fix railroad wages to avoid a nation-wide strike, the power of the managers to meet these nation-wide demands was taken from them. The ordinary increases in wages for various classes of railroad workers can be handled by the managements, but concerted demands like these, running into $100,000,000 at a time, are now up to Congress and the National Government."

The four brotherhood leaders, themselves, according to advices received by railroad officials, were personally opposed to the promulgation of wage demands at this time, so soon after the victory of the Adamson law, but Mr. Lee and Mr. Garretson, it is said, found that they had either to approve the new demands or give way to more radical leaders of the brotherhoods. It is understood that at the recent meeting of the Grand Lodge officers of the conductors and trainmen at Chicago, some of the leaders denounced the proposed demands as beyond reason, considering the very large increases received under the Eight-Hour act. Railroad officials at that time got information that wage demands were proposed, but had no idea they would be so large. It was stated last night that never before had a body of workers in America made demands for so large an increase.

The eight-hour negotiations were conducted for the railroads by the National Conference Committee of the Railways, headed by Elisha Lee, now General Manager of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and acting Vice President in the absence of W. W. Atterbury, who is in charge of railroad work in France for the United States Government. Mr. Lee's Committee is still in existence, and to it the demands of the brotherhoods, if approved, will in all probability be submitted. It was said last night that it was probable that when the committee of managers received the demands they would refer them at once to the Council of National Defense.

In March last, when the railroad brotherhoods called a strike during negotiations with the carriers, Mr. Lee of the trainmen gave as a reason for the haste that, if the unions did not get the eight-hour day before this country entered the war, they would have to wait until after the war, because the nation would not countenance a strike while it was at war.

"This country is in danger of war," he said at that time. "We may go to war next week, next month, any time. If America goes to war, the men know that, as patriotic citizens, they must stick to their jobs."

It was learned last night that the brotherhoods expect to have the vote completed and canvassed by Nov. 25, and if the demands are approved they will be submitted on Dec. 1, to become effective as of Jan. 1, 1918. The Adamson law went into effect last March as of Jan. 1, 1917.

The DUO-ART
PIANO

THE DUO-ART is a new type of pianoforte. Like that well-known instrument, it answers to the touch of the pianist's fingers upon its keyboard. In tone and in form it is a pianoforte of the highest modern development.

But unlike the piano, the Duo-Art is not a passive instrument whose voice is lifted only at command of the gifted artist's agile hands. The sensitive Duo-Art action guided by Duo-Art Records of the finest interpretations by the world's greatest pianists, reproduces these performances with such perfect mimicry as almost to outrival the artist's recitals in the concert halls.

The Duo-Art immortalizes the fine art of pianism—makes its rarest and highest examples available in the home. And it is yet an instrument for self-expression, a piano or player-piano, a new and perfected player-piano far in advance of any other instrument of the type. The Duo-Art is made in Steinway, Weber, Steck and Stroud models.

OSSIP GABRILOWITSCH

"I have found the Duo-Art Piano flexible and adequate in its powers. I have been able to secure in my recorded interpretations very complete representations of my intentions."

DUO-ART RECITAL

There will be an informal Musicale this afternoon at three o'clock in our Duo-Art Salon. Recordings will be played on the Duo-Art Piano by Harold Bauer, Rudolph Ganz, Ossip Gabrilowitsch, Percy Grainger, Enrique Granados, Madam Carreno and other celebrated pianists. A well-known Duo-Art Artist will play in person. Admission without charge.

GUARD DIVISION PLANS COMPLETED

HOW EASTERN TROOPS FARE

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—The War Department has virtually completed its plans for the reorganization of the sixteen National Guard divisions now being trained for service in France, and today announced the result for half of the guard forces of the country. The plans for the reorganization of the New York National Guard division—the Twenty-seventh Division—probably will be announced tomorrow.

The reorganized Twenty-sixth, or New England Division, commanded by Major Gen. Clarence Edwards, utilizes troops from the Fifth and Sixth Massachusetts Infantry, the First Connecticut Infantry, the First Vermont Infanty, the First New Hampshire Infantry, the Second Massachusetts Infantry, part of the Eighth Massachusetts Infantry, and the Second Maine Infantry in forming the four infantry regiments of this division. The announcement shows that the surplus troops of these infantry regiments have been assigned to the depot brigade of the new division.

The Twenty-eighth Division will be composed wholly of troops from Pennsylvania, and has been formed out of the old Seventh Division of the Pennsylvania National Guard. The First, Third, Tenth, and Sixteenth Regiments of the Pennsylvania National Guard will not lose their identity, as each of these organizations was large enough to form one of the new Federal regiments, but they will be renumbered respectively, the 109th, 110th, 111th, and 112th Infantry.

PALMER REASSURES ALIEN DEPOSITORS

Bank Withdrawals Cause Custodian to Explain Provisions for Enemy Property.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Heavy withdrawals of bank and postal savings deposits by aliens in some localities caused A. Mitchell Palmer, alien property custodian, to issue a formal statement today reiterating assurances that the Government had no intention of interfering with the money or property of Germans or citizens of countries allied with Germany living and doing lawful business in this country.

Mr. Palmer said many published statements regarding this matter had been so misleading as to give rise to fear that they may have originated in a deliberate wish to disturb and injure American business interests.

"Reports have appeared in the press," said the statement, "with regard to the plans and purposes of the alien property custodian with respect to the property of aliens residing in the United States which have caused unnecessary and ill-founded alarm. This alarm has led in some localities to heavy withdrawals of postal savings and bank deposits.

"The statement most calculated to mislead and cause uneasiness is to the effect that the fact as to whether any one is an enemy or the ally of an enemy under the terms of the Trading with the Enemy act recently passed by Congress, is determined by nationality or citizenship. This is not the fact. The principal test of enemy character under the act of Congress is one of residence or place of business or business connections, rather than nationality or citizenship.

"A subject of Germany or of any of Germany's allies residing in his country, even though he has made no declaration of his intention to become a citizen, is permitted to continue in trade and commerce and in the possession and control of his property while he remains in the United States and obeys its laws, and he is not regarded as an enemy or placed in that category by the Trading with the Enemy act.

"The broad purpose of Congress as expressed in the Trading with the Enemy act is, first, to preserve enemy-owned property situated in the United States from loss, and, secondly, to prevent every use of it which may be hostile or detrimental to the United States."

MYSTERY IN DEATH OF WOMAN UNSOLVED

Dooling Tells of Efforts to Have Mrs. Stiassny's Body Cremated—New Will Found.

Assistant District Attorney John T. Dooling, who has been investigating the mysterious death of Mrs. Sarah M. Stiassny, who was killed by two bullets, in her bed in her apartment at 215 West Ninety-eighth Street last Wednesday morning, said yesterday that he had learned that shortly after her lifeless body was found an effort had been made to have her death recorded as being due to natural causes.

Mr. Dooling also said that steps had been taken to have the body cremated a short time after death. He declined to say who had asked that the record as to death be altered, but indicated that this suggestion did not come from a relative of Mrs. Stiassny.

Mr. Dooling asserted that, in addition to the conflicting narratives which he had heard before, witnesses questioned yesterday disagreed radically as to the arrangement of furniture in the room where the body was found, as to the discovery of the note bearing the signature of Mrs. Stiassny, saying that she was going to kill herself, and as to the finding of the will and other papers. Mr. Dooling has placed the so-called suicide note in the hands of Loren C. Horton, a handwriting expert. He has not finished his tests of the handwriting.

An earlier will, executed by Mrs. Stiassny in 1914, was obtained by the District Attorney's office yesterday. This differed from the one made in July of this year, a copy of which was found in her apartment less than an hour after the discovery of her body. The first will left the bulk of the estate to three grandpieces, the daughters of Mrs. Jessy Lubetkin, who was a niece of Mrs. Stiassny. By this will Isaac Epstein, a nephew, was to receive $1,000 a year for five years. In the second will, however, the Lubetkins are remembered with a few trinkets, while practically the whole estate, which has been estimated to be worth $250,000, was bequeathed to Epstein.

LIBERTY AIR MOTORS SOON TO BE READY

ALL TESTS SATISFACTORY

Government Not Only to Supply All Its Own Needs, but Also to Fill Orders for One of the Allies.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—First deliveries of machine-made Liberty airplane motors, initiating the quantity production of the machines relied upon to furnish the means for carrying the war to Germany in the air on an extensive scale, will begin in the near future. Motors tested up to this time have been produced largely as individual type units by slow hand processes.

The first deliveries, it was learned today, will be comparatively small. The rate of production will speed up every day thereafter, however, and long before Spring breaks the Winter's grip upon the fighting fronts, Liberty motors will be turned out at a rate that will enable the United States not only to meet its own requirements but also to deliver thousands to certain of the allied Governments which have requested allotments.

Tests of the motor, both the army and navy types, are proceeding satisfactorily. Surprisingly few cases of trouble requiring changes in design have been noted. Some "bugs," as defects or eccentricities are known, have developed, but up to this time all such are minor matters requiring no delay in the quantity production of the engines.

Officers of both services, who heretofore have been skeptical of the possibility of turning out in a comparatively short space of time air fleets that might bring decisive results in the war, are becoming more and more impressed. Unless the repeated statement from Germany that she has discounted the American air program in advance proves to be better founded than it is believed to be, they have little doubt that enormous pressure can be exerted with the Liberty fleets.

Recent trials of army type of Liberty planes, American built throughout and including Liberty motors, have shown good results. One of these fighting models, according to reports, made extraordinary speed, approximating the best pace of the one man fighting planes in use on the war fronts.

The American engineers are now working toward improvement of design, the production of an adequate supply of suitable planes having been assured. New methods may be tried out experimentally now without fear of delaying the equipment of the air army.

Beginning this week, the first two heavy duty war trucks, designed and constructed under the direction of Brigadier General Chauncey B. Baker of the Quartermaster Corps with the co-operation of the Automotive Products Section of the Council of National Defense and the Society of Automotive Engineers, will operate road tests in continuous runs of eighteen hours a day with two shifts of drivers. These tests will continue for at least a month, under the direction of H. F. Thompson of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

SOON TO PUT CURB ON NONESSENTIALS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Foreseeing early curtailment of nonessential business to release men and materials for industries necessary in the prosecution of the war, the Council of National Defense has taken up the problem of what industries best can be dispensed with.

It was learned today that a bureau is about to be formed under the War Industries Board to frame a plan for methods of eliminating nonessential business with the least disturbance to the country's commerce and finance.

Coal consumption is outstripping production and the supplies of steel and other raw materials will not be sufficient for war purposes if manufacturers of nonessentials are permitted to draw all the materials they require. Therefore the purpose is to get curtailment under way before any general shortage of materials is felt.

The new bureau will be charged particularly with seeing that Government agencies seeking to accomplish the same things work in the same direction to prevent confusion and hardship. Under the present system, it is pointed out, the Fuel Administration might list one set of industries as nonessential and cut off coal, while the War Industries Board, in charge of steel, was checking the activities of an entirely different line of business with the same purpose in view.

The greatest care is to be exercised in listing industries as nonessential to prevent errors which might force reclassifications. Some industries can be classed as nonessential without hesitation, but others are close to a border line which, officials say, sometimes is hard to define.

England shut down on many industries and afterward had to permit them to resume business. This was particularly true where it was found the industries in many instances easily could shift to war work.

The problem of supplying necessary industries with labor is harder to solve than that of supplying them with materials. Cutting off the supply of materials from one industry makes it easy to divert shipments to another business, but the labor released in the operation is not easy to transfer. Thus far no satisfactory plan for moving labor from one industry to another has been proposed from any quarter.

Formation of a great War Council to take up the problems of labor and materials and that of molding industry in general to war conditions is in the minds of some Government officials. Such a council might comprise the present members of the Council of National Defense and the heads of other Government agencies, all of which now are engaged in handling some phase of the conduct of the war.

$1,250,000 to Relieve Rumania.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—The American Red Cross War Council today announced the appropriation of $1,250,000 for relief work in Rumania. Two thousand tons of foodstuffs, 40,000 pairs of shoes, and large quantities of medical and hospital supplies are to be purchased immediately to meet emergency conditions.

Richard Harding Davis said:

"Gibson saw more of actual warfare than did any or all of our twenty-eight military men in Paris.

"It was his duty to pass frequently through the firing-lines on his way to Antwerp. He was constantly under fire. Three times his automobile was hit.

"He was the first person in an official position to visit Antwerp after the Belgian Government moved to that city, and, even with his passes and flag flying from his automobile, he reached Antwerp and returned to Brussels only after many delays and adventures."—From "With The Allies."

NEW BOARD TO RULE ON EXCESS PROFITS

McAdoo Appoints Commission of Nine Advisers to Interpret the War Tax Law.

WILL HEAR ALL APPEALS

J. E. Sterrett and S. R. Bertron of New York Among Members Who Represent Varied Lines of Business

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—The appointment of an advisory board of nine members to be known as the "excess profits advisers" was announced tonight by Secretary McAdoo. It will act as a board of appeals for the Internal Revenue Bureau on all questions connected with the interpretation and execution of the excess profits section of the new war tax law.

The members of the board are: Representative Cordell Hull, a member of the House Committee on Ways and Means; T. S. Adams, economist of Yale University; Wallace D. Simmons, President Simmons Hardware Company, St. Louis and Philadelphia; J. E. Sterrett of Price, Waterhouse & Co., accountants, New York City; S. R. Bertron of Bertron, Griscom & Co., bankers, New York City; E. T. Meredith, editor Successful Farming, Des Moines, Ia.; T. W. McCullough, editor Omaha Bee, Omaha, Neb.; Stewart W. Cramer of the National Council of Cotton Manufacturers, Charlotte, N. C., and Henry Walters, Chairman of the board, Atlantic Coast Line, and Louisville & Nashville Railways.

The membership of this board, it is explained, has been selected with a view to the broadest consideration of the business interests of the country. It is recognized that the new taxes are emergency expedients and that they impose new burdens and require wise and constructive interpretation so as not to bear too heavily on the business of the country already under many strains on account of the war. The first aim of the Treasury Department will be to accomplish the collection of the full amount of revenue designed by Congress in framing the tax law to prosecute the war.

In discussing the new board and the work that lies before it, Secretary McAdoo called attention to the manner in which the business men of the country had responded to the duty to aid the Government in the war problems. Before the passage of the new tax law, he said, they went on record through the Chamber of Commerce of the United States by recommending that a large part of the war expenditures be obtained from taxes on excess profits and incomes.

"This evidence of the readiness of business to do its full share in the support of the Government's war policies," said the Secretary, "has been recognized by the Administration, and every effort will be made to have this great burden, advocated by those who will bear the greater part of it, fall with as little hardship as possible, consistent with a just and thorough administration of the law."

Secretary McAdoo also said that the officials of the Internal Revenue Bureau clearly understand this policy. In planning for the gigantic task of collecting the war revenue, a new organization of that bureau has been effected, additional divisions have been created, responsibility and authority rearranged and defined among the different subordinate officers, and preparations made for a large increase in personnel.

"In addition to the action of the department in availing itself of the services of these advisers, plans are being formulated for a program of information for the taxpaying public," said Mr. McAdoo. "It is essential that every taxpayer shall know how to compute the amount of the taxes he must pay, and the time, place, and method provided for its payment. The department recognizes that information of this kind will be indispensable because the law puts upon the taxpayer the responsibility for making the returns by which his tax is measured.

"Steps are being taken to bring the taxgathering machinery of the Government into closer relationship with the taxpaying public. An office known as the Division of Taxpayers' Co-operation has been created in the Internal Revenue Bureau. Under the direction of this office a nation-wide plan of co-operation with taxpayers is being developed. Through the organization that will carry out this plan essential information will be conveyed in the most direct manner to each taxpayer."

MUST PAY COUNT'S STIPEND.

Joseph Schweizer's Agreement with Son-in-Law Is Sustained.

ALBANY, Nov. 13.—An international marriage settlement agreement figured in today's Court of Appeals decisions. The court held that Joseph Schweizer of New York must continue to pay $2,500 a year to Count Alberto Giacomo Giovanni Francesco Mario Guilinelli of Italy, who in 1902 married Mr. Schweizer's daughter, Blanche.

According to the papers, Mr. Schweizer was to pay the Count $2,500 a year under a prenuptial agreement and did pay that amount annually from 1902 to 1912. The Count, through Attilio de Cicco, an assignee, brought suit when the payments were stopped.

SUSPEND 3 TEACHERS FOR WAR OPINIONS

CITED FOR HEARING TUESDAY

Eight Other Teachers in De Witt Clinton High School Are Ordered Transferred.

The inquiry conducted for the last two weeks by Dr. John L. Tildisey, Associate Superintendent of Schools, in charge of high schools, to determine whether certain teachers have been loyally supporting the Government in the conduct of the war, reached its culmination yesterday when three teachers were suspended, pending trial on charges of "holding views which are subversive of discipline in the schools and which undermine good citizenship," and recommendation was made to the Board of Superintendents to transfer eight teachers, now attached to the De Witt Clinton High School, Tenth Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street.

The teachers were notified of their suspension by Dr. Tildisey, acting for Dr. Gustave Straubenmuller, Acting City Superintendent of Schools. Both officials declined to make public the names of the teachers, but it was learned that the suspended teachers are Thomas Mufson, instructor in English; A. Henry Schneer, instructor in mathematics, and Samuel Schmalhausen, instructor of English. The charges preferred by Dr. Tildisey will be heard next Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock at a meeting of the Committee on High Schools, when the suspended teachers will be asked to appear.

"A copy of the charges will be served with a notice to appear for trial."

NOTICE OF SUSPENSION.

Nov. 12, 1917.

Teacher, De Witt Clinton High School,
Fifty-ninth Street and Tenth Avenue,
Borough of Manhattan.

Dear Sir: You are hereby notified that in accordance with the provisions of Chapter 786 of the laws of 1917, and with the by-laws of the Board of Education, and under the direction of the Superintendent of Schools, I have preferred charges against you for holding views which are subversive of discipline in the schools and which undermine good citizenship, and you are further notified that by virtue of the authority vested in me by Section 41, Sub-divisions 18 and 19, of the by-laws of the Board of Education, I hereby suspend you without pay from further service as teacher in De Witt Clinton High School, Borough of Manhattan. Respectfully,

(Signed) JOHN L. TILDSLEY,
For the Superintendent of Schools.

Assert They Are Loyal.

The suspended teachers last night said they had no comment to make at the present time, but declared that their loyalty had never been questioned, and denied they had ever entertained views on which such charges could be made. John Whalen, Chairman of the High School Committee, when asked if counsel for the accused teachers would be permitted to be present next Tuesday, said he did not know, but that lawyers are sometimes admitted to such proceedings. The Board of Education will be represented by Assistant Corporation Counsel Charles McIntyre.

Associates of the disciplined teachers last night said that, as far as they knew, their fellow-teachers had always been loyal and had signed the loyalty pledge last Spring when requested to do so. They also said they believed that the charges were inspired after 105 of the teachers in the De Witt Clinton High School approved of a resolution which condemned Mr. Whalen for certain utterances he made in connection with the recent strike of high school boys who protested against the longer school day. However, the school officials declared that the charges had nothing to do with the resolution.

Some of the twenty teachers examined were not so reluctant to tell of their experience as the trio who were suspended. One of them said he was asked this question:

"Don't you believe that Jewish students, especially the Russians, need to be disciplined out of their individualistic tendencies?"

The so-called Whalen resolution was the subject of bitter debate yesterday at a regular monthly meeting of the teachers at the De Witt Clinton High. Sidney Hooks, one of the teachers, said that the passing of the resolution had covered the "school with ignominy," and moved to abolish the Teachers' Council, the representatives of the teachers who were partly instrumental for the drawing up of the resolution. G. W. Hunter of the Biology Department, speaking for the motion, declared that most of the pupils in the school "come from homes where anything but loyalty is spoken of."

Ends in Bitter Argument.

Mr. Hunter, seeking to correct this earlier statement, arose and said that 70 per cent. of the boys were of Slavic descent and were "intensely individualistic and revolutionary." Rudolph Pokorny, another teacher, shouted that as a man of Slavic descent he resented the charge that Slavs are anything but loyal, and demanded an apology. Other speakers took sides and a bitter argument followed, at the end of which it was decided to appoint a committee to submit the question of abolishing the Teachers' Council to the individual teachers for secret balloting.

It was learned yesterday that the Teachers' Union has been the subject of complaint to President William G. Willcox of the Board of Education in connection with an address made by Morris Hillquit, late Socialist candidate for Mayor. Mr. Hillquit spoke at a meeting a week before election held under the auspices of the Teachers' Union. Several days ago at a convention of the Teachers' Council, an organisation consisting of representatives of all teachers' societies, in no way connected with the Council of the De Witt Clinton High School, Mr. Willcox told of the charges made by a teacher that the officers of the Teachers' Union were disloyal for encouraging Mr. Hillquit to speak his mind on the sale of Liberty bonds.

President Henry R. Linville of the Teachers' Union yesterday took issue with his accuser and said he would be glad to appear at any time before the Teachers' Council to testify as to the loyalty of any members of his organization.

"I believe that war was inevitable," said Dr. Linville, in reply to a question as to how he stood on the war. "The stand taken by President Wilson was the only one he could possibly have taken in view of the crisis with Germany.

"All the candidates were invited to speak, and only Mr. Wallace, the Single Tax candidate, and Mr. Hillquit, the Socialist candidate, appeared. Mr. Hillquit was asked many questions, some on educational topics and some on the war. Mr. Hillquit's well-known views on the war were brought out by the questions and were not otherwise presented by him. Naturally there was opposition to these views, but I endeavored to give, as Chairman, every questioner, no matter what his own views might be, the opportunity to force any issue he chose. This, of course, means that my own conception of the rights of individuals in a mass meeting involves absolute freedom of opinion and the chance to express that opinion.

"In justice I could no more prevent a person from asking Mr. Hillquit of his views on Liberty bonds than I could check Mr. Hillquit himself in the expression of his opinion that teachers should have the right to membership in the Board of Education."

A meeting of the Teachers' Union will be held at the Washington Irving High School on Friday night, at which, it was said, the question of offering aid to the teachers suspended yesterday, will be discussed.

The Low Cost of Motoring with Franklin Enclosed Cars

THE average man looks upon an enclosed car as an expensive possession. To operate a Town Car or Limousine, many owners say, means your hand always in your pocket. And this has actually been the experience of many owners of heavy enclosed cars.

A motor car burdened down with too much weight is certain to be expensive. The heavier the car—the more gasoline it consumes per mile. The heavier the car the quicker the tires wear out. Just as this fact is true with heavy weight—so is the reverse true of Franklin Scientific Light Weight.

Two Popular Enclosed Franklin Cars

This difference in weight, made possible by Franklin Scientific Light Weight, is the fundamental reason for the remarkable economy of the Franklin Enclosed Cars.

The Economy Standards of Franklin Open Models are well established. The Franklin holds all records for all-'round thrift and efficiency in operation of fine cars.

The Franklin Enclosed Cars show within a few per cent the same economy in GASOLINE, TIRES AND OIL.

Winter and Direct Air Cooling

Franklin Direct Air Cooling, besides eliminating the 177 heavy and complicated parts that make up the plumbing system in water cooled cars, also forestalls winter's worst dread to the motorist—FREEZING.

With Direct Air Cooling there is nothing to freeze—just as in Summer there is nothing to overheat.

Nor has he the added expense of maintaining this gasoline-consuming water-cooling system every time he takes his car out.

Franklin Enclosed Car Comfort

The easy riding of the Franklin has made the Franklin Limousine and Town Car as popular for country roads as for city streets.

To the car owner, or the prospective car owner, desiring to know all details about the most practical, efficient and economical fine enclosed cars made, we extend an invitation to inspect the Franklin Town Car and Limousine—and experience a thorough demonstration.

Wallace ADJUSTABLE Lamp

It has proved a "find" to the thousands of traveling salesmen, who are now carrying it with them wherever they go.

It folds into such small space that it takes up almost no room in a grip. It can be attached wherever there is electricity. Can be set or clamped in any position, in any part of the room. It gathers all the light economically into the very spot where you want it—does not diffuse or scatter.

Not only salesmen, but other business men use it, in dozens of ways in their offices—on their desks; in the vault; at the switchboard, etc. Housewives use it in the home—for sewing; on the dressing table; for reading, etc. Actors use it on the road—in their dressing rooms, etc. Students find it the handiest lamp to study by.

Can't you think of a dozen ways a Wallace Lamp would come in handy for you? Then examine it at your favorite store. Sold everywhere, by most of the good Hardware, Electrical, Sporting Goods, Drug and Department Stores.

DISPLAY BY POLICE STIRS SHOW CROWD

BARON GAINS FIRST AWARD

Patrolman Dunstall's Mount Gets Top Recognition from Gallery and Judges at Garden.

Charging down the arena at Madison Square Garden at a mad gallop, the traffic squad of the New York Police Department last night stirred a large gathering to a high pitch of enthusiasm in a realistic demonstration of the riot charge, which was the sensational event on the second day's program at the National Horse Show. Never have New York's "finest" received more flattering attention than they did from the society throng which filled the boxes about the show ring. The city's guardians, with their well groomed and perfectly trained horses, went through their manoeuvres with machine-like precision.

There were two squads of twelve mounted men in command of Lieutenant Michael F. Walsh, Lieutenant George S. Woods, and Lieutenant John A. Parks. A cheer greeted the traffic policemen as they rode into the Garden, sitting on their horses like cavalrymen. The policemen put their horses through all the paces of military drill, the twenty-four animals obeying the commands with prompt obedience. They walked and cantered and galloped in twos and fours and in single file with perfect harmony of action. The climax of the drill came with the riot charge with the squad galloping at full speed and the patrolmen yelling like Cossacks.

Three gold medals were awarded in the event, the first going to Patrolman David Tunstall's Baron, with Patrolman James I. Young's Theo second, and Patrolman John J. Byrne's Creedmore third. The fashionably clad spectators in the arena boxes recognized in these men several old friends, whose harsh commands they have heard and obeyed while motoring through the city's crowded thoroughfares.

Red Cross Aspect Draws Crowd.

The Red Cross should reap great benefits from the horse show this season, as another large crowd was in attendance at the second day's attractions. The response has thus far been so generous that the Red Cross committee and the officials have been satisfied at the showing Because of the large number of jumping events and the large entries of hunters, the show this year has a popular appeal, and the greatest crowds gather when the prominent members of the hunt clubs are out guiding their jumpers over the brush and timbers.

A new event on the program, a class for the best three hunters to be ridden by women, brought together the greatest gathering of horsewomen ever seen in a show ring. The competition in this class was interesting, and was followed with keen interest by the members of the various hunt clubs in the vicinity of New York. The victory of Miss Lida Fleitmann's trio of hunters was a popular one, although they were hard pressed for first honors by Thomas Hitchcock's hunters ridden by Mrs. Hitchcock, Miss Helen Hitchcock, and Miss Marion Hollins.

One of the great surprises of the show thus far was the defeat of Mrs. Robert Tod's noted winner, Sceptre, in the class for women's saddle horses. This event was won by Walter H. Hanley's Driftwood Blaze. Sceptre has won thirty-five blue ribbons and two championships in two seasons in the show ring.

There was another unexpected display in the Alfred G. Vanderbilt Gold Challenge Cup. Against last year's winning team Judge Moore's team of grays, the only other competitor, J. Campbell Thompson's team, was withdrawn before the show because of the death of John D. Crimmins, who was related to Mr. Campbell by marriage. It was thought up to the time of the event that Judge Moore would go before the judges alone, but at the last moment there was a surprise in store for the spectators when the late Mr. Vanderbilt's team of invincible grays, with Miss Marion Hollins on the box, was driven into the ring with Judge Moore's team. While the Vanderbilt four were not in actual competition, the presence of the two greatest teams of grays in this country added much interest to the event. Judge Moore's team received the gold cup. On one of their numerous trips around the show ring the horn of the Vanderbilt coach tooted the tune of "Tammany," which brought forth a loud round of applause.

Women Prominent in Ring.

This year's show is significant in the large number of women riders who are competing in the hunter classes. The hunting colonies of Long Island have never been so well represented in the interesting events over the jumps. It is these classes, and there are a number of them, which add interest to the Horse Show for the ordinary spectator At one time yesterday afternoon there were no less than twenty-four women riders in the ring, which made the arena a picture of unusual animation. Many of these fair riders have followed the hounds and have competed in outdoor shows in the Summer colonies, but for several of them, it was their first appearance in the Madison Square Garden ring.

The horsemanship exhibited by the women riders commanded the greatest admiration and many of the trials over the timber were greeted with prolonged applause. In the class for hunters ridden by women, each exhibitor entering three hunters, twenty-four jumpers entered the ring. Miss Lida Fleitmann's trio of hunters carried off the blue ribbon. Miss Fleitmann rode Palmetto, Mrs. Carle rode Longwood, and Mrs. Robinson rode Winchester.

In close competition for the honers was Thomas Hitchcock's noted hunters. Miss Helen Hitchcock was up on Cavalier, while Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock rode Coneston, with Miss Marion Hollins riding Smoke. The trio took second place. The three hunters entered by Charles D. Lanier and Mrs. J. B. Kineon were placed third. Little Becky Lanier rode Becky, Miss Ivy Maddison guided Down East, and Mrs. Kineon rode Rock Cress. Miss Fleitmann's hunters were the most consistent and perfect jumpers, and they cleared the brush and fences in impressive style. This event easily furnished the most sensational riding of the day.

Pete Loses Title.

A United States cavalry mount, Ginger, a handsome sorrel gelding, ridden by Captain D. O. Nelson of the Nineteenth United States Cavalry, West Point, carried off the Beresford Challenge Cup, presented by Colonel Lord Decies. The officers rode over the course, twice around. The cup was won least year by Pete, which took second price yesterday. Pete was ridden by Major J. A. Barry, Second Cavalry, Fort Ethan Allen.

King Larigo, the Shetland pony for which James Cox Brady recently paid $10,000, showed its true form and regained the honors which were lost on the opening day of the show. King Larigo got the blue ribbon in the event for Shetland stallions, with Senator Jackson, the first day winner, in second place. The same reversal of form was shown in the class for Shetland pairs in harness. King Larigo and mate took the blue ribbon in this class also.

SCEPTRE GETS THE GATE.

There was a sensation to enliven the afternoon proceedings when Mrs. Robert E. Tod's champion saddle mare Sceptre was gated in the class for ladies' saddle horses, which brought out the largest field of the day. More than that, the winner of the class, Walter H. Hanley's Driftwood Blaze, was practically unknown to the local show followers until he won the novice class on Monday.

This brown gelding had elecited general admiration while Mrs. Hanley was putting him through his paces, and he had a private reputation that warranted consideration, but the result was none the less startling, as Sceptre's record of thirty-five blue ribbons at all shows, including championships at the last two national exhibitions, made her a most formidable opponent for a horse just out of the novice class.

There could be no gainsaying the fact that Sceptre did not show in her usual brilliant manner. Her gait was stilted at times and she lacked animation, but in spite of these shortcomings the old champion was one of the seven picked to go through extra manoeuvres before the ribbons were awarded While Sceptre was disappointing to her many admirers, who wished her return to the ring in the aid of the Red Cross to be crowned by success, both Driftwood Blaze and Captain Harry La Montagne's Northman were gaining new friends by their beautiful action at all gaits, and there was little surprise when the blue was pinned on Driftwood Blaze and the red on Northman. Sceptre, through force of habit, moved up as if to receive a ribbon, but was passed over and the yellow went to G. G. Rohlig's Minstrel, while fourth place was awarded to A. W. Atkinson's Myclema.

Hanley's Judgment Vindicated.

The conqueror of Sceptre attained the distinction more by accident than design, for he was one of a gang of remount horses when he attracted the attention of Mr. Hanley. The Providence exhibitor was struck with the fine lines of the gelding, and he was rewarded at the Columbus Fair three weeks ago when Driftwood Blaze won the $1,000 cup for saddlers, defeating his stable companion, Twilight, which had the advantage of Mrs. Hanley's guidance in the exhibition.

Another interesting saddle class was that for the Arabian Horse Club medal, in which the tractability of the competitors counted largely in the judging. The horses were required to back and to stand while the riders dismounted and remounted. It brought out a mixed class of horses and riders, including little Miss Regan and Captain Harry La Montagne, who rode in khaki. The animals all were well schooled, and they proved this as they stood in undisturbed tranquillity while the coach drawn by the Vanderbilt grays rattled into the ring, accompanied by the notes of a bugle. Captain La Montagne's Northman showed particularly well, but he only earned second place to N. J. Hess's Borgond.

William H. Moore elected to show his old champion Bountiful in the harness class calling for appointments, instead of Ruxton, which hitherto had been his dependence. Unlike Sceptre, this old favorite was in magnificent form, and it did not take the judges long to award the blue to Bountiful, which showed superbly in the hands of Judge Moore. A. W. Atkinson's Marcel earned the second ribbon.

Britton Forbes Gallops.

There was speed as well as style when the roadsters pranced into the ring, and many short dashes along the sides of the arena reminded the spectators of speedway brushes. John R. Thompson, the Chicago exhibitor, had a son of J. Malcolm Forbes in Britton Forbes that possessed the characteristics of his noted sire. He appeared to be destined for the blue when in a final trial between him and his closest competitor, R. E. Moreland's Vernon Holt, Mr. Thompson's entry broke into a gallop and kept off the trot so long that the judges had no alternative but to give the blue to Vernon Holt and the red to Britton Forbes.

Miss Patricia Garvan was efficiently represented in the class for ponies under saddle which brought so many fine ponies into the ring that the judges had hard work to weed out the best half dozen. The Regan family also was well represented with Bantamite, Joy, and Carlton Quality. Miss Constance rode the former, while Miss Jean had the mount on Joy, but Carlton Quality proved the best of the trio, and even then was only placed fourth, the first prize going to Miss Garvan's Chestnut Blossom, and the second to the same owner's Lady Manners. Miss Corinne Poth's Firelight Bounce was third.

Walter H. Hanley made inroads into the harness horse prizes when he sent Rainbow and Sunshine into the ring for the novice pairs. This combination had won championships at White Plains and Rochester and they showed so well that for once Judge Moore had to put up with second place, gained through the medium of his home breds, Medea and Mona. The aged pair, Queen Marlboro and Lord Churchill, shown by Alex Gemmell, were placed third.

Wins Champion Cup.

The first champion cup of the show was awarded during the morning session in the pony stallion division, which brought out six competitors, first or second in three previous classes. Hackneys as well as Shetlands were engaged in the pursuit of the tricolor, and the result was another triumph for Hamilton Model, famed in the horse world as Irvington Model until James Cox Brady changed his name early this year to bear the prefix of his own stable. He is considered the best English hackney pony bred in the United States, although beaten last year by Tissington Model. The reserve ribbon went to Delchester Farm's imported Tatler.

There was a fine class of horses suitable to become hunters which competed for a prize given by F. Ambrose Clark. All had to show the necessary conformation, but were not required to jump, The winner was Joseph H. Collins's Cragwood, an upstanding chestnut, which had been brought from Boston to capture the blue. Charles D. Lanier's Lookout was second, and the third award went to the Canadian bred McBride, exhibited by Crow and Murray of Toronto. Though shown in the name of Mr. Collins, it is said that Miss Eleanora Sears is the real owner of Cragwood.

In the closing class of the morning Miss Jean Austin supplemented her victory gained on McGregor on Monday by winning with the same entry in a class for saddle horses over 14.2 and not exceeding 15.2 hands. James Butler was second on J. V. Wolkenstein's Chesterfield

MISKE DEFEATS DILLON.

St. Paul Boxer All but Stops Hoosier Rival in Bout.

In the final Frawley law effort of the Broadway Sporting Club of Brooklyn last night a packed house was thoroughly entertained when Billy Miske of St. Paul all but knocked out Jack Dillon of Indianapolis in a ten-round bout. Miske beat Dillon in every round and scored so decisively that toward the end it seemed certain that Dillon was not going to stay the limit. The Hoosier fighter, however, endured the punishment, desperately tried to counter the attack of Miske, and, although almost exhausted, was on his feet when the final bell rang.

Miske, who weighed 176 to 167 for Dillon, scored a knockdown in the ninth round with a short right cross to the jaw. Dillon went to his knees, but was up before the referee could count more than one. Dillon was shaken by the punch and had to clinch to save himself. Miske was too anxious and swung wildly and without effect, which gave Dillon time to recuperate. The last session found Miske crowding his rival about the ring and attempting by cunning and force to win by a knockout, but again Dillon protected himself.

LAST FRAWLEY LAW BOUTS.

Champion Al McCoy in Ring with Mike O'Dowd Tonight.

A championship boxing bout will be held this evening at the Clermont S. C. of Brooklyn, as the final bout of importance before the demise of legalized boxing in New York State. The principals will be Al McCoy, the Brooklyn middleweight, whose lucky punch a few years ago won him the middleweight title from George Chip, and Mike O'Dowd, St. Paul's representative boxer.

The fact that McCoy is the holder of the title lends prestige to the match. In O'Dowd, McCoy will meet one of the most capable men of his weight in the ring. The St. Paul boxer is sturdy and capable of delivering a heavy blow, while he also has the faculty of taking hard blows without any visible effect. The boxers are both reported in good physical condition after strenuous training and it is expected that the match will result in an interesting exhibition. John McAvoy will referee the bout.

At the Vanderbilt A. C. of Brooklyn this evening two ten-round bouts are scheduled between Young Rosner and Battling Chuck, and Young Dundee and Frankie Williams.

SIGNAL DRILL FOR N. Y. U.

Many Regulars Unable to Practice with the Squad.

The New York University football team had another day of signal drill yesterday. The drill lasted, without variation, all afternoon. Coach Wall insisted that each play be gone through correctly before the next was attempted. To do this he personally supervised the work of the regulars all day.

This year the mid-term exams come earlier than usual and this kept several of the squad from practice. Several others were absent because of a late class. The regulars were minus the services of Egan, Fernadez, Finley, and Christopher. The former condition will prevail for the rest of the week and this makes the outlook for the Stevens game on Saturday somewhat gloomy.

PHILLIPS DEFEATS HIMSELF.

PINEHURST, N. C., Nov. 13.—The semi-finals and finals of the Carolina golf tournament were played at Pinehurst today. Franklin Gates of Broadacres won first division trophy by defeating H. G. Phillips of Yonkers in the semi-final, 3 and 2, and then disposing of J. D. Armstrong of Groton in the final 3 and 1.

An unusual exchange of courtesies took place in the Gates-Phillips match. Gates's ball knocked Phillips's into the cup at the ninth for a winning 3, and Phillips lost the match at the sixteenth by similarly obliging his opponent from off the green.

R. C. Shannon of Brockport won in the second division. The third division trophy went to Howard Wrenn of Chicago.

Ouimet and Guilford Coming.

Francis Ouimet and Jesse Guilford of Boston will make one more visit to New York this season for the purpose of convincing New York golfers of their sterling worth. The Boston pair are to meet John G. Anderson of Siwanoy and Oswald Kirkby of Englewood, the metropolitan champion, in a thirty-six-hole four ball best ball match over the Englewood course Saturday. The exhibition is for the purpose of raising funds for the Y. M. C. A. army and navy entertainment fund.

Bernstein Wins Road Run.

B. Bernstein of the Hungarian-American A. C. led a big field of runners in a handicap event of the Yorkville A. C. over a course around Central Park last night. Bernstein had a handicap of four minutes and finished the four and one-half mile journey in 27:44. M. White of the Hungarian-American A. C. was second.

BALLY TAKES FINAL PIMLICO HANDICAP

PIMLICO, Md., Nov. 13.—James Butler's Bally captured the Serial Handicap No 3 at a mile and a furlong, which was the feature of the closing day of the successful meeting of the Maryland Jockey Club. There were seven starters and favoritism was divided between the winner, Stargazer and Hank O'Day, coupled as the Macomber entry. Robinson cut out the pace with Bally but was forced to ride his hardest in the stretch to withstand the rush of Stargazer.

As usual on getaway day there were a number of winners quoted at long prices. One of these was W. D. Althouse's Bar of Phoenix, which performed a notable feat by winning the Jockey Club Handicap at a mile and a half, making the third racing day in succession that he has scored at long odds. In spite of his victories yesterday and Saturday better than 11 to 1 was laid against Bar of Phoenix, but he came home an easy winner under the guidance of G. Walls.

Mrs. C. E. Clement's Mary Maud defeated a good field of two-year-olds in the Caswell Handicap at six furlongs, while the Carman-Viau confederacy ended a successful campaign when old Starling took the measure of some speedy sprinters in the closing race.

The course will be laid out in and around a public park, and the competitors will make two circuits of the course in order to cover the required two and a half miles.

BOSTON, Nov. 13.—The Boxing Committee of the New England Association of Amateur Athletic Unions has set Dec. 10 as the date for a boxing tournament in this city, to be open to amateur boxers from all parts of the country. All the proceeds will go to soldiers' relief funds.

COLUMBIA BADLY CRIPPLED.

Three 'Varsity Men Will Be Unable to Line Up Against Wesleyan.

The Columbia 'Varsity will face Wesleyan this Saturday without three of its best men in the lineup. Captain Dal Cochran will not be able to don his uniform before next week. Rosen has been out with an infected toe, and cannot play before next Monday. Soup Campbell, the husky tackle, injured his left knee in the Hobart game, and will not be in condition until the first of next week.

Parnes will take Cochran's position. Weinstein will again pilot the team, and Don Memmott is a likely choice for the other vacancy. Kennedy, who is playing for his second season at left end, will be the acting captain.

Yesterday the 'Varsity scrimmaged for thirty minutes with the Manual Training High School eleven, and scored several times on the schoolboys. The Blue and White team used straight football throughout, and worked fast under Sam Weinstein's urging at quarter. Twice the collegians tried trick plays, and each time they scored from a distance of twenty yards. When the Manual boys got the ball they made several gains, but did not win more than one first down at a time. Later the second team went in, and the Blue and White regulars started on a signal drill that lasted for an hour.

This afternoon the 'Varsity will face teams from the battleship Texas and from Clinton High School. It will be the last long scrimmage before the Wesleyan game this Saturday, since tomorrow and Friday will be devoted to signal work.

LEHIGH WORRIES RUTGERS.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Nov 13.—With every man in the best of shape the Rutgers football squad had a light workout this afternoon in preparation for the game with Eddie Mahan's League Island Marines Saturday. Coach Sanford spent considerable time perfecting a defense which he hopes will stop the fleet Mahan. Bill Gray was back at centre after a two weeks' enforced rest because of a twisted ankle and Francke was in Rollins's place at guard. Sanford is now pointing the team toward the Lehigh contest, which will be staged on the Polo Grounds in New York on Thanksgiving Day.

NAVAL GAME FOR FORDHAM.

Pelham Bay Reserves to Meet Maroon Eleven Nov. 24.

The Naval Reserve team from the Pelham Bay Park station will meet the Fordham eleven Nov. 24 on Fordham Field. This is the latest addition to the list of naval and military engagements that will be waged on local gridirons that afternoon. The seamen, 1,500 strong, and with two bands, will accompany their team and provide a military spectacle with a dress parade, besides furnishing a good football game.

Raymond Delehanty, the Fordham manager, also announced yesterday that a Thanksgiving Day game is expected to be clinched in a few days.

The capable Fordham prep eleven opposed the Maroon 'Varsity yesterday in a stirring scrimmage. The collegians were put on the defensive throughout the fray and obtained a good workout in stopping the youngsters. "Tubby" Kearns, tne prep half back, proved troublesome several times on his plays off tackle, but the big team had little difficulty in stopping the overhead attack of their opponents.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Penn., Nov. 13.—Coach Metzger today gave the order for closed gates at the W. and J. practice in preparation for the game Saturday with West Virginia. Numerous plays formulated for Pitt, but not used, are being perfected and it is hoped to make them available against the Mountaineers. Every Varsity man was on the field and participated in the work. Especial attention was devoted again to increasing the power of the Red and Black attack. A light scrimmage was staged for the purpose of building up the offense.

BROWN HAS HARD PRACTICE.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 13.—A busy day was put in at the Brown football camp today, nearly forty men reporting for the workout under three coaches. Three teams drove up and down the field in one of the snappiest signal practices of the year, and it was evident everywhere that the drive for Dartmouth had begun in earnest. Shaw, 'Varsity half back, and Sinclair, 'Varsity tackle, both wore togs for the first time in weeks.

Brown tomorrow plays the 301st Engineers from Camp Devens, Ayer. The Army boys arrived in Providence last night and will leave again for camp directly after the game. Twenty-four men are on the squad under Lieutenant Deacon, the football coach.

NEW TRICKS FOR CARLISLE.

Special to The New York Times.

CARLISLE, Penn., Nov. 13.—Coach Harry B. Harris, realizing the formidable character of Georgia Tech, this evening gave the members of the Carlisle Indian football squad one of the severest drills in fundamentals that they have had this season. Forward passing was featured. With a realization that the redskins would have their work cut out for them to approach Georgia's goal various tricks were planned to get the spheroid over the chalk line if only short gains were needed.

HOWISON GAINS ON WESTERN CUE RIVAL

Welker Cochran, the young Chicago billiardist, and Leonard Howison of Canada, played until midnight last night in the second block of their 2,000-point match at 18.2 balk line billiards at Howison's Billiard Academy, and at the end of the block Cochran was leading his veteran rival by a total score of 800 to 720 for the two night's play. This gave Howison the laurels of the second block, for the Canadian decreased his younger opponent's lead of the previous block by ninety-five points.

Howison carried off the second block easily by running out 400 points in twenty-one innings, while Cochran was collecting 253. Howison played in wonderful form as compared to his showing in the opening block, while Cochran's efforts were correspondingly weak in comparison. Last night the Chicago boy had the "breaks" of the game against him, but his overanxiety and inaccuracy in judging angle shots also played a part in his downfall.

Howison displayed excellent all-around billiards. His three-cushion shots could not have been much better and his follow and draw efforts were superb. At long-table caroms Howison also was accurate, and although on frequent occasions these attempts left the balls lined up the Canadian overcame these obstacles with a variety of masse strokes. Howison only missed one masse.

In his thirteenth inning Howison eclipsed his opponents' high run record of the opening night's play by five points when he obtained a cluster of 108. The Canadian averaged 15 30-31 for the thirty-one innings. Cochran's best effort was 75 in the eleventh inning, and he averaged 12 16-32 for his thirty-two innings.

The score:

Cochran—1 1 0 2 0 64 0 27 6 8 75 0 0 2 20 34 9 1 0 3 3 28 8 18 7 0 1 0 5 5 47 25—400. High runs — 75, 64, and 47. Average — 12 16-32. Grand total—800. Highest run—103.

Howison—0 4 1 37 0 15 3 20 12 24 24 1 108 53 36 14 32 2 6 1 17 2 0 36 0 3 17 3 10 14 0—495. High runs—108, 53, and 37. Average—15 30-31. Grand total—720. Highest run—108.

Minor Owners Against Redistricting Class AA Territory.

LOUISVILLE, Nov. 13.—Formation of a new league to include the Louisville, Indianapolis, and Toledo Clubs of the American Association and certain clubs of the International League received a serious setback tonight. A. R. Tearney of Chicago, President of the Three-I League, who offered a resolution requesting the redistricting in all minor league territory, finally amended it to include only leagues of Class B or lower.

The resolution which would have enabled the dissatisfied clubs of the American Association to carry out their merger was received with opposition when presented to a committee appointed to change the constitution of the National Association of Baseball Leagues. Thomas J. Hickey, President of the American Association, and Senator Cooper, attorney for the Kansas City Club, were among those who attacked it.

The committee, of which Al T. Baum of San Francisco, President of the Pacific Coast League, was chairman, held its session behind locked doors and none of its members would discuss what occurred. When the convention reconvenes at 10 o'clock tomorrow the resolution will be presented for passage.

"THE THREE BEARS" AT THE EMPIRE

ANN MURDOCK GOLDY-LOCKS

Christopher Kent	Jerome Patrick
Julius Vanneman	Rex McDougall
Dr. William Henry Forsyth	Percy Marmont
Balsam	J. T. Challee
Sylvia Weston	Ann Murdock
Annie	Alice Gale
Julie Draper	Margaret Linden

Since the days of Benedick and his Beatrice misogynists in the theatre have existed for the sole purpose of being subdued by feminine charm. The author of "The Cinderella Man" and "The Pipes of Pan" has hit upon a fresh variant of the theme, and has worked it out in his pleasantly familiar vein of sentimental comedy, though with perhaps a shade less of good fortune than hitherto.

The three bears are a grumpy physician and his two patients, whom he is Muldooning in the Maine woods. One patient is a violinist, who has collapsed nervously because his fiancée jilted him for a piccolo player, and the other is a society bachelor who has been supermanned, as Shaw might say, into neurasthenia by a young married woman. Into their camp comes a sweet young thing in bridal white and orange blossoms, having fled to the woods from an old man who is being forced upon her. While the three bears are absent Muldooning, she eats their porridge and falls asleep in the couch of one of them. For it is her camp, and she is not aware that it has been rented.

The bears begin, of course, by being very rude to Goldy-locks; but she rather likes it. For, being a most charming Goldy-locks, it has been the bane of her life that boys (and even her elder fiancé) are such bothersome softies with her. Though flouted and scouted by the bruins three, she is so far from being routed that she installs herself, with her nurse, in the woodshed—which, as it happens, has not been rented. The bears set up a "dead-line" of hemlock seedlings; but love laughs also at hemlocksmiths. The pursuing society lady appears to claim her defenseless swain and poisons the mind of Goldy-locks. But Love wins in a gallop. All three propose to her; and when her preference for the society bachelor is manifest the other two elect themselves her guardians.

The dismay of the three bears at harboring beneath their bachelor roof a wandering bride yielded hearty comedy. Even an extreme of self-absorbed rudeness to her, which must have been pathological, caused laughter, predominantly feminine. It was so manifest from the start that the day of theatrical retribution was at hand. A scene in which bearish hearts softened to the point of ordering for Goldy-locks a substitute trousseau, which was accomplished with the aid of the advertisements in Vanity Fair, was broadly diverting. And the scene of the triplex proposal had obvious delights.

But it cannot be said that Mr. Carpenter has realized the subtler humors of his situation. The effects were overemphasized—hammered in the manner of a playwright for the moment uninspired. The passage in which the society lady of evil intent fought with Goldy-locks for her young man was a bit of the brazenest theatricalism, offensive alike to good taste and to good story telling. Obviously meant to be the dramatic high spot, this scene sank into the bogs of movie melodrama.

Miss Murdock was tremulous and winsome, and her locks were of Guinea gold; but it cannot be said that she did much to render the character or the situation more subtle or more persuasive. The three bears were capably, but not brilliantly, played.

The best work was done in the minor parts. Badly characterized as was the society wife, Margaret Linden acted her with good presence and sure technique. As the nurse Alice Gale was most sympathetic and sure in her touch. As a French-Canadian guide J. T. Challee contributed a most eloquent note or two of forest cheer.

ACTS A PLAY IN MONOLOGUE.

The first appearance in New York of Miss Sydney Thompson, an entertainer whose work has recently attracted considerable attention elsewhere, took place at the Punch and Judy Theatre yesterday afternoon, and was the means of introducing to this city a new idea in dramatic monologues. Miss Thompson presents a play in the form of a monologue, indicating the presence of the other characters, but not speaking for them. This suggests, of course, the work of Miss Beatrice Herford, but in one important respect the methods of Miss Thompson and Miss Herford differ. Whereas the latter aims only at the projection of a character, the offerings of Miss Thompson are complete dramatic structures.

For monologue purposes the humor of characterization probably is more entertaining than the mere flow of incident, but Miss Thompson's work is nevertheless of unusual interest. As an innovation—it is so long since the art was practiced by the Italians that it is entitled to be regarded as an innovation—Miss Thompson also introduced the impromptu play, basing it upon an idea furnished by the audience. No attempt was made to construct anything more than a slender episode in this fashion, but as an instance of quick thinking the experiment was interesting.

Miss Thompson, apparently an actress of no little ability, was somewhat hampered yesterday afternoon by indifferent material. The best of her offerings was "The Jar of Roses," a melodramatic bit which indicated some of the possibilities of this form of entertainment.

INVESTIGATE FAKE MESSAGE

The Committee on Business Conduct of the New York Stock Exchange is making a thorough investigation of the circulation of a spurious telegram from the President of the Studebaker Corporation which brought about a sudden 5½-point rise in the stock on Saturday. The telegram, published by Dow, Jones & Co. in its Wall Street Journal and on its news tickers, quoted the President as estimating the net earnings of the company at $8,000,000, and declared that the liquidating value of the stock was double the present market price.

Dow, Jones & Co. are tracing the source of the telegram through the Western Union, but the Stock Exchange authorities are examining all the transactions in Studebaker stock with the view of determining whether there was any conspiracy on the part of any of its members to bull the stock by the dissemination of false reports. This inquiry is colateral with the movement on the part of the Exchange to keep watch over attempts to pound the market by short sales with the view of depressing values. It is felt that attempts to bring about an advance in prices by dishonest means is just as reprehensible as efforts to force a decline in quotations.

"The Star Gazer" for the Plymouth.

Marie Doro's engagement in "Barbara" at the Plymouth Theatre will be brought to a close on Saturday night. The succeeding attraction will be "The Star Gazer," an operetta by Franz Lehar, which will have its first performance on Wednesday of next week. The book of the new piece is by Cosmo Hamilton, and the lyrics are the work of Matthew C. Woodward. John Charles Thomas, Beth Lydy, and John T. Murray head the cast.

CARUSO AIDS WAR REFUGEES

Cables $10,000 to Italy's Prime Minister—Next Week's Opera Bills.

Enrico Caruso yesterday cabled $10,000, which at current exchange is about 60,000 francs, to Prime Minister Orlando of Italy, to be used for relief of his country's refugees, said to number a million now, from the invaded territory of Northern Italy. The Metropolitan tenor has made large contributions to the war. Aside from recent appearances for charity in South America, it is said that Caruso's tax on his earnings in New York, both from opera and talking machine records, will be more than $52,000 this year.

Geraldine Farrar will open the second week at the Metropolitan next Monday in "Tosca," with Braslau, Martin, Scotti, d'Angelo, and others, led by Moranzoni. Caruso will sing on Wednesday in "Marta," with Hempel, Perini, and De Luca, Mr. Bodanzky conducting, and on Friday in "Samson et Dalila," with Julia Claussen, the new Scandinavian mezzo-soprano, and Messrs. Whitehill and Rothier, under Conductor Monteux.

Other operas are "Madama Butterfly" on Thursday week, with Farrar, Fornia, Martin, Scotti, Reiss, and others, and "Francesca da Rimini" at the Saturday matinée, with Alda, Delaunois, Helen Kanders—a newcomer—Martinelli, Bada, and Amato, both works led by Moranzoni.

The first concert next Sunday has Ruth Miller, Sophie Braslau, and Mischa Elman, the violinist, with the orchestra under Hageman. There will be a Tuesday "Aida" in Philadelphia, and Saturday "Figaro" in Brooklyn, eight performances in seven days.

MOSES BOGUSLAWSKI PLAYS

Moses Boguslawski, a young pianist who made a promising first appearance in New York last season, played again yesterday in Aeolian Hall. His program was not of the usual sort; it began with Weber's A flat sonata; Schumann's "Scenes from Childhood"; six of Paganini's caprices arranged by Liszt, and pieces by Rubinstein, Howard Brockway, Schubert, and Gabrilowitsch. Mr. Boguslawsky played sincerely, often brilliantly, and often with taste and musical feeling; but there were some things in which his tempos seemed too slow, as in several of Schumann's little pieces. These need to be played with a little more distinction and point than he gave them, to weather a public performance.

Mr. Boguslawski should also look to the quality of his tone, which too often wants roundness and richness. His technical equipment carried him safely through many difficulties.

Mrs. Farrington-Smith, soprano, formerly of Philadelphia, gave a recital of songs at the Princess Theatre yesterday afternoon, playing her own accompaniments—not the simplest ones, either—in a group by Debussy. With Francis Moore at the piano, she sang old French and Italian airs, modern English, American, and French again, with much grace, sentiment, and communicative imagination, as in Koechlin's "Aux Temps de Fees" and the "Butterflies" of Seiler.

A CHAMBER MUSIC CONCERT.

Miss Carolyn Beebe's Organization Begins Its Season.

Miss Carolyn Beebe's enterprising New York Chamber Music Society began a new season last evening in Aeolian Hall with "The Star-Spangled Banner," played on a patriotically draped stage. Miss Beebe has made extensive explorations in the field of chamber music for various combinations of stringed and wind instruments, and is enabled to make her programs such as to appeal to the inquisitive music lover seeking to hear unfamiliar matter. Last evening were played Mozart's quintet in E flat for strings and horn; d'Indy's trio in B flat for pianoforte, clarinet, and 'cello; two pieces in the form of canons for oboe and strings, by Théodore Dubois, whose symphony was recently played here, and Wolf-Ferrari's chamber symphony in B flat for strings and wind. The works by d'Indy and Dubois were played for the first time in New York.

Success in various measure attended these performances. It did not in the highest measure attend the quintet by Mozart, in which neither the strings nor the horn reached a very high standard. The trio by d'Indy was much more successful. The piece by Wolf-Ferrari, which the organization has played before, was repeated in response to many requests.

FARRAR LEADS IN ANTHEM.

Director Gatti-Casazza's galaxy of stars repeated over in Brooklyn last night, with a different opera and cast, the patriotic singing of the "Star-Spangled Banner," which had marked the New York season's opening on Monday. For this second all-star anthem it was Farrar in "Tosca" that started the Brooklyn Academy series, and the American star did not falter for words as she led her country's air after the opening act. Brooklyn has shown its patriotism before, but rarely in a theatre in war time filled as the Academy was, with practically the entire boxes occupied by officers of the army and navy, guests of Colonel Ogden, who added a brave array of military trappings to the brilliant scene.

In place of Riccardo Martin, who was indisposed, another young American, Paul Althouse, was the tenor, acquitting himself with credit in a veteran company, of whom Mr. Scotti as Scarpia was a popular favorite.

Home Defense Helping Red Cross.

The Home Defense League of the Seventy-four Precinct (Kingsbridge) is devoting two evenings this week to helping the Van Cortlandt Chapter of the Red Cross, which during the periods in which soldiers are encamped in Van Cortlandt Park has cared for their material comfort in every possible way. Tomorrow and Friday evenings the precinct companies of the league will give an entertainment in St. John's Hall, Kingsbridge Avenue, near 230th Street, the proceeds of which will be equally divided between the Red Cross chapter and the league's own fund. Both professional and amateur friends of both bodies are providing the entertainments, which will close on both evenings with a dance.

Fifth Avenue Bus Men Get Increase.

The Fifth Avenue Coach Company announced last night that it had increased the wages of all of the employes engaged in operating buses. The increase, which is based on length of service, amounts in some cases to 15½ per cent. The company said that within the last five years the wages of the employes have been increased on an average of more than 48 per cent.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

"Kitty Darlin'," in which Alice Nielsen is appearing at the Casino Theatre, will be withdrawn at the end of this week, and "Oh, Boy," will be moved on Monday from the Princess to the Casino. The next attraction at the Princess is as yet unannounced.

Rose Coghlan has been engaged by the Charles Frohman Company for Ethel Barrymore's repertoire season, rehearsals for which will begin next week.

A benefit performance for the 307th Infantry of Camp Upton will be given at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre under the auspices of Lew Fields on the night of Sunday, Nov. 25. The proceeds will be devoted to the building of a theatre at the camp.

The Washington Square Players, whose current program includes "His Widow's Husband," a play from the Spanish, have invited the players now appearing in the Spanish revue, "The Land of Joy," to attend tomorrow's matinée at the Comedy.

Four hundred members of the 302d Engineers Corps, from Camp Upton, will attend tonight's performance of "Doing Our Bit," at the Winter Garden.

"Face Value," a short story by Edgar Franklin, is being dramatized by Edward Clark. In its dramatic form it will bear the title "Not With My Money."

THINK MARLBOROUGHS MAY BE RECONCILED

Duke and Duchess Are Both at Blenheim Palace, The London Graphic Announces.

"The Duke of Marlborough is 46 today. Both he and his Duchess are at Blenheim Palace."

In view of the fact that the Duke and the Duchess, who was formerly Consuelo Vanderbilt of New York, have been separated for a number of years, the children spending part of the time with their mother and part with their father, this announcement is causing great interest in social circles.

The announcement that the Duke and Duchess of Marlborough were both at Blenheim Palace was the first intimation New York society had received that the Duke and his wife, separated since 1907, had become reconciled. The news seems to mean that the efforts of the King and Queen of England toward reuniting the couple have at last been successful.

Charles Richard John Spencer-Churchill, Ninth Duke of Marlborough, and Consuelo Vanderbilt, daughter of William K. Vanderbilt, were married Nov. 6, 1895, in St. Thomas's Church in this city. The wedding was described at the time as the greatest social event of the century. Mr. Vanderbilt at the time settled an annuity of $100,000 on his son-in-law, and gave his daughter a dowry of $2,000,000. At the time of their marriage Miss Vanderbilt was 17 years old and the Duke 24.

In March, 1896, the couple took up their residence at Blenheim, the great palace presented to the First Duke of Marlborough by the English Nation in recognition of his great military victories against the French on the battlefields of Flanders. In September, the Duke's heir was born, and Queen Victoria sent her congratulations to the young couple. The Prince of Wales, later King Edward VII., was the infant's godfather. A second son was born in 1898.

Soon, however, came murmurs that the pair did not get along so well as formerly. Report had it that the Duke was extravagant and was wasting the dowry of his wife as well as the generous income allowed the couple by W. K. Vanderbilt. Matters went from bad to worse during several years, and in the Winter of 1907 it became known that a complete separation was contemplated.

The formal deed of separation was signed on Jan. 8, 1907. Under its provisions, the Duke and Duchess lived apart, the Duke retaining Blenheim and continuing to enjoy the income settled on him by Mr. Vanderbilt. Custody of the children was divided, each to have the boys during six months of the year.

There have been several rumors that the couple had been reunited. King Edward refused to see either of them while they were separated, and the reigning King and Queen have followed his example.

Mme. Alda Sings for War Charities.

Frances Alda began with America's anthem and ended with "La Marseillaise" her concert in Carnegie Hall last evening, of which the gross receipts, announced from the stage as more than $4,000, were divided between Mrs. Gertrude Atherton's fund of Le Bien-Etre du Blessé and a new fund for needy children of American soldiers. An audience, including many society patrons of these war charities, filled the hall, though late in arriving, and the singer's friends filled with flowers a stage already lined with palms. Mme. Alda had command of her vocal resources after a few early songs; she sang much in French, with Massenet's "Ouvre Tes Yeux" among the encores, and later a group written for her by Mischa Elman, Frank LaForge, the accompanist, whose "Sanctuary" was repeated, and May Hartmann, whose patriotic note of "Somewhere in France" was also encored just before the "Marseillaise."

Appeal for a Family in Need.

For a mother and four little girls whose father died of tuberculosis a month ago, the Charity Organization Society asks immediate assistance. Margaret, the oldest girl, is only 12, and with three younger children for the mother to care for, her time is fully occupied, and there is no bread winner. The society is moving them to better and healthier quarters, and makes an urgent appeal for $180 to provide absolute necessities during the next three months. Gifts sent to the office of the society, 105 East Twenty-second Street, will be gratefully acknowledged.

"THE UNITY OF MILITARY THOUGHT."

The initiative in this war has been shown by Germany. She alone has displayed any originality. She has placed the theatre of war wherever she chose, and shifted it as often as she liked. Sudden and shocking strokes have fallen from her arm, few or none from those of the Allies. She has shown large conceptions; their conception has uniformly been simply to rush to the defense of each new point threatened by her, and hold it as well as might be. The Allies have shown no great genius; all they have been able to think of is to ward off and hit back.

This is not due to any intellectual inferiority on the part of the Allies. It is due solely to the fact that Germany is one and they are many. It is a case of too many cooks spoiling the broth. It is true that the word "Germany" is simply a name for four allied nations, but those nations have learned the lesson which their antagonists have not learned, and they have subordinated their military will to a central mind in Berlin. Only one cook is making that broth. An Austrian, a Bulgarian, a Turkish General obeys the orders of his supreme military head, who is in Berlin.

Against this is a loose combination of armies, not under one head, but each under its own head. No matter how good their Generals may be, the inevitable result is the thing we have been seeing for three years; a policy of mere opposition to the enemy, destitute of initiative or co-ordinated effort. No matter, we repeat, how good the Generals may be; for half a dozen geniuses will neutralize each other, and the only thing they can unite upon will be the middle-of-the-road policy. Napoleon is pretty good authority on that point. When, early in his career, the Directory proposed to send two armies to Italy, one under him and one under Kellermann, he tendered his resignation and said:

> Every one has his own method of carrying on war. Kellermann has more experience, and may do it better than I. Together we should do nothing but mischief.

"If you disturb in Italy the unity of military thought," he said in the same letter, "I say it with grief, you will "lose the finest opportunity that ever "occurred" of winning "that fine peninsula." "The unity of military thought"! It was a matter of momentous importance in his eyes; it was, he warned the Directory, of more importance than a reinforcement of thousands of men to the Austrians.

There has been no sign of great military genius among the German Generals; their superiority to the Allies is not supernatural; it is brought about simply by that "unity of military thought." With that absent, Napoleon believed that even such good Generals as himself and Kellermann could do "nothing but mischief." If, with that absent, the Generals of the Allies have been able to do so much that was not mischief, they have proved themselves extremely good Generals, since Napoleon thought the thing would be too much for him.

Not until the Allies have compelled themselves to the yoke of a single command will their military movements display anything of the freedom, the terrifying ease and quickness, and the skill of handling which the German movements have shown from the first. Mr. Lloyd George's words in Paris sound as if such a thing were actually now in process of establishment, but when one looks at the actual proposal it does not bear him out. He says, justly, that the disasters of 1915, 1916, and even 1917 "would not have happened had there "existed some central authority, "charged with meditating upon the "problem of the war for the entire "theatre of the war." And what is needed, yes, what is absolutely essential, what the Allies cannot do without, was thus defined on the same occasion by Premier Painleve:

> A single front, a single army, a single nation—that is the program requisite for future victory.

Yet what is the actual proposal? Merely, Mr. Bonar Law tells us, that there shall be a council meeting at Versailles "once a month or oftener." Each army will remain "responsible to its respective Government." It is a step forward, but it is not thus that Germany makes war. The things in the way, Mr. George says, are "national and professional traditions, "questions of prestige and susceptibilities." But Austria, Turkey, and Bulgaria have waived all these. It is true, as M. Painleve points out, that "the enemies' alliance realized unity "of effort by brutal discipline, one of "the peoples among them having "mastered the others and rendered "them serviceable." The free peoples composing the Grand Alliance cannot match the Teutonic Alliance in that; but each nation must forego some of its precious traditions and susceptibilities and forge a unity greater and stronger than that which Mr. Law seems to promise, if the deadlock is to be speedily broken. It may be, we hope it is, that he is merely breaking the news to the proud and tenacious holders of those traditions and susceptibilities, and that we shall find the Interallied War Council possessed of greater powers than those at which he hints. But if it is not so, then the Allies have not learned the lesson Napoleon impressed on the Directory—that "the unity of military thought" is of more importance than the reinforcement of a whole army.

MRS. BLATCH TO WOMEN.

The inexcusable, unauthorized use of the honored name of Harriot Stanton Blatch by the sponsors of a mainly Socialist suffrage meeting, by the Committee of One Thousand Women which has sent emissaries to pester Mr. Wilson about the Federal amendment, may be forgiven in consideration of the thoughtful, wise, and patriotic letter of disavowal which she wrote to The Times.

The daughter of Elizabeth Cady Stanton, a suffragist by inheritance, by deep conviction, and of fruitful service, an almost lifelong service, sees that the paramount duty of suffragist and anti-suffragist, of all of us, is to the war, to the country, to democracy, and humanity. Since February, before America came into the war, she has taken little part in suffrage work, giving her time mostly to "war service."

In the midst of an incalculable struggle and peril, in a world full of suffering and heroic action, when every hand and brain should be giving its best to save free civilization, to support the war, to relieve the martyrs of German craft and barbarism, what time is there for "non-essentials"? To hear "the hue and cry" about these, "one might suppose that "America is at peace, starvation non-"existent, and civilization progress-"ing normally." Primaries, registration, elections, the new activities that are opened for the women of New York, what are they, what are votes for women or votes for men, all the babble and bubble of politics and politicians, to the supreme, instant, overshadowing task of saving the nation and the free world?

To the newly enfranchised women of New York Mrs. Blatch gives the soundest advice. They should divide among the parties of their choice. They should also study facts under scholarly, nonpartisan direction. In seeking the ballot they have been too long separated from men, and "cannot "too quickly learn the value of stand-"ing politically shoulder to shoulder "with them." But what is all this crafty ritual of politics and elections, when the destiny of mankind rests on the perilous edge of battle:

> There is war, there is starvation threatening vast areas, civilization is in danger. Those who are in favor of the war can centre their strength on winning it; those who cannot see what the battle means can centre their energy on questions of food, sanitation, education, health—all those things, in short, which will husband the race.

O, si sic omnes! If all suffragists were like Mrs. Blatch, there would be no anti-suffragists.

PROTECTING THE MUNITIONS PLANTS.

A fire or an explosion in a munitions plant no longer excites surprise. It is the happening of the expected. How could it be otherwise when thousands of men who are alien enemies at heart, whether they have permits or not, are working on Government contracts; and when surveillance and protection are too often perfunctory? Does not everybody feel that unless drastic measures are taken the destruction and waste, not to speak of loss of life, which seems to have a declining value, will increase rather than diminish? The most elaborate precautions are being taken to conserve food in order to win the war—on that subject we are keyed up. But too little attention is given to the part that munition-making must play in the common purpose of subduing the enemy.

That the working force in a munitions factory should be carefully selected and kept under observation, and that the buildings at night should be thoroughly protected by guards and electrical devices, hardly needs to be stated; yet the plants swarm with operatives who exult over a German success on land or sea, and the methods of protection are limited in many cases to the services of a watchman or two. In Great Britain and on the Continent they weed out suspects, taking no chances of treachery, and barbed wire and the magazine rifle in trusty hands afford protection in the night hours.

The conditions prevailing in the munitions industry in this country, that is to say the composition of the working forces and the inadequate protective regulations, prove once more that we do not take the war seriously enough. Labor at the high wages paid in the plants is not scarce, and scrutiny of the antecedents and records of the men applying for work is a duty imposed upon employers. It should be insisted upon by the Government, which may yet be obliged to supervise as well as regulate the industry. The permit system will, of course, have to be overhauled. There is now too much laxity in enforcing it. Employers who desire to retain Germans and Austrians should be required to give a better reason than good behavior previous to the war. It is often the case that nothing is known about the habits and associations of a workman when he is off the premises. He may be radically, even fanatically, pro-German in his own time. The Secret Service should have funds enough to look into the record of every man whose name and associations indicate that he may be suspect and dangerous.

Concerns engaged in manufacturing war munitions would no doubt welcome an offer from the Government to provide from the armed forces a guard for their plants. In fact, it would be to the interest of both parties to the contract to have such protection. If works could be patrolled day and night by sentinels on regular post duty, the danger of fire and explosion would be reduced to a minimum. The uniform and the ready rifle have proved to be a sufficient protection for bridges, piers, and warehouses. More and more the soldier will take the place of the private watchman who makes his rounds for hire. The substitution is becoming necessary in the munitions plants, for the frequency with which they are destroyed by fire and explosion leaves no room for doubt that the enemy is fighting us on our own soil.

SERVICE FOR ALL.

Hearty commendation is due to Secretary Baker for the wisdom and openmindedness he has shown in reconsidering the decision that only a part of the young officers now in training should be assigned to service. He now announces that work will be found for practically all, only a very few will go upon the waiting list.

The willingness to change one's mind on good cause shown is one of the essential qualities of an administrative officer or of a statesman. The original decision was disheartening to the men now in training, its execution would have imposed real hardship upon those not selected for immediate service. But the foundation reason for reversing the order was the need of the army. The national army in a very short time will require the service of all the men from the training camps. It would have been a mistake to return them, even temporarily, to civil life, because of the impairment in condition and efficiency which would result. The men in training for officers' service will bless the name of Secretary Baker.

FOCH IN ITALY.

The successor of General Cadorna as premier strategist of Italy is manifestly the commander of the Ninth Army, who saved France at the battle of the Marne, General Foch. According to the dispatches, General Foch is to remain in Italy, as the representative of the Allied War Council, to plan and direct defensive operations. It is cheering news, for the Professor of Strategy and Tactics at the Ecole de Guerre has twice proved in this war that he is an able, resourceful, and victorious field commander. In the battle of the Marne, after Manoury with the Sixth Army had forced a passage of the Ourcq and routed the German division in his front, and d'Esperey with the Fifth Army, Langle de Cary with the Fourth Army, and Sarrail with the Third Army were driving the enemy before them, the Germans on Sept. 8 came very near snatching victory from what appeared to be inevitable defeat by breaking the centre of the French line with mass attacks between Sézanne and Fère-Champenoise. Their design was to shatter Foch's army, which had orders from Marshal Joffre to "hold "the southern approaches of the "marshes of St. Gond" and advance from the "plateau north of Sézanne." The Prussian Guard actually occupied Fère-Champenoise, driving back an army corps and a division on Foch's left. The Château de Mondement was also taken. If the Germans had held this last point and carried the cliff beyond it, the French centre would have been not only broken but routed. On a third attack the French, in the most desperate combat of the whole six-day battle, recaptured the château. And then, by the swift transfer of a division, Foch surprised the enemy and forced his retreat by a flank attack that smashed the wedge thrust into the French centre. It was one of the most brilliant achievements of the war, and in his order of the day Marshal Joffre made his acknowledgments.

In the battle of the Yser (the following October) it was Foch, in command of the Armies of the North, who frustrated the Kaiser's elaborately organized and powerfully executed attack on the left wing of the Franco-British forces, his objective being Calais. It was a battle lasting from day to day and week to week, and as fast as battalions could be brought up on each side they were flung into the line, which was repeatedly broken and held. In this "race to the sea," as the swaying combat has been called, Foch won by the adroitness and tenacity that are characteristic of him. Foch, who never loses his self-control, has the bulldog courage which is supposed to be a British more than a French attribute. At the battle of the Marne an officer came to him with the despairing cry: "General, my troops are worn out!" "So are the Germans," was the reply. "Attack again!"

In the theory of modern warfare General Foch has no superior. He has written two celebrated books, "The Principles of War" and "The Conduct of War," and it is curious that the moral forces of success interest him as much as tactics. No man can be more familiar with Napoleon's campaigns in Italy, and it may be assumed that Foch knows about as much of the topography of the country in which the Italians are retreating as Cadorna himself knows. The French General seems to be an ideal selection for the critical Italian emergency. If he has material to work with that can stand the wear and tear of defensive fighting long drawn out, von Below will meet his match.

THE RED TRIANGLE.

The Y. M. C. A. is trying to raise a fund of $35,000,000 for its war work. Under the sign of the Red Triangle our boys, our soldiers and sailors, here and abroad, get amusement, exercise, education, religious instruction. In training camp or trenches the Red Triangle "hut" is their club, theatre, gymnasium, swimming pool, store, writing room, Post Office, reading room, French course, library, university. There they get their soap and candles, their chocolate. The letter paper on which they write home, their postage stamps, the matches they light their pipes with, come from the Red Triangle.

If anybody labors under the delusion that there is anything "goody goody" about the Y. M. C. A. Red Triangle, he needs only to hear what it has done here and in France and Great Britain, what the boys say about it. It breaks the monotony of camp and trench. It gives society, entertainment, athletic exercise, education.

Italy, Russia, France, the war camp prisoners, are to have their part in the fund, but some $23,000,000 will be divided between our forces here and over the water.

A shelter from the cold in the Winter, a place of rest or healthful physical and mental enjoyment at all seasons, the Y. M. C. A. "hut" is one of the most variously useful houses ever built. Shall our boys enjoy themselves rationally? Shall we love to think of them as pitching quoits or boxing or reading a novel—or Mr. Gibbon's little historical tract, if you prefer—or splashing in the pool, they who have so much Flanders mud awaiting them? Shall we do something for those who are ready to do all for their country?

The fund is to be closed on Nov. 19. It ought to be completed before that day.

A PEAL FOR REPEAL.

The Troy Times recites the misdeeds of that unhappy device of skyscraping political virtue, the direct primary. We all know the list. The quality of candidates has worsened. The cost of an election campaign must be added to the cost of a primary campaign. The bosses, whom the primary was to unboss and depose, run it, love it, own it, albeit in this State they opposed it at first out of pure dislike for Governor Hughes. Mr. Hughes now burns what he adored. He was a rebel against the Republican primary here, and all the Republican major gods revolted with him.

According to our Trojan friend, "a "large majority of the Republican "Party is thoroughly dissatisfied with "it." Very like. The same thing has been said of the Democratic Party. It is true enough that in conventions there was consultation and judgment; and fine was the brood of statesmen raised under the old system. Under the present, the voter works mostly in the dark. Largely he "has to pass judgment upon unknown persons." Therefore "he has voted blindly or has not voted at all." The perfect work of organized participation and careless obstruction appeared in the recent triumph of Mr. Bennett.

The primary is "an imposture," says the Trojan wearily. The Republican Legislature should repeal it. Yes, but will the Republican Legislature do anything of the kind? Governor Whitman is a child of the primaries. While that genial mother is good to him, will he strike the hand that pets him? And as for the Republican bosses and bosslets, why, where can they find an easier machine or one more suited to their business than the direct primary? And 'tis merry sport to have the reformer hoist with his own petard.

The direct primary is a humbug, a fraud, and a nuisance. Have the Republicans the courage, have the gentlemen in charge of the Republican Party in New York the spirit of self-sacrifice, to throw the thing away and give "the will of the people" a chance to express itself?

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Why Germany Went Into the War.

Many people, especially those who hold the belief that the causes of every war are economic—in the last analysis a conscious or unconscious desire for more to eat—have been mystified by the fact that Germany deliberately started the present conflict. Both her condition and her prospects were in contradiction with the economic theory of war, for obviously the condition of Germany in 1914 was enviable and her prospects brilliant.

She had demonstrated beyond the possibility of doubt her ability as manufacturer and trader to hold her own, and more, in peaceful competition with the other manufacturing and trading nations of the world. Her mercantile marine not only had increased, but was continuing to increase, more rapidly than that of any other nation, and her ships entered the ports of every sea on equal terms with those of her rivals. More than that, they were steadily taking away business from the ablest of those rivals.

At home her rather barren land had become able, indirectly if not directly, to support an enormous population, considering the area of her territory, and any German who found or fancied himself cramped for room was free to go where he would, sure of a welcome anywhere and in confident expectation of receiving the respect and even the affection of his new neighbors. Of "race prejudice" he encountered none, however far he might wander, and he was allowed either to assimilate or to remain the member of a distinct group, as pleased him best.

In short, Germany had earned and won that "place in the sun" of which so much has been heard of late, and she had not one of the grievances which so many other nations can allege with more or less justice—not even the grievance of incompetence, which is perhaps the bitterest of all. And it was to improve this state of affairs that she risked everything she had by declaring what she knew, or should have known, was war against the rest of the world!

The explanation of this mystery was given in a single sentence of President Wilson's Buffalo speech: "They were not content with success by superior achievement; they wanted success by authority." That sentence, expanded, would be a complete exposition of German psychology.

How Italy's Line Was Broken.

One of the special cable dispatches that appeared in The Times yesterday disclosed what has been, since the Italian reverses began, a subject of frequent enigmatic reference and no explanation—the reason why one of the Italian armies broke under German assault and forced the retreat that transferred the fighting line from Austrian to Italian territory. Lack of munitions, steel, and coal accounted well enough for the halting of the Italian advance, but it did not account for a change in the morale of Italian soldiers so marked that General Cadorna, who not long before for cause had called them heroes, accused them of cowardice.

According to The Times correspondent, the accusation was inaccurate and should have been changed to that of paying too much attention to German propagandists craftily working on that particular sector.

Opposite the Second Italian Army the Germans had placed regiments composed largely of Socialists, and these utilized the war-weariness of opponents similarly infected to convince the latter that an end of the fighting would come if the soldiers on both sides should refuse to kill each other any longer. Fraternization followed, and an exchange of promises to do no more shooting. Then the demoralized—and demoralizing—Austrian division was withdrawn, and in its place were put German shock troops. These it was that almost unopposed smashed through the Italian line and began the flanking movement of which the results have been so disastrous to Italy and so disquieting to her allies.

The trick was legitimate, as war goes, and it will not count among the atrocities charged to the Germans, but there is in its revelation a warning to all soldiers, including our own, not to be deluded into the belief that peace can be obtained otherwise than by a military victory. The Americans have not yet had the reasons for feeling personal animosity against the Germans that have been supplied in such abundance to their French and British allies, and while few of them could be approached with such arguments as proved effective with the Second Italian Army, it is not inconceivable that they could be put momentarily off their guard by a display of pretended sympathy of aim and of false good-fellowship. After they have "seen their dead" this danger will probably be removed.

"Mourning" Is Harmful in Wartime.

There is merit in the suggestion, made by Mrs. Louise De Koven Bowen, Chairwoman of the Woman's Committee of the Illinois State Council of Defense, that when Americans have occasion to make some public manifestation of sorrow for the loss of men in our military service, they do it by wearing, not the conventional black, but some symbol like a golden star.

The adoption of this plan would not only be in accord with the change of taste and sentiment that has much decreased in recent years the custom of putting on the lugubrious uniform once felt to be compulsory for bereaved women and hardly less obligatory for men. It would also show a higher appreciation of what death in the country's good cause really is—an honor even more than a misfortune, and one reflecting something of honor on those whom the bereavement directly and personally affects.

We are all proud, not sorry, to claim among our ancestors a little removed in time one who offered and gave his life in just war, and there is no reason why we should not have the same feeling when the same high duty has been performed at the same cost by a husband, a brother, or a son. There is no better death than this and none so good, and manifestation of its glory rather than of a private grief becomes the patriotic citizen. On wearer and on beholder alike the effect of "mourning" is mentally and physically injurious, and the well-advised do not put it on except when not to do so would too much offend the sensibilities of their neighbors.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There is a misunderstanding about the word "Junker" as used in Russia. The "Junkers' School" of Petrograd is a military school for officers. After four years of study every Junker becomes an officer, be it in infantry, artillery, or cavalry. These Junkers, then, have nothing in common with German Junkers. PETER J. POPOFF.

Flushing, N. Y., Nov. 13, 1917.

ARMENIAN CRUSADERS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have just crossed the ocean with as interesting a company of passengers as could be imagined, nearly all of them planning to do patriotic service in France. Of them all the most remarkable group was a company of 100 young Armenians in the steerage. These men had all given up their positions and possessions in America and were going to France to offer their services to the French Army. As one of them put it:

"We feel that the power that has destroyed our country must be opposed by physical force, and we are prepared to give our lives for the cause of righteousness and liberty."

The last we saw of this band of crusaders was as they marched resolutely away, a French flag at the head of the column, flanked by the Armenian and the American colors. Can even this war offer a more inspiring example of patriotism and self-sacrifice? FRANCIS ROGERS.

A French Port, Oct. 26, 1917.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A certain news item in your Sunday issue will doubtless be extremely interesting to persons who stint themselves to buy Liberty bonds and to soldiers' wives and dependents who are at present subsisting on a separation allowance of nothing a month. I refer to the amazing announcement that German military prisoners of war are receiving the pay of their rank in the United States Army and Navy.

In other words, a Hun private, when captured by the United States, has his German pay of $3 or $4 a month increased to $30. Half of it is not held back as is the case with our own boys; prisoners are not asked to buy Liberty bonds; they are, I believe, not even put to work. The article does not state that if a Hun prisoner is held abroad he will receive 20 per cent. additional pay, but perhaps this was an oversight. No wonder a prisoner of war wrote that he expected to save enough to set himself up in business after the war!

Captured German officers, of course, come higher. The sight of a fat Hun Major loafing in a prison camp on a stingy allowance of $500 a month will doubtless be inspiring to an American father who can't afford the movies any longer and wonders if his shoes will stand half-soling again.

At this ridiculous rate, when we capture a hundred thousand Huns, we shall have the pleasure of giving them, for spending money alone, more than three million dollars a month. And in the meanwhile our American boys in German prison camps will be receiving whatever their friends send them—if they are lucky.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I observe a movement on foot to present a statue to France to commemorate the saving of civilization at the Marne.

The British fleet, we have been repeatedly informed, is the bulwark of the allied cause, and we know that in the hands of this fleet rests the cause of civilization. But, granted that the Marne represents the greatest check to the Germans on land, and with all credit to gallant France, may I ask if we have so quickly forgotten the men who made the Marne possible—the gallant Belgians and that wonderful little British army whose graves lie along the roadside from Mons to Paris, and who held part of the line at the Marne? Any statue to commemorate the Marne should give full credit to Britain and Belgium. H. M. T.

Tobacco Fails to Reach Camp.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Last July my nephew enlisted in our army, arriving in France in August. Every week since that time I have sent him a pound box of tobacco, taking these packages myself to the Post Office. I was advised by this department that they would not insure the parcels, as same had to be mailed at the sender's risk. I have just received a letter from my nephew dated Oct. 15, in which he asks me to send him some tobacco, as he had not received any that had been sent to him. He further states that there is not a grain of tobacco in their camp, and spoke about the tobacco fund which he says he understands is in existence here, but unfortunately none of which has reached their camp.

It seems to me that this loss of tobacco by our Post Office is a matter worthy of thorough investigation. W. M. SPEAR.

CONVERSION.

In a time of weakness, hesitant and chill,
Doubtful of my purpose, fortitude, and will,
Cravenly I pleaded that the struggle cease,
That thy lips, my country, faltering, cry "Peace!"

Ever through my senses battle-cries would roll,
Liquid flame and gas-clouds seared my quaking soul;
And for reddened rivers more I could not see,

Why should sons of mothers, writhing, fall and bleed,
Immolated thousands to a few men's greed?
Why a nation's manhood, in superb, high youth,
Rot like so much carrion in the mire, forsooth?

* * * *

Such the rebel questions, sharp on heart and lip,
Such the fears and protests, holding me in grip,
Till another's first-born, yearning to her breast,
Read in eyes unflinching all his own expressed.

Then I caught the vision in their mutual gaze,
And my little limits saw in swift amaze—
Saw beyond the present, with its pain and loss,
Calvary of nations and th' Eternal Cross.

Then within its shadow, as it o'er me stole,
Grew a wondrous calmness in my tortured soul,
As the revelation vouchsafed me at length
Showed me every trial measured to man's strength.

Every mangled body, for her very own,
Liberty shall cherish as a temple-stone;
And each mother's anguish, sanctified in prayer,
Shall for future service some new soul prepare.

And from martyred fallen's sacrificial blood
Flow Regeneration's fertilizing flood.

Though from weed and nettle, upas tree and thorn,
Grievous wreaths of trial on man's brow be worn;
He shall through the desert, bramble, bog, and stone,

By MRS. ST. CLAIR STOBART.

Mrs. St. Clair Stobart is the daughter of Sir Samuel Boulton. She has been active as a suffragist in England and was in 1913 a candidate for membership in the London County Council. She commanded a hospital detachment with the Bulgarian Army in Thrace in the Balkan war, 1912-13; with the rank of Major commanded the First Serbian English Field Hospital in the present war, being known throughout Serbia as "the Lady of the Black Horse," and while engaged in hospital work in Belgium in August, 1914, was captured by Germans and condemned to death as a spy. She has been a frequent contributor to periodicals and won for three successive years the Cornish Championship Cup for tennis.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your issue of yesterday's date it is reported that 300 suffrage women loudly "cheered a plan to force laying down of arms." This shows, on the part of those women, either ignorance or brutality. For if they knew one-tenth part of the sufferings which are being endured by those who have already been forced to lay down arms, and if they had one ounce of sympathy in their hearts, they would die of shame at having given voice to such monstrous inhumanity.

For peace at this moment would mean a German peace; German peace means German world-dominance, and this means subjugation, by force of arms, of all non-German people; it means militarism, barbarism, slavery, not only in Europe, but also on this continent. For as soon as Europe is conquered America's turn would follow, in accordance with German plans. "Germany's soul," said Treitschke, "is God's soul; it shall and will rule over all mankind."

My eyes were opened to this truth in August, 1914. I was engaged in hospital work in Belgium, when I was arrested by the Germans as a spy and condemned to be shot within twenty-four hours. When I suggested to the commandant of one of the towns through which I was dragged as prisoner that he should at least look at my papers and see that what I had told him was right, and that I had been engaged in hospital work when his army came a little prematurely into Brussels, he replied: "Right! You are English, and, whether you are right or wrong, this is a war of annihilation." Annihilation, as I understood, of everything that was not German.

I am an ardent suffragist in the old country, but I have, since 1907, contended that before agitating for a share of political responsibility women should prove that they are capable of taking a share in national defense. With this object, the Women's Convoy Corps—the pioneer corps of women's war work—was organized in 1908, to learn all work for sick and wounded, between field hospital and base. And during the first Balkan war in 1912-13 we went to Kirk Kilisee, in Bulgaria, and there established the first war hospital unit to be composed of women only. "Look after national defense and the vote will look after itself" was our motto.

And if national defense should take precedence of politics, how much above politics should we not place defense of the human right of all mankind to freedom?

In Belgium, in France, and in Serbia I have seen the result of German rule in conquered lands, and I know that it means literally hell on earth. In Serbia, with rank of Major in the Serbian Army, I commanded a flying field hospital column throughout the three months of the Serbian retreat, and in the final flight over the mountains of Montenegro and Albania saw the dead and dying bodies of thousands whose lives will have been sacrificed in vain if the freedom of their country is not won. Out of a population of four millions, less than two million are now living, and they account those happiest who are dead. All the children under two years old have perished. Out of one little band of 30,000 Serbian boys who tried to reach the coast during the retreat, 24,000 left their bones upon the mountains. The atrocities committed during the first invasion of Serbia beat the German records in Belgium. Civilians were massacred, villages destroyed, women and children were driven into buildings, wounded that they should not escape, and the buildings set ablaze. In another case 109 people were pinioned, surrounded by wire coil, and placed at the edge of a deep pit; they were then fired upon, and fell, pêle mêle, into the pit, which was immediately filled up with earth, burying 50 per cent. of them alive. Meanwhile, another party, composed chiefly of women and children, were dragged up to witness the execution, and at the finish were made to throw up their arms and shout "Long live the Emperor Francis Joseph!"

Do the 300 women who are clamoring for peace realize that already Austria, Russia, Turkey, Bulgaria, Poland, Rumania, Serbia, Greece, Belgium, a large part of France, part of Italy, are already either directly or indirectly subjugated by Germany, and that if the rest of the civilized world is to be saved, every man and woman who is worthy of a place in civilization must devote every ounce of energy to the task? Is it not petty, pitiable, inconceivable, that at this crisis of human history there can exist women who seem chiefly concerned with personal politics? They are indeed like Nero, fiddling while Rome is perhaps literally burning.

And if Germany wins this war, where then would woman suffrage stand? That is not made in Germany. What place would woman have in the German militarist world? Woman would be only the producer of human food for cannon. "History," says Treitschke, "wears thoroughly masculine features; it is not for sentimental natures or for woman."

War is to me as much an abomination as to those 300 women. Before the outbreak of this war I was a member of peace societies, and on the evening when war was declared in our English House of Commons I was speaking at a meeting which had been convened by Mrs. Fawcett and other women, in the hope that peace might be maintained. This was before we knew that the honor of Belgium, of France, of Britain, of the civilized world was at stake. But I know now from personal experience of the enemy whom in old days I had admired, and from a study of German literature of the last forty years, that German victory and German peace would mean the enslavement of the world. And most earnestly I would ask those 300 women who have just won their own freedom to realize that in voting for peace while Europe is in German hands they are using their own enfranchisement to further the disfranchisement of all mankind.

RUSSIAN OPERA FOR GERMAN

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Metropolitan Opera House has promised that we shall not have our blood curdled by listening to the German language this Winter, but does that mean we are to have, in tentatively administered doses, the operas of Wagner sung in English? Are we to be treated to that stale platitude (and unintelligent lie) of art knowing no nationality; as, for instance, it knows not sex nor color nor time nor space? O Art, how many lies have been perpetrated in thy name!

I have no intention of attacking that academic side of the question, however. We are at war and our first duty is neither to art nor to our secret inclinations (I am frank to admit that I adore Wagner, and that it would be a real deprivation not to hear Fremstad;) our first duty is to make as few mistakes as possible. It would be a political error to give German opera even in the English language in the Metropolitan Opera House. The Germans who swarm in our midst would perhaps not seize upon the first nor the second performance for a tremendous demonstration, but they would surely make huge capital out of the third, and meanwhile they would let it be known in Germany that her faithful subjects in New York were so powerful that they could force the directorate of the Metropolitan to render German opera in the face of the protesting but weaker section of the public. It is not always that we are able to head off their propaganda, but when it is as easy to foresee as in this case it seems to me that we would be both silly and culpable to give them the coveted opportunity.

Moreover, it looks as if this were the hour prearranged by fate to produce the great operas of Russia and establish them firmly before the war is over, and we are falling on the neck of our enemy in an orgy of relief; the while he, quite unmoved, proceeds methodically to regain all that his barbarous stupidity has lost.

Of course New York will not tolerate an entire season of Verdi and Massenet and Puccini and Mascagni. Wagner has accustomed them to the big dramatic emotions, and as music is the solace of the gods for all the ills of life, it is quite right that the patrons of grand opera from orchestra to gallery should be granted the vicarious emotions they crave, if it can be done without placing another lever in the hands of the enemy.

Now, as all know who have heard the great Russian operas, both classic and modern, they are far more dramatic, stirring, rousing, make a deeper and more insidious appeal to the primitive and barbaric in man, than anything Wagner ever wrote. And for sheer beauty they are unsurpassed. They make the music of the Germans cloyingly sweet and monotonous by contrast—that camouflage sweetness and God-like solemnity that concealed the mediaeval soul of a pseudo-modern race. Russian music is frankly wild, as becomes a country that is full of genius but has not yet found itself.

We are all angry with Russia today, just as we are always even more angry with fools than with knaves. But while political Russia is merely borning—only time and much experience pounds any sort of political sense into people—the artistic genius of Russia, like genius anywhere, has flamed upward, regardless of time or place or circumstance. I have never had any great admiration for the much vaunted Russian novelists, and think that their vogue in this country was largely due to intellectual snobbishness—the bane of all the arts in this United States of America—but its wearisome defects and naïveté are the result of too much time and the obvious fact that the word elimination does not exist in the Russian language. These men had intellect, sometimes on the grand scale, and they plodded along and muddled out something that they called fiction. But they were like the pioneers of a new land who felled great trees or pried stones out of the soil, and made rough, strong, ugly houses that their sophisticated descendants would not live in today. The Russian inheritors of those clumsy foundations will beyond a doubt be the greatest literary geniuses in the history of the world. But their time is not yet.

In music, however, they have arrived. We never hear of literary geniuses who improvise masterpieces at the age of 7 or even write brilliantly about nothing out of nowhere; but musical history is full of instances of small piano or violin geniuses setting their community agog.

Music is a gift so apart and so mysterious as almost to savor of the occult. It is as if it were the soul of a people determined to express itself without reference to any of the limitations imposed upon the other arts. It finds its conduits in the most unexpected places and it never misrepresents, to the sympathetic ear, the peculiar individuality of the ego that gave it birth. We know every country that has produced a music the better for the insidious response of our instincts; and for that reason alone no one with any artistic sincerity maintains that music is universal. It is more national than language or complexion.

Therefore have we, aside from our desire to enjoy in our classic opera house the best the world has to offer, the intelligent wish to understand better the nation now undergoing the terrible pangs of political birth. No doubt she will have revolution and counter-revolution, until a really strong man (Nicolai Nicolaievitch is my choice!) takes her in hand; but meanwhile we have the opportunity to study and perhaps understand this country of all possibilities through her music. In a sense it is a duty. The United States of America will emerge from this war with a power and a position in the world to which she never, in her provincial contentment, aspired. It may be that she will be the dominant power, and that it will be her hand that will guide the struggling republics of Germany and Russia. Well, we know Germany. Let us import the classic operas of Rimsky-Korsakoff and Moussorgsky and the modern masterpieces of Igor Strainvinsky, and absorb Russia. It is not often that the nerves are thrilled, the passionate desire for drama satisfied, the intellect enlightened, and a stern duty accomplished at the same time. This is our unique opportunity; and Russia would be as fortunate in having the most critical and appreciative audience in the Americas to receive the interpretation.

Moreover, we would have our first opportunity to see Russian ballet of the highest class, with the operas of Strainvinsky. London and Paris have had this privilege, as well as of hearing these marvelous operas, but so far as regards Russia we have been the suburb of Europe; content with one or two of the lighter operas and a third-rate ballet.

New York has always been intensely conservative musically. It took years to wean her from Faust. But these are not conservative times. We are all stimulated to a pitch above the normal, and want not only something new, but something great.

WOMEN ADD $500,000 TO Y. M. C. A. FUND

NATION-WIDE DRIVE BEGINS

Every Large City in the Country Gives Pledge to Aid in Raising $35,000,000 for War Uses.

Donations aggregating $500,000 were made to the Y. M. C. A. $35,000,000 war fund by a group of wealthy women in this city yesterday. The largest single gift was that of Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James, Chairman of the Woman's Committee of the National War Work Council, who contributed $100,000. Mrs. E. H. Harriman pledged $10,000 a month as long as the war lasts. The contributions were announced by Mrs. James at a luncheon in the Bankers' Club at 120 Broadway.

The other gifts that went to make up the total of a half million dollars were as follows: Mrs. William Church Osborn and Mrs. F. F. Thompson each $50,000, Dr. and Mrs. Walter B. James and Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss together $100,000, Mrs. Van Santvoord Merle Smith and Mrs. William Evarts Benjamin $20,000, and Mrs. James K. Talcott $17,500. Pledges of $10,000 each were received from Mrs. William Douglass Sloane, Mrs. John B. Drexel, Mrs. Charles B. Alexander, Mrs. Percy Stewart, and Mrs. Felix Warburg.

The committee reported great activity on the part of the woman Y. M. C. A. workers throughout the country. Meetings have already been held in fifteen large cities of the United States and will be continued in at least twenty cities during the war.

The first official returns in the nation-wide drive for $35,000,000 received at the National War Work Council last night revealed that every large city in the United States was hard at work in an organized effort to build up the desired fund. Chicago has already pledged $1,000,000, Cleveland is running a close second with $719,000, St. Louis follows with $337,000, and Cincinnati is next with $197,000. Buffalo has pledged more than $100,000.

The reports of the sectional campaigns divided along the lines of the military departments, exclusive of New York City's contributions, showed that the Central Division, with headquarters at Chicago, was in the lead with a total of $1,862,401, the Northeastern section, with headquarters at Boston, followed with $1,117,600; the Southwestern section, with headquarters at Dallas, Texas, came next with $231,215, and the Southern section, with headquarters at Atlanta, was next in line with $124,032.

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, in a letter received yesterday by Dr. John R. Mott, Chairman of the National War Work Council of the Y. M. C. A., commended the work of the Y. M. C. A. in the following terms: "I most heartily wish you all success in your desire to get the amount of money indispensable if the Y. M. C. A. is to do the work which it alone can do for the soldiers, and which it is vitally necessary to have done. I can speak from personal knowledge of this work. At the present time my daughter-in-law, Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., is with the Y. M. C. A. in Paris. I have myself seen, and benefited from, the canteens, the centre of healthy enjoyment and of rest, provided by the Y. M. C. A. for troops in the field. I know personally of its admirable work among railway men, which is in many respects closely akin to that which must be done among soldiers.

"At this moment the work you are doing for our armies in France is of the utmost value to them; nothing else could take its place. Any failure to back it up would be a veritable calamity to the army. I trust that the American people, whose sons, brothers, kinsfolk, and fellow-countrymen are at the front, will think of their needs and will aid them by responding to your appeal with the heartiest generosity."

A letter received from Major Gen. J. F. Bell also praised the movement to extend the Y. M. C. A. activities to the soldiers and sailors of the United States and her allies.

"The testimony of my officers," wrote General Bell, "indicates that the Y. M. C. A. is making a splendid contribution to the creation and maintenance of the morale among our men. The activities of the Y. M. C. A., supplemented by other activities, are largely responsible for their keeping up with and getting used to the new conditions under which they live."

The Board of Directors of the American Sugar Refining Company yesterday voted $50,000 to the Young Men's Christian Association War Fund, to be subscribed through the various cities where the refineries of the company are located.

CABOT WARD RESIGNS.

Park Commissioner, Now in France, Will Continue War Work.

Park Commissioner Cabot Ward cabled his resignation to Mayor Mitchel yesterday. He has been in Europe on a leave of absence as a member of a military commission authorized by the War Department to study anti-aircraft methods in France and England, with a view to making recommendations for defenses against air raids on the Atlantic Coast of the United States.

It was his intention to return to his duties here on Nov. 1, but he has been commissioned a Major on the Officers' Reserve Corps and assigned to the aviation branch of the service. Major Ward served in Porto Rico under President Roosevelt, first as Auditor General, then as Secretary of State, and finally as Governor of the island.

Upon receiving the resignation, Mayor Mitchel swore in as Commissioner Robert F. Volentine, who has been Acting Commissioner in the absence of Commissioner Ward.

SCOTT NEARING FINED $50.

Anti-War Crusader Pleads Guilty of Disorderly Conduct.

DULUTH, Minn., Nov. 13.—Scott Nearing, formerly assistant professor of political economy at the University of Pennsylvania, who was arrested last night while making an anti-war speech here, was arraigned in the Police Court today, pleaded guilty to a charge of disorderly conduct, and was fined $50. Four others arrested with him were held on the charge of vagrancy.

Nearing, who now terms himself "President and Chairman of the Executive Committee of the People's Council of America," was arrested while making an impassioned speech in Woodmen's Hall. He had reached a point where, police say, he demanded "immediate peace," when a policeman, one of fifty who had quietly entered the hall, laid a hand on his shoulder.

Some excitement followed, the crowd hooting the police. Nearing and four companions were bundled into a patrol wagon and hurried to the City Hall. Search of the prisoners revealed socialistic literature and cards showing that they had paid dues in an organization for the suppression of the war. According to the police, Nearing also had a card showing payments on a special "anti-militarism assessment."

Norman Angell, the author and publicist, will deliver a lecture at the Neighborhood Playhouse, 466 Grand Street, on Friday morning at 11:30 o'clock on "Success in Our War Aims," it was announced yesterday by the Henry Street Settlement. The lecture is one in a course in training for social service conducted for the settlement under the direction of Rita Wallach Morgenthau at the Playhouse. The demand for such training, according to the announcement, prompted the settlement to provide the course, which consists of games and manual work in addition to the lectures. Classes open every Friday morning at 9:30 o'clock and will be held each week until Feb. 15, 1918. Tickets for the course are $10 and for single lectures 50 cents.

The Rev. Dr. Arthur Cushman McGiffert was elected President of Union Theological Seminary yesterday at a meeting of the Board of Directors, succeeding Dr. Francis Brown, who died on Oct. 15, 1916. Dr. McGiffert was Washburn Professor of Church History at the Seminary, and is considered one of the broadest of modern Biblical scholars. He is widely known as a theologian and the author of many works of a religious nature.

Dr. McGiffert was born at Sauquoit, N. Y., March 4, 1861, the son of the Rev. Joseph Nelson McGiffert and Harriett Whiting McGiffert. He was graduated from Western Reserve University in 1882 and the Union Theological Seminary in 1885. He then studied at the University of Berlin, the University of Marburg, and in France and Italy. He was ordained to the Presbyterian ministry in 1888, becoming an instructor, and later Professor of Church History in Lane Theological Seminary, Cincinnati, Ohio, until 1893, when he became a member of the Faculty of Union Theological Seminary.

He is the author of the following works: "Dialogue Between a Christian and a Jew," "A History of Christianity in the Apostolic Age," "The Apostles' Creed," "The Christian Point of View," "Protestant Thought Before Kant," "Martin Luther, the Man and His Work," and "The Rise of Modern Religious Ideas."

GIVES SEA FILM SECRETS.

Plaintiff in Suit Tells How Octopus Was Made for Movies.

J. Ernest Williamson had just begun testifying before Judge Manton in the Federal District Court yesterday in his suit against the Universal Film Manufacturing Company for $4,750 alleged to be due for services in connection with taking pictures of sea monsters to illustrate the film play of Jules Verne's novel of "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea" when the case was adjourned until tomorrow.

Williamson has an apparatus called a submarine tube, with which he says he can take pictures of moving creatures at a depth of more than fifty feet. The plaintiff testified that the pictures were taken in the waters of the Bahamas in March, 1915, and Siegfried F. Hartman, his counsel, explained that the submarine of Captain Nemo, the hero of the novel, was only a shell and was supported on the surface by pontoons. One of the scenes in the picture is a fight between an octopus and a diver. But as the octopus is rare except in the Mediterranean a substitute had to be achieved.

This was accomplished by a system of rubber hose, it was said, to represent the eight tentacles, and of sheet rubber was made the small, round body with its gleaming eyes. He also told some details of his picture-taking device, of the big lens set in the chamber where the men go, and of how the tube is sometimes fastened to the bottom of a barge. He has taken good pictures of living fish at a distance of 200 feet, he said.

Mr. Hartman in opening the trial dilated upon the arts which have made moving pictures so attractive. W. H. Griffin, for the plaintiff, explained that the contract his client had with the defendant called for payment at the rate of $150 a week from June to December and not for only eight weeks, as the defendant alleged.

ROBT. M. GALLAWAY, BANKER, DIES AT 80

ONCE HEAD OF IRON WORKS

Robert Macy Gallaway, one of the oldest bankers in this city, who retired this year after twenty-five years as President of the Merchants' National Bank, died yesterday at his home, 68 East Fifty-fifth Street, in his eighty-first year. Mr. Gallaway resigned the Presidency of the Merchants' National in last January, when a syndicate succeeded in gaining control of the company, but he was immediately elected a Director of the Hanover National Bank.

Mr. Gallaway was born in this city, Aug. 4, 1837, and received his early education at Phillips Andover Academy. He was graduated from Yale with the class of 1858, entering the employ of his father, a Scotchman, who kept a store in this city. Later he was with the Atlantic Dock Iron Works, of which he was elected President. Many large gas-making plants in this country were built by the Atlantic Dock Iron Works Company.

Mr. Gallaway lived in France for several years, returning to this country at the request of J. P. Morgan to enter the railroad field. He took an active interest in the affairs of the Northern Pacific Railroad and President Arthur appointed him a Commissioner to look into the road's land grants.

STRAY BULLET KILLS BABY AT MOTHER'S SIDE

Dorothy Ackerman, 2 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Ackerman of 148 Madeline Avenue, Clifton, N. J., was killed instantly yesterday by a stray bullet fired by a policeman a third of a mile away at an escaping burglar suspect. The child stood in Lakeview Avenue. Her mother, near by, did not hear the shot and was bewildered when the child fell dead. She collapsed.

Patrolman Henry Prall, unaware that his bullet had hit the child, returned to the police station with two of the three men he had chased. He needed medical attention when news of the death reached him. He was detained at Police Headquarters. Prall and a constable went to the store of William J. Fox, a grocer, 124 Madeline Avenue, when Fox, who had been robbed recently, reported three suspicious characters in the neighborhood. He arrested two of the three men he found hiding behind a tree and fired five shots at the third, who escaped. A pistol, a blackjack, and some burglar tools were found along the route over which the third man fled.

Michael Ward, 469 Main Street, Paterson, one of the men arrested, hung himself with his necktie in the Clifton jail. He was cut down, not much harmed, but told the police he would yet succeed in killing himself. The other prisoner said he was Alexander Matthews of 115 Lewis Street, Paterson.

13-Cent Tips by Thirteen Club.

Colonel J. F. Hobbs lifted a mirror that lay beside his plate at a banquet table in Meyer's Hotel in Hoboken last night and smashed it across the back of his chair. The fifty-one other diners present at once gave him attention. Colonel Hobbs made a few opening remarks and the diners spilled salt about. They knew it was the 13th of the month and was sorry it wasn't Friday. There were thirteen at each table, and the price of each dinner was $2.13. Moreover, the little band of superstition defiers ate under umbrellas, and at the end of the evening tipped the waiters 13 cents each and went home declaring it was the best dinner ever held by the Thirteen Club.

HOOVER ANNOUNCES RULES FOR BAKERS

LIMITS SUGAR AND FATS

100,000,000 Pounds of Each, It Is Estimated, Will Be Saved by New Methods.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Rigid restrictions upon bakers in the effort to avoid wastage in bread and other bakery products were announced today by the Food Administration, to go into effect Dec. 10, when the standardized one-pound loaf becomes an actuality. The Food Administration will not only regulate the size of loaves and rolls, but announces drastic regulations which will prevent overproduction.

One feature of the regulations as announced is the prohibition of a baker from destroying any bakery product, no matter if it has become stale. Another provides against bakers accepting returns of products, or allowing credit for any unsold products.

To conserve ingredients entering into bakers' products, the Food Administrator limits the size of loaves of bread to sixteen or twenty-four ounces baked. Rolls may be baked only in units weighing from one to three ounces.

To save sugar, the Food Administrator decrees that bakers may not use over three pounds of cane or beet product, or three and one half pounds of corn sugar, to every 196 pounds of any flour, meal or mixture. Not more than six pounds of fresh milk, from which the butter fats must be extracted, may be used in the same quantity of mixture, while of shortening, no more than two pounds may be used, containing not more than 15 per cent. of animal fats. If he desires, the baker may use two pounds of vegetable fats as shortening.

The saving in sugar and lard through the Food Administrator's order, it is estimated, will be approximately 100,000,000 pounds each a year.

"The licensee, in selling bakery products, shall keep such products moving to the consumer in as direct a line as practicable and without unreasonable delay. Resales within the same trade without reasonable justification, especially if tending to result in a higher market price to the retailer or consumer, will be dealt with as an unfair practice.

"The licensee shall not buy, contract for, sell, store, or otherwise handle or deal in any food commodities for the purpose of unreasonably increasing the price or restricting the supply of such commodities, or of monopolizing, or attempting to monopolize, either locally or generally, any of such commodities.

"The licensee shall not destroy any bakery products and shall not knowingly commit waste or wilfully permit preventable deterioration in connection with the manufacture, distribution, or sale of any bakery products.

"The licensee shall not accept returns of bread or other bakery products, nor make cash payments, nor allow credit, to any retailer for any unsold bread or other unsold bakery products, nor shall the licensee exchange any bread or bakery products for other bread or bakery products which he has sold."

Regulating Size of Loaves.

"Rule 1. The licensee shall manufacture bread and offer it for sale only in the following specified weights, or multiples thereof, which shall be net weights, unwrapped, twelve hours after baking: 16-ounce units (not to run over 17 ounces); 24-ounce units (not to run over 25½ ounces).

"Rule 2. The licensee shall manufacture rolls and offer them for sale only in units weighing from one to three ounces but no rolls shall be manufactured or offered for sale which shall weigh, unwrapped, twelve hours after baking, less than one ounce nor more than three ounces.

"Rule 3. The standard weights herein prescribed shall be determined by averaging the weight of not less than twenty-five loaves of bread of any one unit, or five dozen rolls of any one unit, and such average shall not be less than the minimum nor more than the maximum prescribed by the rules and regulations for such units.

"Rule 4. The licensee in mixing any dough for bread or rolls shall not use the following ingredients in amounts exceeding those specified below, per unit of 196 pounds of any flour, or meal, or any mixture thereof:

Sugar—Not to exceed 3 pounds of can or beet sugar or in lieu thereof 3½ pounds of corn sugar. Where sweetened condensed milk is used, the licensee, in determining the permitted amount of sugar, shall deduct the added sugar content of such condensed milk from the net amount of other sugar, of the kinds herein designated.

Milk.—Not to exceed 6 pounds of fresh milk from which the butter fats have been extracted, or the equivalent thereof.

Shortening.—No shortening shall be used except as follows: Not to exceed 2 pounds of "compounds" containing not more than 15 per cent. of animal fats.

In lieu of such "compounds" the licensee may use not to exceed 2 pounds of vegetable fats.

"The licensee in making any bread or rolls shall not add any sugars or fats to the dough during the process of baking, or to the bread or rolls when baked."

Price Basis Without Delivery.

The Food Administrator also made these recommendations to bakers:

"The United States Food Administrator earnestly urges all wholesale bakers to establish as the wholesale prices of their products the prices at which they will offer such products for sale in lots of twenty-five pounds or more, unwrapped, for cash, at the bakery door, the prices so established to be subject to such additional charges as may be fair for wrapping and delivering when such services are performed by the baker. The United States Food Administrator requests that, when such wholesale prices are established, the licensee report this fact and state such prices to the Federal Food Administrator in the State where his bakery is located.

"Inasmuch as some wholesale bakers in certain communities are now retailing bread at their plants direct to the consumer, unwrapped, undelivered, and for cash, at wholesale prices, the United States Food Administrator recommends that this practice be extended wherever bakers find it possible to do so, adding only sufficient extra charge to cover extra expense.

"The United States Food Administrator, believing that frequent deliveries are uneconomical and tend to enhance prices, urges all bakers to reduce deliveries wherever possible to one a day over each route, and to consolidate deliveries or zone their territories in order to reduce the expense of deliveries as far as possible."

BIG PRICES PAID FOR SUGAR.

Several lots of raw sugar offered at auction among unclaimed merchandise yesterday at the Appraiser's Annex, 612 Washington Street, were sold for four or five times the value fixed by the Government at the time of appraisement.

One lot of 10,191 pounds went at $1,150, and 1,230 pounds brought $142.50. A third lot of 84 pounds of refined sugar was sold for $15.50. All of the sugar, which had been abandoned by the importers, had been in the custody of the Government for from six months to a year.

Owing to conditions in Italy there was a scramble for 118 quarts of olive oil, appraised at $72. The bids started at $25 for the lot and finally went to $115. Italian buyers made a drive for 140 pounds of Roman cheese, which, appraised at $84, brought $160. Cotton and jute bags and miscellaneous dry goods and other articles sold at high prices.

The auction will be continued today and will cover several lots of distilled liquors, wines, and tobacco.

SETTLE WINTER MILK PRICE.

Farmers Agree Not to Insist on Further Advance.

After an all-day meeting yesterday of the Directors of the Dairymen's League it was announced that the farmers would not insist upon a raise in the price of milk for December, but would charge on the October basis until the first of the year. This is half a cent below the price the producers are now getting. This action came as a result of the conference in Washington a few days ago between the officers of the league, Arthur Williams, City Food Administrator; Henry Moskowitz, City Commissioner of Markets, and representatives of the dealers' organization. At that meeting the officers of the league practically accepted the Government's request that milk prices be kept at the October mark and promised to lay the matter before the league.

There is a feeling among the farmers, however, that they have been asked too much and the distributers too little. Their contention is that the price they are getting for milk is not too large considering the increased cost of feeds and labor. One member of the league said the consumer would not be the beneficiary, as the manufacturers of condensed milk were paying more for milk than the distributers. He said the result of yesterday's action would be that every farmer within access of a condensed milk receiving plant would sell to the manufacturer all of his product he could.

The Food Administrator is to appoint two commissions to investigate the milk business. One will direct its attention to the Chicago market and the other to the New York market. In making this inquiry the commission will go into the interstate traffic in milk, a phase the local authorities have been unable to investigate except through experts. The Food Administration is said to have promised the farmers here that if the investigation showed that the November and December raises were actually necessary so that the producers could make a reasonable profit, they would allow them to make the desired raise at another time and in this way, it was expected, they could recover any loss that would be entailed by the present agreement. The action of the Dairymen's League does not mean a drop in prices to the consumers. They are still paying for milk at the October prices, as the dealers agreed with the Food Administrator to absorb any loss rather than raise prices until it was known what action the farmers were going to take.

FOOD HOARDS NOT ON HOOVER'S LISTS

STORED IN VACANT LOFTS

Eight Buildings in One Section Reported Full of Non-Perishable Foodstuffs.

The recent report of Chief William J. Flynn of the United States Secret Service to the effect that foodstuffs to the value of about $40,000,000 were being held in storage in New York and vicinity, gave the Government and the public the first information of the existence of nearly all of the food described and did not duplicate to any considerable extent routine reports on stored food, according to a statement issued last night by Arthur Williams, the Federal Food Administrator in New York City. Mr. Williams said that the existence of a great deal of the food discovered by Chief Flynn and his men could not have been known without the aid of the Secret Service.

Thus Mr. Williams's statement is an answer from the Food Administration to the Merchants' Association and others who offered the suggestion, in many cases amounting to a positive assertion, that Chief Flynn's report related to food stored in the ordinary course of business and accounted for in routine reports to the Food Administration, the Department of Agriculture and other Government bodies. In addition Mr. Williams admitted that evidences of pro-German or profiteering manipulation appeared when investigators sought to learn who owned some of the stored food and why it was held.

The Food Administrator's statement, however, introduced a new element of uncertainty into the situation by asserting that Chief Flynn's report related to food "stored elsewhere as well as here," although the Secret Service report was given out as describing only food stored in the metropolitan district of New York and vicinity. Mr. Williams, who sent his statement to the newspaper offices last night, could not be found later, so the geographical limits in his mind of the territory included in "elsewhere" could not be learned, but one of his assistants in the Food Administration office said that he was under the impression that the Administrator had meant to say that the food reported upon by Chief Flynn was stored all over the country. Chief Flynn could not be reached last night, but it was clear from his report that he referred only to food stored in the metropolitan district of New York.

Government officials yesterday received information to the effect that foodstuffs had been secretly stored in vacant buildings, lofts, and other places not listed as storage warehouses. Eight buildings in one section on the west side were reported as full of canned goods, flour, sugar, and other nonperishable foodstuffs. Government agents were said to be investigating these reports and would say nothing about the quantity of food supposed to be stored or what suspicions had been aroused.

Mr. Williams's statement was apparently provoked by the criticism voiced in several quarters yesterday when the report spread that Chief Flynn had made his revelations to the Food Administration in Washington ten days or two weeks ago, and that nothing had been done in consequence. The statement began with a reply to the charge that there had been delay on the part of the Food Administration. Mr. Williams said:

"Those making the suggestion that there has been unnecessary delay between receiving the report of stored goods in large quantities and acting upon the report probably do not understand the circumstances. The Secret Service report is simply as to the presence of goods here and elsewhere. That which was recently made public in this city, with a certain degree of sensational effect, relates to goods stored elsewhere as well as here, under different forms of ownership, and which, if not entirely, at least to some considerable extent, had not been previously included in any routine reports upon stored goods.

"Take as one illustration a reported storage of 9,350 cases of milk, afterward found upon examination to amount to 61,000 cases, each case containing forty-eight pound cans. The presence of these goods in the larger quantity had not been reported and could not have been known without the effective aid of the Secret Service. Some question arises as to the identity of the sonsigner, as well as to the consignee, and there seems to be some confusion also as to the names in which they were held, the original report indicating a name of distinctly German type. It will be apparent that very careful investigation has to be made to determine the facts without doing possible injustice, and even now the investigations are not complete and the situation is not entirely clear as to many lots.

"The second illustration relates to the storage of a very large quantity of sugar, again traced by the Secret Service. The company which, according to the report, owned the sugar denied any responsibility for its ownership. The Secret Service, however, continued its efforts, and it is hoped has finally located the actual ownership of the sugar and the responsibility for its reported presence in such large quantities.

"Another illustration is the report of large quantities of perishable foods at the terminals in this city. The consignees of these foods were paying demurrage, having in view possibly either their destruction through delay upon the tracks or holding the present high prices or forcing the market still higher. Upon asking the names and addresses of the consignees for the purpose of making them public, all of the cars, representing an aggregate of a half thousand, taking that number from the usual traffic and blocking the terminals, were immediately emptied, and occasion for further action ceased. Such action, however, as was taken may be construed as a very clear warning of the fact that with the effective assistance of the Secret Service of the nation it will become practically impossible to hoard food and to hide the hoarding. In every case before any action can be taken the full history of each case must be known, as it is obvious that goods in storage may be in the normal course of trade and not in any way subject to criticism.

"Some misunderstanding seems to exist as to reporting the presence of food in quantities. Thus yesterday the owner of a large warehouse in Brooklyn called, saying he had never made a report on large quantities of meat, and had not understood one was required. He volunteered to make any report that might be desired by the Food Administration, and expressed a desire to comply fully with any provisions of the law in respect to hoarding with which, however, he seemed entirely unfamiliar."

It was officially admitted yesterday that loans had been made on a great deal of the stored food, but it was added that all information as to the owners of the food and those responsible for its storage would have to come from Washington. The Merchants' Association did not receive yesterday a reply to its telegram to Administrator Hoover requesting further information about Chief Flynn's report and protesting against such sensational revelations.

STUDIES SALTPETER PRICES.

SANTIAGO, Chile, Nov. 13.—The Chilean Government is looking into a project for the centralization of the purchase of saltpeter for the Entente Governments. It is studying especially what course to take toward the producers of saltpeter.

Regarding the question of saltpeter prices, the Minister of Finance has telegraphed the Chilean Minister at London pointing out that the fixing of a buying price, making speculation impossible, would be favorable to the buyers. He asks the envoy to say to the Governments of the Entente that if an end is to be put to speculation affecting the price of saltpeter an end should also be put to speculation in the price of sacks and fuel substances which are needed at the mines.

While the prices of sacks and combustibles are increasing day by day, he urges, it is impossible to name a set figure at which saltpeter shall be sold.

Exporters to Discuss Mexico.

Alejandro R. Cota and Abraham Ferriz Savinon, both of whom are now in this country studying, as representatives of the Mexican Government, problems and devices that will be valuable in the industrial reconstruction of Mexico, will speak at the November luncheon of the American Manufacturers' Export Association. A number of other Mexican representatives will also be present at the luncheon, which will be held today at the Hotel Biltmore at 12:30 P. M., and there will be a general discussion concerning trade conditions and the possibilities of increasing business between the United States and Mexico. The purposes of the meeting have the indorsement of the State Department and of the Mexican Ambassador at Washington. In addition to the members of the association, the business public will be admitted.

Crude Rubber Prices Still Drop.

In spite of several things that ought to mean good business, including the most attractive prices quoted for some time, important buyers of crude rubber continue to hold aloof from the local market, and quotations on the leading varieties are weakening still further. The combination of poor buying and increasing receipts has had the effect of putting prices on the leading Brazilian rubbers below the comparative levels of the leading plantation varieties. Upriver fine was quoted yesterday at 59@59¼ cents for spots, against 61@61½ cent for first later crepe. Smoked sheets were held at 60 cents. The cheaper Brazilians, up-river course and upper Caucho ball were quoted, respectively at 39 and 37½ cents a pound for spots.

Quite a good part of the backwardness of the retail millinery business in the last several weeks is attributed by trade authorities to the apparent inability of the hat manufacturers to turn out something that is different enough to attract the attention of the public and at the same time be in keeping with the current season. Particular attention is called to the probability of some manufacturer making a lot of money if he can bring out a novelty that can be sold freely at this time, but without detracting too much from the salability of the goods that the buyers now have in stock. It is admitted that the problem is a difficult one, particularly in producing something suitable for the general department store trade, but there seems to be some money waiting for the man who can fill the gap.

Hard Coal Output Cut.

The Coal Trade Journal will say today that efforts of anthracite operators and the local Fuel Administrators to relieve the shortage of domestic coal in Greater New York have been nullified by curtailed production during the first ten days of November as a result of the holidays and the floods. Loss of time at the mines earlier in the month is reflected by lighter receipts at the local ports this week, but, fortunately, milder weather has tended to keep the demand within bounds. Bituminous consumers who rely on the open market for all or some part of their requirements will be helped by the recent ruling permitting jobbers to add a fifteen-cent commission to coal which they contracted to buy previous to Aug. 21 at higher prices than those fixed by the President on that date.

Exhibition of American Designs.

The exhibition of American art designs for silk fabrics for the Fall of 1918, which is being conducted in the Ritz-Carlton by Toepfer & Schroff, Inc., is attracting wide attention in the local silk trade. Most of the leading silk manufacturers with offices in this city have already attended and express the highest admiration for the originality and distinction of the designs shown. It is said to be the first exhibition of its kind in this country, and is looked upon as a big step forward in the efforts of the American designers to gain the recognition which it is now been is well deserved. From a financial standpoint, it is said to be an assured success already, though it still has several days to run. Designs are shown ranging in price from $25 to $50, and orders have been plentiful all up and down the line.

Household China Still Scarce.

Middle Western manufacturers of household china are still four to six months behind on deliveries and, according to reports from the trade there are no prospects of the situation improving in the immediate future. Retailers find it impossible to get merchandise as they require it, with the result that many of their lines are out altogether, while those which they have are to a great extent incomplete. New Jersey manufacturers, on the other hand, are said to be in a much better condition. They have been able practically to catch up with deliveries in many lines, though their volume of business has been vastly increased.

Men's Scarfs in Demand.

Scarfs for men, according to reports from the local trade, are proving to be a large item in the Fall trade. Already there has been a considerable turnover in the lighter weight fabrics, with silk, so far, the favorite. Quality, it is said, has been the chief consideration in nearly every instance, and the price, though high, has been paid without question. The brilliant color combinations of other years, however, are said not to be getting the attention they ordinarily do, most men apparently preferring the darker shades. Black and white in stripes and in checks of varying degrees of prominence have been the leaders so far. Some heavier pieces in wool for later in the year are being offered, and it is expected that the angora finish in these lines will again be popular.

Spring Shirts Not to be Sombre.

Manufacturers of men's shirts are not going to add to the present sombreness of the world by bringing out Spring lines embodying dark hues. While not of the calibre to make them a menace to the public eyesight, the colors of the new shirts will be vivid enough to suit the tastes of any of the more conservative "swell" dressers. Some of the young men in that class may find them a bit dull, though. Military effects, both in cut and colorings, have done well in the advance sales booked. These sales have been large, and the only drawback is the possibility of deliveries being held up by slow shipment of shirtings from some of the finishing plants. The business in hand shows that the soft cuff shirt has lost none of its popularity, and some factors in the trade now doubt if the stiff cuff ever will regain all of its former prestige.

C. O. D. Deliveries Not Favored.

While there seems to be an idea in the minds of certain women that retail stores deliver merchandise bought C. O. D. more promptly than that for cash or on a charge account, this is far from being a fact, according to an executive of a local store. "If anything, the latter goods receive preference," he said, "though there is practically no discrimination one way or the other so far as the stores themselves are concerned. Many things enter into the question of delivery, including the time at which the goods were bought, the number of other C. O. D. purchases that come down for a given delivery, &c. The same thing applies to cash or charge purchases, of which there are usually a great many more, and which doubtless accounts for any slower delivery there may be."

Gray Goods Buyers Keep Busy.

Buyers in the local gray goods market did not let the grass grow in their vicinity yesterday, and a nice volume of business was put through in a more or less quiet way. In the printcloths there were further sales of 38½-inch 64-60s at 11 cents for 1917 shipments. Spot lots of 38-inch 68-72s, which are growing very scarce here, were sold at 12½ cents, and for this year's shipments buyers again took 38½-inch 60-48s at 8½ cents. Bids for other constructions were in the market at slightly under the asking prices, some of which went through and some of which did not. In the sheetings 15 cents was again paid for 48-square four-yards, while 4.70s and 5.50s brought 11¼ and 10 cents, respectively. Buying of specialties also kept up well. Printcloths closed this way:

TO DISCUSS LABOR IN WAR.

The National Founders' Association Meets Here Today.

Labor war problems and industrial relations will have an important place in the deliberations of the twenty-first annual convention of the National Founders' Association, which will open this morning at the Hotel Astor. William H. Barr of Buffalo, President of the association, will preside.

Following the reports of officers to be made at the opening session, George F. Monaghan, general counsel of the organization, will speak on "Federal Control and Industrial Legislation," and A. F. Corbin, Chairman of a special committee, will read a report on "Safety and Sanitation." The afternoon session will be devoted to discussions of Government contracts under eight-hour restrictions, the farmers' interest in industrial relations, and the present condition of the railways of the country. The convention will close with the annual dinner tonight at the Astor, with Governor Whitman as the chief speaker.

Moves to Dissolve "Cotton Trust."

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., Nov. 13.—More than one thousand corporations and individuals engaged in ginning, storing and trading in cotton and more than fifty companies manufacturing or handling cotton seed and its products, are named as defendants in a suit instituted by Governor R. L. Williams, to dissolve what is termed a "cotton trust" which he filed with the State Corporation Commission. The Governor in his petition charges the defendants with monopolizing and restraining trade and discrimination.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Irregular Price Changes in a Narrower List—Awaiting Italian War News.

The stock market is manifestly holding its breath while waiting indications of the outcome of the great struggle which is impending in Italy and the decision between the opposing factions in Russia. Activity suffered further contraction yesterday with transactions running to only about 500,000 shares. Price movements were irregular with few changes large enough to attract much attention. One of the exceptions was International Mercantile Marine, which was consistently weak throughout the session, both issues closing considerably under Monday's final prices. The Street has fallen into the habit of ascribing each swing in Marine to operations of a pool which in turn are supposed to reflect the varying fortunes of the plan for paying off the accumulation of preferred dividends. Most traders fell into the error of thinking that with the appointment of a committee of three Directors to recommend a plan the problem was as good as settled. It is now coming to be believed that the matter will drag along for some weeks.

So far the stock market has lived up to the predictions of bankers who expect to see little activity until the war enters upon a new phase. Just now the Street's intuition that peace is not so far off as the public has been taught to believe, is giving way before the authoritative utterances from such men as the British Premier, who regards the Italian defeat and Russia's disorganization as factors which may materially lengthen the struggle.

Lloyd George's frank review of the mistakes of the Allies in his speech at Paris has proved an engrossing subject of discussion in financial circles. To a surprising extent the press and public in this country have avoided criticism of the successive steps taken by the United States to aid the European allies, on the ground that the Washington Administration is accomplishing a great deal in the face of obstacles, the size of which is but little appreciated. Criticism of the mistakes of the Allies was freely made until this nation became a partner with them. The outspoken comment by Lloyd George was accepted as a forward step in the clearing away of delusions under which a considerable part of this country's population undoubtedly has gone about its business and pleasures very much as though the war could cause no serious economic changes here. The financial district is perhaps ahead of the rest of the country in realizing what the war is likely to cost, and has taken this into account in opposing the authorization of any unnecessary expenditures by corporations which would necessitate financing or the diversion of labor from war enterprises.

MONEY PLENTIFUL IN LONDON.

Lower Bank Deposit Rates Suggested to Help War Bonds.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—Money was plentiful in the market today and discounts were quiet.

It is suggested that the banks reduce deposit rates except on foreign balances in order to induce the investment of money in war bonds. If this should prove unsuccessful, Treasury bill rates probably will be reduced.

The Stock Exchange was quiet and steady. The strength of the war loan on Government buying, the firmness of shipping shares, and the continued weakness of Argentine rails were the only prominent features.

Petrograd exchange was easier at 372. Scandinavians were unsettled.

EXCHANGE RATES FALL.

COPENHAGEN, Monday, Nov. 12.—Foreign exchange rates here began to fall on the receipt of reports of Premier Kerensky's good prospects. Dollars today were quoted at 305, and marks at 44. Other exchanges showed smaller decreases.

Big Drop on Stockholm Exchange.

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 13.—Advances in the money and stock markets last week, due to optimism over the Russian situation, were sharply checked today. Graekgesberg shares dropped 30 points and other stocks also receded. The pound sterling declined to 12.30 and the mark to 43, the franc to 45 and the dollar to 265.

Trading Quiet on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, Nov. 13.—Trading was quiet on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes, 60 francs for cash; exchange on London, 27 francs 37½ centimes; 5 per cent. loan, 87 francs 65 centimes.

SEES DANGER TO RAILROADS

S. Davies Warfield Assails Proposed Federal Incorporation.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 13.—The proposed plan of Federal incorporation of railroads was declared to be revolutionary corporate legislation by S. Davies Warfield, President of the Continental Trust Company of Baltimore, in an address before today's session of the sixth annual convention of the Investment Bankers' Association of America.

Mr. Warfield, who also is Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Seaboard Air Line Railway and President of the National Association of Owners of Railroad Securities, said the plan was not only fraught with danger to the people, in that it took five out of six steps toward Government ownership, but that it was a menace to holders of all classes of securities, because it proposed the greatest autocracy in corporate management yet suggested. If enacted into law it would not alone apply to railroad corporations, he contended, but sooner or later the same principle would probably be extended to all corporations engaged in interstate commerce.

"The plan is not that the carriers may have the right to incorporate under a Federal act, giving up their State charters," said Mr. Warfield, "but that the act will arbitrarily compel the carriers to take out charters under the Federal act. To accomplish this, since no other means has been thus far shown for its accomplishment, it will be necessary for all existing interstate railroad companies, organized under State charters, to sell all their properties to new corporations to be organized under a Federal act, changing the very fundamentals incident to present railroad existence, a plan so sweeping as to demand the attention of every stockholder and bondholder of every railroad in the United States."

Kansas City Rys. Earn $7,408,019.

The annual report of the Kansas City Railways Company for the year ended June 30 last, shows gross revenues of $7,408,019, an increase of $351,515. However, owing to an increase of $318,365 in operating expenses, the net revenue earned was only $2,412,934, an increase of $34,184. The total income was $2,449,418, an increase of $55,420, which under the terms of its franchise, gives the company a surplus on the year of $530,741, this, however, representing a decrease of $65,028.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

The Marine Back Dividends.

With the drop of International Mercantile Marine preferred back to 92 yesterday, speculation was renewed regarding the plan to pay off the back dividends, which has been hanging fire for some weeks. There was the usual crop of reports that the whole plan had fallen through, but there is at least no foundation for this. The plain truth is that nobody knows just what is to be done. A special committee of three Directors, appointed at the last board meeting, has the matter under consideration, but the whole affair has been kept strictly confidential, and even the names of the men forming the committee are known only to the company officials. The next Board meeting does not take place until two weeks from Thursday, and it is by no means sure that the committee will report even then, or if it does, that the report will be made public unless it includes a definite plan, and this plan is definitely adopted. The back dividends in question amount to 88 per cent.

Decline in British Bank Shares.

Current prices of shares of British banks show a considerable decline compared with the quotations reported just before the outbreak of the war in 1914. The stock of the Bank of England, quoted at 247½ at that time, is now being sold at 200. A year ago its price was 209¼. Shares of Lloyd's Bank have declined from 27¼ to 23¾, and the shares of the London City and Midland Bank, the largest commercial bank in the world, declined from 9 to 7⅝, while the shares of Parr's Bank show a drop from 40¼ to 29¼. The falling off in the price of the National Provincial Bank's shares amounts to 7¼ points. The Bank of England stock yields 5 per cent. and the shares of the other British banks have yields ranging from 5 to about 7 per cent. Since 1914 the prices of New York bank and trust company stocks have advanced.

Oil Price Fixing.

As time passes without an announcement of fixed prices for petroleum and oil products, the trade grows more confident that the action to be taken will not be drastic. While production of crude oil has been increasing in some of the fields, the expansion has not been great enough so far this year to prevent substantial withdrawals from existing stocks. In other words, consumption has continued to exceed output, and in the face of this situation petroleum prices have not increased much in several months. The inability of the producers to keep the supplies of petroleum apace with consumption has not been the result of lack of effort. In all the fields feverish activity, despite extraordinary prices for materials, is reported, but at the same time the use of oil for war and commercial purposes is steadily reaching for new high records.

Hoover's Tables.

Herbert C. Hoover's activities as food conservationist have dwarfed the importance of his past work as a mining engineer except among mining men. The investing public, probably, is generally not aware of the fact that calculations which he made to govern the scientific purchases of mining stocks are the subject of much study by experts on mining shares. Hoover's tables take a specified price for copper, the known content of a particular mine and the number of shares of the company owning the mine or mines, as the case may be, and show what should be paid for the stock in order to return 4, 5, 6, 7, or more per cent. over and above the portion of earnings set aside to amortize the investment over the period of the life of the property in question. A mining man called attention to the tables yesterday, and in applying them showed that, after allowing for a 7 per cent. return and 4 per cent. set aside per share for amortization, Kennecott Copper stock would be a profitable "buy" up to nearly $75 a share. The calculation dealt with both the Kennecott and the Braden copper properties, setting the price of copper at 15 cents a pound, but without allowing for the greatly increased cost of production at the present time.

War Taxation Reform.

Just as in this country there is a widespread demand for a revision of the Government's taxation program, so in England there is agitation for income tax reform. The London Economist in the latest issue to reach here criticises Parliament for its war financing plans, and declares that the House has still to show that it recognizes, and means to stop, the dangers of financing the war to so great an extent by inflation, and urges that legislation be enacted providing for a simple and direct method of taxation. Expressing the hope that Parliament will soon give more serious treatment to the subject of war finance, The Economist says: "The Committee on Expenditures has worked hard in the recess, and is expected to produce results forthwith. This energy is welcome, but Government expenditure—wickedly as the public money is being wasted—is only one side of the matter. Through finance the Government can control the spending of the citizens and ration their buying power, so setting the nation's industrial energy free from war needs. It has failed to do so, and Mr. Bonar Law's budget, so pitiful in its use of the weapon of taxation, was accepted with hardly a murmur by the House, and most of the murmuring was against the peddling increases in taxation proposed by it, which became still more futile in consequence of these protests." In urging immediate action in respect to tax reform, the London authority says: "No task can be more pressing, for it is only through sound finance that our staying power can be secured, and staying power means victory and peace."

A Question of Rates.

Most of the big men in the shipping industry are now in Washington, helping the Shipping Board in its wrestlings with the problem of operating compensation for ship-owners who are now running their own ships, requisitioned by the Board, for the Government's account. It appears likely at present that the problem will be solved by the adoption of a sliding scale, which is expected to prove fairer than a rigid percentage. The cost of operation, principally loading and unloading, is usually proportionately higher for small ships, on short voyages, than on long vyages on big ships, but the freight list runs in exactly the opposite direction. A five per cent. fee, or even smaller, on a ship operating in the Mediterranean or Eastern trade, might prove liberal, where a considerably higher percentage on a ship plying only to the West Indies would not compensate the operators for their trouble and expense.

The Dutch Ships.

Another thing that is hanging fire in which the shipping industry is much interested, is the problem of putting to work the 300,000 tons or more of Dutch ships now held up by the embargo in American ports. It has been reported that they are to be released on an agreement to work, one-third in the American trade, one-third to the Allies, and one-third to European neutrals, but there is no official confirmation of this. Three of them have been fixed, with the entire approval of both British and American authorities, for American voyages, and there is reason to believe the authorities would be delighted to approve charters of all the others, for the same purpose. It is the owners who are holding back for fear of consequences at home.

Readjustment of Security Prices
The tremendous demand for capital by all the great nations, and the economic conditions created by the war, have made the markets for securities abnormal. Investors who are able to take advantage of present-day prices, can get intrinsically better investments than they could a year ago, and also far better interest returns.

TO PAY HALF BILLION ON LOAN TOMORROW

Second Installment Due and Many Buyers Are Expected to Settle in Full.

ALLOT $1,151,000,000 HERE

New York District Will Receive Nearly Twice as Much as in First Campaign.

The payment of the second installment on the second Liberty Loan, amounting to 18 per cent., will have to be made at the Federal Reserve Bank tomorrow, and inasmuch as between 50 and 60 per cent. of the subscriptions will be paid in full, it is estimated that the bank will receive from $500,000,000 to $700,000,000. At the same time, there will mature $300,000,000 of Treasury certificates of indebtedness, which banks will turn in either for redemption or in payment of the Liberty Loan. Of the total issue of $300,000,000, about $165,000,000 is held by institutions in this district. Instead of transferring the actual cash for the Liberty bonds, the banks have been advised that they may effect the payment by entries on their books, crediting the Federal Government with a deposit of the amount of their payment.

It had been expected that the Federal Reserve Bank would be in a position to make immediate deliveries of the 4 per cent. Liberty bonds, but it was learned yesterday that the supply on hand amounts to less than $200,000,000, and that it would be some considerable time before the required amount of bonds would become available. The bank will not begin making deliveries until Friday in any event, and it seems that even then it will have to make only partial distribution of the bonds applied and paid for.

The Treasury Department has allotted to the New York District $1,151,000,000 of the $1,550,453,450 subscribed for. This is approximately 74 per cent. In the first Liberty Loan campaign, when subscriptions in this district totaled $1,186,788,400, New York's allotment was about $617,000,000; but in that case the allotments for the whole country were $2,000,000,000, while the allotments for the second loan amount to $3,808,766,150. Interest on the 4 per cent. bonds will begin to run tomorrow.

The bond exchange department of the Federal Reserve Bank, at 50 Wall Street, had expected to be prepared to deliver the "conversion 4 per cents."—that is the 3½ per cent. bonds of the first loan that have been converted into 4s—tomorrow, the fifteenth; but the Bureau of Engraving and Printing in Washington has been unable to supply the demand for the certificates, despite the fact that it has been operating day and night. Charles H. Platner, who is in charge of the exchange and conversion department of the bank, said yesterday that from 2,000 to 3,000 applications for conversion were being received daily. Thus far the applications received total between $40,000,000 to $45,000,000. In a great many cases banks and individuals have sent in interim certificates instead of the actual bonds. This has simplified matters somewhat and is a saving to the Government, for it obviates the expense of issuing engraved 3½ bonds which are immediately converted into the 4 per cents.

The Bureau of Engraving and Printing has not yet completed the work on the 3½ per cent. bonds of the first Liberty Loan and it is estimated that about $300,000,000 more of them are needed in this district alone. A great many persons have not yet received their interim certificates, some of the banks refusing to deliver interim certificates and advising their customers that when the definitive bonds are ready they would be delivered.

That part of the bond exchange department which deals with the exchange of interim certificates for the definitive 3½ per cent. bonds has been moved from 50 Wall Street to the fifth floor of 120 Broadway, and all of the available space at 50 Wall Street will be used for the conversion of the 3½ per cents into the 4 per cent. bonds. Applications must be filed before 2 P. M.

It was estimated that nearly 5,000 persons visited the banking quarters at 50 Wall Street yesterday. The offices were packed all day, and many women came down with children and friends, and at times the banking floor took on the appearance of a department store rush at an advertised sale. The crush of women and messenger boys was so great that it was necessary to call into service several guards, who endeavored to keep clear the passageways and to direct inquirers.

Bankers pointed out yesterday that the delay in making deliveries of engraved bonds had caused considerable dissatisfaction on the part of the public, and that the delay and criticism was likely to react on future flotations of Government loans. It was suggested that the Government requisition the large engraving plants of the country and set them all to work on the bonds. The engraving of bonds, it is contended, is a very vital matter in the prosecution of the war, and there is no reason why the engraving should not be dealt with in the same way in which shipping and other businesses whose services are required by the Government are handled.

The new 4 per cent. Liberty Loan bonds, traded in on the Stock Exchange on a cash basis for immediate delivery, declined yesterday to 99.80, a new low record. The sales totaled $759,000, and the quotation showed a drop of 16 points from Monday's close. The 3½ per cent. bonds of the First Liberty Loan closed yesterday at 99.30, an advance of 4 points for the day. The sales amounted to $1,065,000.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

There is apparently a much larger distribution going on in wheat than appears on the surface. Receipts at primary points are increasing rather slowly, but there is a very active milling demand, and the mills are getting a much greater amount of wheat than appears in the daily statistical reports. The mills of the country are grinding on a record basis, but, notwithstanding the tremendous output, which is estimated at about 11,000,000 bbls. per month, the visible supply is gradually increasing, and the Food Administration is pleased with the way the plan of distribution is working out.

CORN.

There appears to be a decided difference of opinion in the corn trade as to the probability of an early accumulation of supplies. In some quarters it is predicted that the movement will increase materially in the very near future, as the Government is believed to be working in co-operation with the railroads to furnish cars. Early the market experienced a decline of ½c to 1¼c under profit taking. Subsequently there was a sharp rally on renewed buying, and final quotations were at about the best, with net gains of ⅝c to 1¼c. The local cash market was very unsettled and irregular, with new yellow corn quoted at $1.65@$2, cost and freight, New York, according to date of shipment, while No. 3 mixed was quoted at $1.52, December shipment.

OATS.

Exporters were credited with taking about a million bushels of oats, and after an early decline with corn prices rallied and closed firm with net gains of ⅝c to 1c. It was thought that the country would be more disposed to sell at the recent advance, but offers were comparatively small. The local cash market was firmer. Standard was quoted at 71¼@71¾c; No. 2 white, 71¾@72¼c; No. 3 white, 70¾@71¼c; No. 4 white, 70¼@70¾c; fancy clipped white, 73@74c; ordinary clipped white, 72@73c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market was only moderately active, but prices were firmer. Hogs advanced 5 to 10 points, and sentiment was influenced by pronounced strength in the cash position. Strong interests were on the buying side and offers were comparatively small. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 19,000; estimate for Wednesday, 28,000; Kansas City received 10,000 and Omaha 8,700 hogs.

COTTONSEED OIL.

Price changes in the market for cottonseed oil were again feverish, closing 35 points net higher to 5 points lower. Total sales were 5,000 barrels. Interest in the futures market is being steadily diminished. The cash position was strong, owing to the pronounced firmness in lard. Crude oil recently has declined from $1.30 to $1.25 per gallon, but this has made little or no impression. Range of prices:

COFFEE.

The coffee market was easier yesterday. Offerings were not particularly heavy or aggressive, but there were few buyers and prices worked about 8 to 13 points under Monday's closing figures, with the close showing a net loss of 8 to 11 points. The local spot market was quiet and unchanged at 7⅞c for Rio 7s and 9½c for Santos 4s. Range of prices:

SUGAR.

There were no changes in sugar prices, which were quoted at 5⅞c for Cubas, cost and freight, equal to 6.90c for centrifugal and 6.02c for molasses. No sales of Cubas were reported, but it was rumored that some full duty sugar was sold to the trade at the equivalent of 6.90c for centrifugal. In refined prices were unchanged at 8.35c for fine granulated, with business still very light. The trade is still waiting the outcome of the meeting of the International Committee and the Cuban planters, which is in session, trying to fix the next Cuban price.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 8,806 packages. Owing to the small proportion of high grades of fresh creamery, prices for such are held fairly steady, but there is a burdensome accumulation of the medium choice grades, and these are offering very freely, with feeling weak. Renovated somewhat lower. Ladles and packing stock are having dragging sale. Creamery, higher than extras, per pound, 45@45½c; extras, (92 score,) 44½c; firsts, (88 to 91 score,) 42@44c; seconds, (83 to 87 score,) 40@41½c; thirds, 38@39c; creamery, unsalted, higher than extras, 45½@47c; extras, 45¼@46c; firsts, 43@45c; seconds, 41@42½c; creamery, held, higher scoring than extras, 43@43½c; extras, 42@42½c; firsts, 40½@41½c; seconds, 39½@40½c; thirds, 38@39c; State, dairy tubs, finest, 43@44c; good to prime, 40½@42½c; common to fair, 35@40c; renovated, extras, 41c; firsts, 39½@40c; lower grades, 35@38c; ladles, current make, firsts, 34@35c; seconds, 33@33½c; lower grades, 32@32½c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 33½c; No. 2, 32¼@33c; lower grades, 32c.

EGGS.—Receipts, 7,984 cases, not including 1,400 cases in transit for export. Fresh eggs continue in light supply. High qualities are very scarce, and the market holds firm, with the tendency still slightly in sellers' favor. Good medium grades are meeting a fair demand, but seriously defective goods are still moving slowly at very irregular prices. Storage eggs meeting only a moderate demand, and the tone is irregular and unsettled. On the current business in regular distributing trade the range of prices is about the same as lately quoted, but some holders feel that stock is not moving fast enough, and to force business concessions below the usual asking price would have to be made. Nearby white eggs continue scarce, and there are very few fancy qualities to be found. High grades command extreme prices. Fresh gathered extras, per dozen, 51@52c; extra firsts, 49@50c; firsts, 46@48c; seconds, 39@45c; thirds and poorer, 34@38c; fresh gathered dirties, No. 1, 33@34c; No. 2 and poorer, 28@32c; fresh gathered checks, good to choice, dry, 31@32c; under grades, 28@30c; refrigerator, special marks, fancy, storage and insurance paid, 35@36c; firsts, storage and insurance paid, 34@34½c; firsts to finest, on dock, 33@35c; seconds, 32½@33½c; lower grades, 28@32c; refrigerator, nearby whites, 41@45c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby western hennery whites, fine to fancy, 75@80c; ordinary to good, 60@72c, gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 58@75c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby whites, pullets, 52@60c; Western and Southern gathered whites, 52@65c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby hennery browns, 52@60c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 44@52c.

THE COTTON MARKET

December Up 6 Points, with Rest of List from 2 to 7 Points Lower.

The cotton market yesterday failed to follow up the promise of Monday's lively session, and instead slipped back into the waiting attitude which characterized it last week. The big traders, who are chiefly intent upon the war situation, with reference both to ocean transport and to European purchasing power, apparently still failed to make up their minds definitely, and as a result the market remained very dull, without noticeable change in prices. Trade interests bought somewhat, as did Liverpool during the morning session, but in no more amount than sufficed to meet offerings, and the close, after only slight fluctuations, found the list from 2 to 7 points lower, except December, which rose 6 points, to 27.99c.

The market opened steady at an advance of 3 points to a decline of 1 point, and sold 4 to 15 points net higher during the early trading. This advance was checked by selling of the later months attributed to Southwestern spot interests and the market turned easier late in the morning under liquidation which came largely from Wall Street sources. An easier turn in the stock market and rumors of unfavorable Russian developments, doubtless helped to unsettle sentiment, but after losing the early advance on December and selling about 9 to 11 points lower on later months, the market steadied on the larger exports for the day and bullish private consumption figures. Rallies were barely maintained, however, and the close was within a few points of the lowest on near months, late deliveries being relatively steady in the late trading on buying by brokers with Southern mill connections.

The sharp early advance in Liverpool was attributed to continental buying orders in an irregular and excited market. According to private cables, some of the more conservative Liverpool houses are refusing to accept orders owing to the unsettled conditions and the ocean freight situation. According to latest reports $10 per hundred has been bid for freight room out of New York for Liverpool, and it was also reported that $10.50 is bid for room from Gulf ports to Havre. Two of the largest ocean freight brokers in the city are said to have orders to book 60,000 bales of room from New York for any port in the United Kingdom at any price, but have been unable to secure space. Exports yesterday were 34,801 bales, making 1,411,909 so far this season. Southern spot markets, as officially reported, were unchanged to 25 points higher.

KENNECOTT BUYS UP UTAH COPPER STOCK

BELIEVED TO HOLD CONTROL

Director Explains Purchase as Due to Expectations of Big Earnings for Some Time.

The Kennecott Copper Corporation has been adding to its holdings of Utah Copper Company shares during the declining movement of the last two months, according to information obtained yesterday in an authoritative source. The Kennecott owned, before the current accumulation began, 600,000 of the Utah company's 1,624,000 shares, of which slightly more than 400,000 shares were acquired last year from the Guggenheim Exploration Company, while approximately 200,000 shares were bought early this year from J. P. Morgan & Co. and other large holders. In the absence of announcement of the extent of recent purchases, it was assumed in the Street that the Kennecott management had taken advantage of the drop in the stock market in order to increase the holdings of Utah shares to a point where the latter company would be controlled.

The purchase of another block as large as the one obtained last March would give the Kennecott practically half of the outstanding Utah Copper shares. At the time of the purchase of the 200,000 shares it was rumored that a merger of the Kennecott, Utah, and Chile properties was being contemplated, but later official statements were made that such a plan was not being considered. The additional purchases of Utah stock were said yesterday to represent only the desire of the Kennecott management to acquire at prices which seemed low an investment which would add substantially to the company's income, as Utah shares are now receiving $14 per year in dividends. The former holdings by themselves brought to the Kennecott treasury about $8,400,000 a year, equal to nearly $3 per share on the outstanding Kennecott stock. The Kennecott dividend is $6 per year.

A Director of the Kennecott company said that additional shares of Utah had been bought because indications pointed toward large earnings for some time to come.

"As for the Kennecott's production," he asserted, "the effect of the recent strike, incited by the I. W. W., has been overcome, and the Alaska mines are working on a normal scale. The output is sold well into next year at 23½ cents a pound. Including its equity in the Utah, Braden, and Nevada Consolidated, the Kennecott on June 30 had current assets of approximately $60,725,000, and current liabilities of $8,583,000, leaving net current assets of $53,142,000, equal to about $19 per share of stock.

"We have about $14,000,000 on hand, representing net cash and copper. There is some uncertainty in regard to war taxes, due to the fact that the amount to be allowed charged from earnings for mine depletion has not been determined. If, as we anticipate, the Government agrees to the deduction of depletion offsets before taxable earnings are figured, the year's income will be satisfactory and next year a better showing should be made. By December the Braden Company's production should be at the rate of 8,000,000 pounds monthly, a large increase over other months due to increased facilities for handling ore."

The Braden company is controlled through ownership by the Kennecott of about 99 per cent. of its stock. The Utah shares bought from the Guggenheim Exploration Company cost approximately $75 a share, the price at which Utah closed on the Stock Exchange yesterday. The 200,000 shares in the second purchase averaged $100.36 per share. Presumably, the stock recently acquired cost between $90 and $75, enabling the company to average down the stock bought last Spring. The company sold $16,000,000 6 per cent. notes to finance the 200,000 shares, of which it was learned yesterday $7,000,000 have been paid off.

BIG WAR PROFITS REVEALED.

Suit Shows Nathan Company Made as High as $9,000,000.

The Nathan Manufacturing Company has earned a profit of between $6,000,000 and $9,000,000 in making war supplies, according to a statement by Samuel Untermyer, its counsel, in asking for a jury trial of a suit of Leigh Best, Vice President of the American Locomotive Company against the Nathan Company and Alfred and Max Nathan and Edward S. Toothe, its officers, to compel them to account for bonuses alleged to aggregate $731,000 and said to have been paid in 1916.

Mr. Untermyer told Justice Goff that the American Locomotive Company got big war orders from the British Government and turned them over to the defendant, who organized the Nathan Manufacturing Company and gave the American Locomotive Company 1,500 of the 5,000 shares. The plaintiff contends that the Nathans and Toothe planned to increase their own profit by the payment of bonuses, and for that reason an accounting is demanded. Mr. Untermyer admitted that the profits had been large, but contended that the defendants did "heroic work" in putting their company on its feet and fulfilling its contracts. The court reserved decision.

SIGN LIGHT ORDER ISSUED.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Fuel Administrator Garfield issued today the official order by which the illuminated signs in New York and elsewhere throughout the country are to be restricted to the hours of 7:45 to 11 P. M., beginning next Thursday. The Administrator explains that the restriction is put into effect to "lessen or prevent the waste of coal" which will be needed, in the judgment of the Fuel Administrator, for the support and maintenance of the army and navy during the war.

The new rule forbids any corporation or individual from burning display lights except during the hours mentioned, except over the entrance to shops or theatres. The order does not apply to the Government or any municipality. Town lights are not affected.

NEW ANTHRACITE RECORD.

Output of 7,110,950 Tons in October the Largest in History.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 13.—The shipments of anthracite for the month of October, as reported to the Anthracite Bureau of Information, amounted to 7,110,950 tons, establishing a new record for monthly shipments and exceeding by 61,913,000 tons the shipments of June, 1917, which had been the greatest of any month in the history of the industry.

The total shipments for the first ten months of 1917 amount to 64,889,047 tons, an increase over the same period in 1916 of 9,088,427 tons.

Re-elect Brooklyn Union Gas Board

The retiring Directors of the Brooklyn Union Gas Company were re-elected yesterday afternoon at the annual meeting of the stockholders. The company's report showed gross receipts for the first nine months of 1917 of $11,595,836, giving net earnings of $2,158,338, which after deducting interest payments, gives 7.72 per cent. on the stock outstanding.

$25,000,000 IN TAXES DEMANDED BY STATE

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 13.—The State, through the office of Attorney General Lewis, will institute proceedings immediately to collect special franchise taxes in New York City, some of which have been unpaid for more than fifteen years. The Attorney General, with the approval of Governor Whitman, today appointed Martin Saxe, former Chairman of the State Tax Commission, as special counsel to prosecute the litigation.

Taxes which depended on the determination of 256 proceedings now pending amount to more than $25,000,000 on assessed valuations of more than $1,350,000,000, Attorney General Lewis said. He explained that although the assessments were made by the State Tax Commission, the collection of the taxes had been left to the Corporation Counsel of New York City. The Corporation Counsel, according to Attorney General Lewis, had not the necessary office force for the work, and that was the reason for the action by the State.

"The cases pending," Mr. Lewis said, "affect every taxpayer in the city. To the extent that the corporations assessed are successful in reducing these assessments, an additional burden will be cast upon the property owner. Of the 256 pending actions, 57 per cent. are dormant. No apparent attempt has been made to dispose of the same, involving $16,000,000 in taxes. In eleven cases settlements have been agreed upon which will result in the payment of about $3,000,000 when the adjustments receive the formal confirmation of the Mayor and the Controller respectively."

The Attorney General said that in 1915 Mayor Mitchel, Mr. Saxe, and the then Attorney General, Egburt E. Woodbury, discussed the situation with representatives of the offices of the Controller and Corporation Counsel. At that time Mr. Woodbury said he did not want to interfere with the city's prerogative of protecting its interests, but was ready to give the fullest co-operation.

"After two years' trial of the city's choice of procedure," Mr. Lewis said, "it is apparent that not only must more forceful measures be taken at once, but the services of experienced specialists in this litigation must be retained to safeguard the interests of the people and save just taxes from being frittered away by the special pleading of astute corporation attorneys."

Limits Foreign Remittances.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Because of the continued abnormally high rates of exchange on Norway, Sweden, Denmark, the Netherlands, and Switzerland, the Post Office Department today instructed Postmasters not to issue to one remitter money orders payable in these countries in excess of $50 for any one calendar month. The rule was made necessary, the deparment announced, to protect the postal revenues.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Prices on the Consolidated Stock Exchange opened irregularly, changed from the preceding finals, and, while the movements throughout the session were somewhat confused, the close showed almost uniform net declines. The tone of the market at the end of the day was weak.

FORESEE SUCCESS OF WAR THRIFT CARDS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Secretary McAdoo and Frank A. Vanderlip discussed in the National Press Club tonight before bankers and men of affairs the two plans devised by the Government to float war loans through contributions by the masses. The system proposed makes it possible for those of the smallest income to aid the Government in the conduct of the war and at the same time encourages thrift, as 5 per cent. interest attaches to the two war savings plans.

"These Government obligations take two forms," said Mr. McAdoo. "One is a certificate bearing twenty spaces, to each one of which may be affixed a Government stamp costing about $4.12 each. These stamps will increase in value at the rate of 4 per cent. interest per annum, compounded, so at their maturity, at the end of five years, they will be worth $5 each. Twenty of these stamps pasted upon a war savings certificate will represent a cost of approximately $82.40. At the end of five years the Government will redeem them and pay in cash the sum of $100.

"The second form is United States Thrift Cards, and these are based upon the same principle as the War Savings Certificates, except that amounts as small as 25 cents may be invested in stamps and pasted in the thrift cards. When the requisite amount of twenty-five-cent stamps have been bought they may be converted into a five-dollar war savings certificate.

"These two simple methods put within reach of every class of the American people, however small their means, the opportunity of saving their money, however small the amounts, and lending it to their own Government at 4 per cent. per annum, interest compounded, with the right on their part to have their certificates cashed by the Government at any time at a sum in excess of the actual cost of the stamps they have bought.

"I cannot emphasize too strongly the wonderful opportunity now offered to all Americans to help the nation through this war savings plan. If you could have accompanied me on the two speaking tours I have recently made in behalf of the first and second Liberty loans, if you could have talked with the persons with whom I have talked, and if you could have read the hundreds of letters I have received since the first Liberty Loan was offered, you would be impressed with the overwhelming importance of this newest, patriotic governmental saving plan."

Mr. Vanderlip, who heads the War Savings Committee, has worked out the plans to a nicety and is now ready to float the small savings loans. He followed Mr. McAdoo and spoke briefly as to the merit of the plans, saying:

"Entirely aside from the patriotic element, the investment feature of the new war savings plan appeals strongly to me. How any one, even though he were not desirous of aiding his country—if we might conceive of such a person at this time—could refuse to embrace this unusual opportunity for investment is beyond my comprehension.

"The first consideration in all investments, of course, is their safety. Could anything be safer than something with the entire wealth of the United States behind it? The second consideration is the return on the investment. Is not $17.60 for the loan of $82.40 for five years attractive enough for any one? Finally, one always must consider his ability to convert an investment into cash on short notice. What more liberal arrangement than the one offered by this plan—return upon ten days' notice of the investment, plus interest—could be asked?

"It does not require a banker or a shrewd financier to recognize the advantages of this war savings plan. Any man, woman, or child who has had the slightest buying experience, even if it is no more than trading at the corner grocery, can see them as readily as the keenest business man. There is not the slightest doubt that this campaign for war savings will be an overwhelming success."

Print Paper Conference Ends.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—Representatives of the Federal Trade Commission, and of the Canadian Government today completed their conference, which is expected to result in a uniform system of determining costs to regulate to some extent the differences in prices of print paper on the two sides of the border. Canada's system of price-fixing by one man was explained to the trade commission.

SALE OF MEDICINAL ALCOHOL

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—The office of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue today announced decisions affecting the taxation of distilled liquors. One of general importance permits pharmacists to sell small quantities of nonbeverage alcohol without a physician's prescription to persons who do not hold a permit. The text follows:

Hereafter, pharmacists who hold permits and have given bond will be permitted to sell nonbeverage alcohol without a physician's prescription to persons who do not hold permits and who have not given bonds, in quantities not exceeding one pint, but not in advance of orders, provided they first medicate the same in accordance with any one of the formulae recited below:

2. Formaldehyde 1 part, alcohol 250 parts.
3. Bichloride of mercury 1 part, alcohol 2,000 parts.
4. Bichloride of mercury 0.8 gram, hydrochloric acid 60 c.c., alcohol 640 c. c., water 300 c. c.
5. Bichloride of mercury 1½ grains, hydrochloric acid 2 drams, alcohol 4 ounces.
6. Formaldehyde 2 parts, glycerin 2 parts, alcohol 96 parts.
7. Carbolic acid 1 dram, tannic acid 1 dram, alcohol 1 pint, water 1 pint.
8. Alum ⅛ ounce, formaldehyde 2 drams, camphor 1 ounce, alcohol and water, each 1 pint.
9. Lysol 1 part, alcohol 99 parts.
10. Liquor cresolis, comp. 10 c.c., alcohol 1,000 c. c. The container of such alcohol will bear a "poison" label.

Any abuse of these privileges will result in recall of the pharmacist's permit and its cancellation.

It will be understood that a pharmacist is in no sense a denaturer of alcohol, nor are the agents prescribed above regarded as satisfactory for the denaturation of alcohol in bulk quantities. Persons permitted to denature alcohol in bulk quantities are proprietors of distilleries having denatured bonded warehouses on their distillery premises, proprietors of central denaturing bonded warehouses, and proprietors of industrial distilleries. All persons purchasing nonbeverage alcohol for use in manufacturing processes must obtain permit.

Alcohol brought to the United States from Porto Rico may be removed free of tax for denaturation. Such alcohol of not less than 180 degrees proof may be transferred to any central denaturing bonded warehouse, free of tax, upon the filing of a bond with the Collector of Internal Revenue of the district in which such warehouse is located.

Additional bonds are to be required of distillers if bonds already furnished do not adequately protect the interests of the Government under the new war tax law. In all cases in which such existing bonds do not meet the requirements of the statute, or adequately protect the interests of the Government, new bonds must be furnished.

If the penal sum of the bond already furnished by a distiller is not sufficient in amount to meet the requirements of existing law, which imposes a tax at the rate of $3.20 per gallon, a new bond must be furnished to meet these requirements.

TO AID IN FIXING ZINC PRICE.

Producers Organize Committee to Work with War Board.

Producers of zinc organized a committee yesterday to co-operate with the War Industries Board in fixing a basis for establishing prices for the various grades of the product. The committee was formed following a consultation on Monday between the zinc men and Eugene Meyer, Jr., who has charge of purchases of non-ferrous metals for the Government. The members are Edgar Palmer of the New Jersey Zinc Company, Chairman; Charles T. Orr, Cornelius F. Kelly, C. M. Loeb, Sidney J. Jennings, N. Bruce McKelvie, Charles F. Baker, Walker W. Vick, R. A. Cowles, A. P. Cobb, E. W. Furst, S. M. Evans, J. D. Lang, and S. S. Tuthill, all representing prominent producing and marketing companies.

The committee is expected to hold frequent meetings until the necessary data for study by the War Industries Board have been gotten together. A method for establishing prices for zinc ore is also to be studied and recommended to the Washington authorities.

AMERICAN LINSEED DIVIDEND

Directors of the American Linseed Company declared yesterday a dividend of 7 per cent. on the preferred stock, payable in quarterly installments of 1¾ per cent. Last year the company paid dividends, in two installments, amounting to 3 per cent.

The annual report of the company for the year ended Sept. 30, made public yesterday, shows a net income of $1,764,429, compared with $1,476,817 last year, which is equivalent to $10.55 a share on the $16,723,648 preferred stock outstanding, as against $8.83 a share in 1916.

President R. H. Adams in his report to stockholders says that the company had no war orders and that its business had not suffered by reason of restrictions in exports. "The high prices of the products manufactured by us," he said, "have been due to short crops both in the Argentine Republic and the United States. The present crop in this country is the smallest in the last twenty years, but the crop in Canada is of normal size, and the crop of Argentina about to be harvested is predicted to be equal to the largest ever grown, so that with the decreased demand for manufactured products your management feels that ample supplies can be obtained for the coming year."

President Adams calls attention to the fact that the company is now entirely self-sustaining, and that for the first time in its history the interest account is a profit instead of an expense item.

COTTON OIL PROFITS LESS.

The report of the American Cotton Oil Company for the year ended Aug. 31, which was issued yesterday, shows a considerable falling off in earnings compared with the previous year. Net profits amounted to $2,034,042, as against $2,524,292 in 1916. Surplus after payment of interest charges was $1,534,042, which is equivalent to $4.55 a share on $20,237,100 of common stock outstanding. Last year's surplus amounted to $2,028,459, or $7.01 a share. The decrease in earnings, according to the company, has been due to additions and betterments to property which were charged to operating expenses.

President Joseph D. Lewis, in a statement to stockholders, said that the sum of $553,763 had been expended for maintenance of properties, and that the reserve for depreciation and replacements had been increased by $18,939. Mr. Lewis says that in the last year cottonseed reached the highest price known in the history of the industry, and that it was reflected in the price of cotton oil. Owing to war conditions, the company's export business in oil and other products showed a reduction compared with previous years.

Estate Management

is a very real business—not a family obligation. That is the outstanding reason why the Brooklyn Trust Company, with over fifty years' experience, should be selected.

Its service may be secured in two ways:

By private agreement whereby the owner, during life, is relieved of constant care and responsibility; or

By will whereby the Company succeeds to the management upon the owner's death.

Memorial Tablet on Bridge at Broadway and 230th Street

In the first war for liberty, the American Revolution, Kingsbridge was No Man's Land. The fighting was for the possession of the bridge and its approaches, which to-day are at Broadway, 230th and 231st Streets and Kingsbridge Avenue.

There is still to be seen here the Site of the Old Bridge; the Wading Place; the Old Tavern; the Bloody Well; Fort St. Charles; Paperinenman Rock; Site of Fort Independence; Site of the Implacement of the British Guns and other interesting relics.

Those interested in historical matters are advised to see them during the next two weeks, as they will soon disappear, owing to the decree of the Supreme Court ordering the sale of the Estate of Joseph Godwin, which consists of two hundred and thirty-one lots at Broadway, 230th, 231st Streets and Kingsbridge Avenue. The sale will take place at the Real Estate Exchange, No. 14 Vesey Street, Tuesday, November 27th, 1917. The lots will be sold for whatever they will bring without reservation or protection of any kind.

Owing to the severe depression in real estate it is almost certain they will bring but a very small percentage of their actual value. Maps and particulars may be obtained from J. Clarence Davies, 149th Street and 3d Avenue, and Joseph P. Day, 31 Nassau Street, the agents and auctioneers.

HYLAN BOARD SEEKS TO HALT A CONTRACT

Mayor-Elect and Conferees Object to $12,000,000 Schoharie Water Project.

BECAUSE OF 'WAR ECONOMY'

Formal Request for Delay in Award Made to the Board of Water Supply.

Mayor-elect John F. Hylan and the men elected with him to positions giving them votes on the next Board of Estimate and Apportionment, after a conference yesterday sent a letter to the Board of Water Supply demanding that a recently executed $12,000,000 contract, awarded in connection with the proposed tapping of the Schoharie watershed for an additional supply of drinking water for New York City, be held up. The cost of the Schoharie water project has been estimated at approximately $25,000,000.

After the conference it was announced that there would be other similar ones in the future.

"We propose to watch the doings of the present board until midnight on Dec. 31," said Sheriff Alfred E. Smith, President-elect of the Aldermanic Board, who did the talking for the conferees.

There were other matters that came up for discussion at the conference. One of these was the proposal to acquire a site for a new public school on property bordered by Stoddard Place, Ludlow Place, Sullivan and Montgomery Streets in Brooklyn. The property is owned by the Associated Realty Improvement Company, which is said to be a subsidiary concern of the Realty Associates, in which William H. Reynolds, William M. Greve, and Frank Bailey of Rockaway Park fame are financially interested. William P. Rae, a former appraiser of property for the Controller's office and the Realty Associates, is President of the Associated Realty Improvement Company.

It was announced after the meeting that Edward Riegelmann, President-elect of the Borough of Brooklyn, would appear before the Board of Estimate at its meeting on Friday to protest against the acquisition of the site. The matter was before the board at its meeting last week, and went over for a week on motion made by Mayor Mitchel himself.

Cite War Conditions in Opposition.

The Board of Water Supply, which is composed of Charles Strauss, Charles M. Chadwick, and John F. Galvin, has broad powers under the statute creating it. There is nothing to prevent the board from going on with the work of the Schoharie watershed unless an injunction should intervene. The tapping of the Schoharie watershed was provided for by legislation enacted at last year's session of the Legislature. On the other hand, should the board determine to hold up the contract, this may be done without any financial loss to the city, under the law of that year.

Here is the letter sent by Judge Hylan and his associates to the members of the Board of Water Supply:

> Gentlemen: On Nov. 9 your board executed a contract with the Degnon Contracting Company for the construction of the Shandankan Tunnel, connecting the Schoharie watershed with the Catskill Aqueduct. The contract price was $12,138,738. The contract contains a provision that the contractor shall begin work ten days after the serving of a notice by your board instructing him to begin work. The contract also contains a provision by which the board reserves the right to suspend the whole or any part of the work without compensation to the contractor for such suspension. The period within which the contract must be completed after the giving of the notice is seven years.
>
> This contract was awarded upon the assumption that the city will need the new water supply by the time the work is completed, and its conclusion is based upon the further assumption that the per capita consumption of New York City is 110 gallons of water per day, and that the increase in population will be at the uniform rate of 157,227 per annum.
>
> In view of the conditions resulting from the prosecution of the war and their effect upon the price of labor and material and the derangement of industry generally, and the serious strain upon the finances of the whole country by the expenditures required for the war, it seems to us that unless there is some overwhelming necessity that requires the prosecution of this construction work on the Shanandakin Tunnel at the present time, that it should not now proceed.
>
> In order to give the incoming Board of Estimate and Apportionment an opportunity to look into the matter and make such recommendations or take such actions as a full investigation require, we hereby request that your board refrain from serving the notice upon the contractor provided for by Article VI. of the contract, and that your board exercise the right to suspend the whole of the work under the contract pursuant to provision VII. of the contract for at least ninety days, so that the new Board of Estimate may be properly advised and discharge whatever responsibilities it may have to the City of New York.
>
> Very truly yours,
>

> CHARLES L. CRAIG,
> ALFRED E. SMITH.

Fight on Brooklyn School Site.

With regard to the proposed acquisition of the Brooklyn school site Judge Hylan said after the meeting that the protest was being made on the ground that on the property adjoining the site was a stone crusher that was being operated under a lease that had at least five more years to run and also on the ground that the property in the vicinity was unimproved and that there was a site better suited for school purposes in the immediate neighborhood. The proposed site is opposite Ebbet's baseball field.

Sheriff Smith said that one of the matters considered at the meeting was a report that the Mitchel Board of Estimate was contemplating an increase in the number of City Magistrates. The proposed new Magistrates, it was inferred by Judge Hylan and his associates, would be apointed before the present city administration went out of office.

"Judge Hylan believes that we have a sufficient number of Magistrates now, and that the inferior courts, generally speaking, are amply manned," said Mr. Smith.

The conferees also discussed what Sheriff Smith declared was "merely a rumor" to the effect that the Dock Department was preparing to lease to the New York Central at an annual rental below what is regared as a proper estimate somepiers adjoining West Thirty-fourth Street, which were included in a grant that was to be made to the railroad company in the event that the contract for the so-called Riverside improvement had been executed. A protest will be entered against this by President Dowling of the Aldermanic board, who is a member of the present Board of Estimate.

"We also discussed and concluded that a protest should be entered against a proposal made by the Dock Board for the exchange of some land situated on Coney Island Creek and owned by the Hargrave Improvement Company for property owned by the city in the vicinity," said Sheriff Smith. "It appears from an investigation we have made that the title to a wedge of land constituting part of the property of the Hargrave Company is clouded, while the title of the city's property to be given in exchange is clear and free under decisions of the courts. On part of the city's property the company has erected bungalows for which the city now receives an annual rental. It is just like making the city a present of something that already belongs to the city with something added, the ownership of which is not clear, in return for property to which the city has an unquestioned title, and we cannot see it."

Business Men's League to Aid.

The meeting was held in Judge Hylan's office at the headquarters of the Business Men's League, 50 East Forty-second Street. Mayor-elect Hylan, Controller-elect Charles L. Craig, Alfred E. Smith, President-elect of the Aldermanic Board, and Frank L. Dowling, President of the Board of Aldermen, attended, while the President-elect of the Borough of Richmond was represented by the Borough Commissioner of Public Works. The only absentees of prospective Board of Estimate members were Henry Bruckner, President-elect of the Bronx, and Borough President of Queens, Maurice E. Connolly.

At a special meeting of the Business Men's League, which first designated Judge Hylan as a Mayoralty nominee Grover A. Whalen, who directed the league's campaign on behalf of Judge Hylan, was elected Chairman, succeeding Joseph Yeaka, who at his own request was permitted to retire. John F. Sinnott, Judge Hylan's secretary, was elected Secretary of the league, and George M. Adrian was re-elected Treasurer. Preston P. Lynn, General Manager for John Wanamaker, will remain at the head of its Executive Committee.

"The Business Men's League means to take a practical part in civic affairs from now on. We shall continue to be associated with Judge Hylan and believe we may be able to reflect the attitude of the business community on questions affecting the interests of the business men of New York," said Chairman Whalen. "We are not ready yet to make public any detailed plans of how this may be worked out, but we are confident that many important questions of policy will arise in which the judgment of practical business men may be of value. Mayor-elect Hylan is in hearty accord with our aims and purposes."

SEES NO TAMMANY VICTORY.

People Will Insist on High Standards, Says W. J. Schieffelin.

William Jay Schieffelin, Chairman of the Citizens Union, declared yesterday that the Mayoralty election was not a Tammany victory, and it did not mean that the people wished to revert to the Tammany standard of government. He asserted that the elevtion of Hylan did not mean that the people of New York would countenance a lowering of the present standards. Mr. Schieffelin disagreed with Josepuh M. Price i urging the formation of a City Party.

"The friends of good government have no cause to be disheartened at the outcome of the recent election," he said. It is a fact, however, that the good work done by the present administration was disregarded by thousands of voters who had received a false impression that the present city officials have not been in sympathy with the everyday needs and problems of the masses."

45,000 SEEK INSURANCE.

Most Soldiers and Sailors Taking Full $10,000 Policy.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.—More than 45,000 soldiers and sailors have applied for Government life insurance aggregating nearly $400,000,000, the Treasury's War Risk Insurance Bureau announced tonight. The average amount sought is between $8,000 and $9,000, indicating that most of the men are applying for the maximum policies of $10,000.

PACIFIST IS SWAMPED IN NEWARK ELECTION

Returns of the election held yesterday at Newark for five Commissioners under the commission form of government adopted five weeks ago, at midnight indicated that the following were the successful candidates:

Although returns were slow in coming in, these five candidates appeared to lead the field by a substantial vote. There were eighty candidates in the field. The five winners probably will receive about 15,000 votes apiece. It was estimated that 40,000 votes were cast.

The early returns indicated that the spectacular campaign on pacifist and pro-German lines conducted by Benedict Prieth fell flat. Prieth, who has been indicted on thirty counts for articles alleged to be treasonable printed in the New Jersey Freie Zeitung, of which he is editor, was released on bail and made an aggressive campaign among the German-American societies of Newark, four of which indorsed his candidacy.

He ran well in the Twelfth, Fourteenth, and Sixteenth Wards, which a considerable so-called German-American vote. He also ran well in the Third District, which has a large socialistic vote. His total vote, however, according to indications, will be in the neighborhood of 2,000 or 3,000.

The five Socialist candidates had been sanguine about their chances of victory because of the number of candidates in the field. The five Socialist candidates, according to returns, did not receive more than 5,000 votes apiece, or about one-third the vote polled by the winning candidates.

QUESTIONS ISHII AGREEMENT

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Nov. 13.—Commenting on the American-Japanese agreement, the Vossische Zeitung says it learns from Berne why the announcement by the Japanese Ambassador at Washington regarding the agreement made Nov. 2 was so "vague and indefinite." The paper asserts that the reason lay in the fact that the negotiations concerned primarily an exchange of steel plates against tonnage.

"The explanations by Professor Iyenaga, the chief Japanese propagandist in America," it says, "clearly showed that in the negotiations, which lasted for weeks, the question of the German possessions in East Africa and also of Japanese immigration on the Pacific Coast were strenuously avoided."

From American papers, says the Vossische Zeitung, it appears that American statesmen were deathly afraid to embark on a discussion of this nature, and that from semi-official statements in certain American papers which were issued by the American State Department as well as by the Japanese mission, it was silently agreed not to touch on this subject.

"The agreement of Nov. 2," it adds, "is limited to a friendly discussion of the policy of the open door in China and of the interests of both sides in the Far East. It definitely decides only the abolition of the export prohibition on steel plates, for which Japan is to give tonnage."

The paper adds that from this it is gathered that the American-Japanese arrangement "has by no means the character of an agreement on international policy, which aspect Washington has endeavored to give it, although the Lansing statement was intended to give the impression to the press that this agreement was to settle finally and forever America's Eastern problems."

BLOOMINGTON, Ind., Nov. 13.—Professor W. E. Zeuch, who came in September from Clark University to join the Economics Department of Indiana University, resigned today from the Faculty under fire because of a letter written to the editor of the Hopkinton (Iowa) Leader defending the atrocities of the German Army on the ground that these crimes were common in the armies of all wars.

". . . . . But the town's loss was greater than figures can cover, for it entailed the destruction of books and documents of the Huguenot Association, records of the early history of the French settlement. Professional men of the town also lost libraries and documents. In some cases they risked their lives in attempts to save their possessions. The Huguenot Library which was burned had been insured for $20,000, but the sentimental loss to the community cannot be paid. The documents included old records of the little French Protestant settlement and its growth from early Colonial days. Another loss of community importance was in the destruction of surveys and maps of New Rochelle, Larchmont and Pelham. They belonged to Winfield B. Hayes."

They May Have Been Your Business Records

DOESN'T this timely lesson in Safety First "ring home"? Put your business office in the place of the Huguenot Library. Suppose this loss was your loss—not a sentimental one, to be sure, but a very real one, to be reckoned in terms of records gone, production at a standstill, expenses going on with no profits coming in, and all the other financial worry that goes with a fire disaster when no duplicate records exist!

It's better to be safe to-day than sorry to-morrow. A man with the responsibility of a business on his hands should store duplicate records away from his place of business. Foresight is cheaper than hindsight.
